DOINGS IN CONGRESS

By William Lemke
(N. D. Farmers Union Herald)

Thanks and congratulations to the American people—because of whose protest and indignation—the World Court was repudiated by the United States Senate. Just why this administration, or any other administration, should want to mix us up with foreign hatred and foreign politius—into foreign intrigue—into foreign corrosion and diplomatic corruption, is hard to understand. The only explanation is that here in Washington we are getting altogether too internationally minded.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Hull, is now busy trading away Amerira agricultural markets to foreign nations, so that our international manufacturers and international bankers can make a profit by trading off our American markets to foreigners. Of course the Chase National Bank and the National Bank of New York, as well as other international bankers and manufacturers, are glad to sell the American farmer to foreign nations, in order to make their Cuban sugar bonds safe, and to provide a foreign market for their manufactured products, such as automobiles, steel, etc.

Under the tariff act passed in the last session, our domestic agricultural markets are being traded away for foreign concessions These concessions are generally in favor of the international manufacturers and international bankers. The special trade treaty just concluded with Cuba gives Cuba the right to export sugar and potatoes, and other agricultural products into the United States, and in exchange the Cubans permit automobiles and other manufactured articles to be imported into Cuba. Just now millions of pounds of Cuban potatoes are sold in New York and other coast cities, in competition with our Red River Valley Potatoes, as well as those of the State of Maine and other states.

Under this tariff act, in cooperation with the Agricultural Adjustment Act, the southern cane and the northern beet sugar producers are limited in their production to 25 percent of the sugar we American people consume, and foreigners are allowed to import 75 per cent. Under this same idiotic policy, the Secretary of Agriculture cut the throats of 6,000,000 little pigs, and at the same time we imported 43,000,000 pounds of corned beef from South America alone. Under this same policy we restricted the farmers from producing rye, and imported millions of bushels from Poland. Under this same policy we restricted our farmers from producing wheat, and imported it from Canada. The time has arrived when the American people should condemn such a dastardly policy. The time has come when the American people should portect their own standard of living, and their own people. They should eat, drink and wear American produced products as far as possible. This is the American doctrine. Why should we give away our domestic markets in order to make foreign markets secure for the international bankers and international manufacturers?

But just now we are interested in getting our petition out to discharge the committee, and bring the Frazier-Lemke Refinance bill up on the floor of the House for discussion and passage. Under the rule we will have to wait until the 18th of February. Then the battle will be on in dead earnest. This bill, as you know, provides that the government shall refinance existing farm indebtedness at 1 1-2 per cent interest, and 1 1-2 per cent principal on the amortization plan, not by issuing bonds, but by issuing Federal Reserve notes, secured by first mortgages on farms. May I urge all who read this article to write to their Senator and Representative in Congress, suggesting that they support the Frazier-Lemke Refinance Bill, and assist in every way posible to bring about its passage. Your members in Congress are entitled to know your position, and I am sure they will appreciate it.

PARENT-TEACHERS' MEET AT HIGH SCHOOL MARCH 4

The meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Ass'n will be held Monday night, March 4th, at the High School Assembly. Professor E. W. Beck of the Bemidji State Teachers' College, will be the main speaker of the evening; his topic will be "Little Man, Where Are You Going?"

Other features on the program will be a violin duet by J. Larson and G. Overland, a group of songs by a men's sextet; lunch will be served by a group of fathers with O. C. Paulson as chairman of the committee.

MAIN HUNTING REPORTS

If you have neglected to return cards with report of game taken in 1934 open hunting season, do so at once, is the advice of Erling Swenson, director of the Division of Game and Fish. Failure to make return may bar licenses for hunting this coming fall, Mr. Swenson warned.

NO OPEN '35 MUSKRAT SEASON

Action taken recently by the Minnesota Conservation Commission stipulated a closed season on muskrats in all counties of the state for the year 1935. It was pointed out that the severe drouth has threatened the brood stock of muskrats and that an open season would seriously deplete the muskrat population of the state.

BRITISH LABOR WINS AS CONFUSED TORIES SPLIT

LIVERPOOL, England— Labor's candidate, J. J. Cleary, was returned to Parliament from the Wavertree constituency by a plurality of almost two thousand votes. At the general election in 1931 the Conservative candidate won by a majority of more than twenty thousand.

The Conservative forces were split in this election by the independent candinacy of Randolph Churchill, i"ndependent" conservative. The constituency is normally Conservative.

"What's this big item on your expense account?"

"Oh, that's my hotel bill."

"Well, don't buy any more hotels."

"Are you positive that the defendant was drunk?" asked the judge.

"No doubt," growled the officer.

"Why are you so certain?"

"Well," replied the officer, "I saw him put a penny in the patrol box on Fourth street, then look up at the clock on the Presbyterian church, and shout: 'Gawd, I've lost fourteen pounds!'"

Let Our Motto Be

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD

Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

RICKETS

Many persons have an idea that rickets is a disease affecting young children of impoverished parents only. But this is not true. Rickets is no respecter of wealth. You have but to walk in various sections of a city to notice that there are about as many evidences of bow legs, knockknees bandy legs and arms, pigeon chests and square topped heads among the older persons in the well-to-do sections as there are in the poorer sections.

This is because when these persons were children, doctors did not know so much about rickets as we do today. And it is to be hoped that no child within the reach of modern medical knowledge will ever have to endure the physical handicap caused by this disease.

The only prevention and the only cure for rickets is an adequate supply of vitamin D. Sunshine is a great source of this important vitamin.

It is for this reason that sun suits are ideal clothing for small children whenever the temperature permits, and why it is good even in zero weather for a child to have its nap on a sunny porch—the child of course to be kept warm, and its face protected from the direct glare of the sun. Ultra violet light, too is a source of Vitamin D, but, except in a few instances, this is expensive and impractical.

The other great source of Vitamin D is in a very limited list of foods. The oil from fish liver leads—cod liver oil is the one with which we are most familiar; next comes egg yolk; and there is some Vitamin D in butter fat, and just a trace of it in mother's milk.

These foods also contain Vitamin A, a very important health promoting and general anti-infective vitamin.

It might be interesting to note here that rickets first manifested itself in Europe in the Sixteenth century when people were more and more attracted to living in cities, with their dark houses and dark, narrow streets, and when people generally were living more of an indoor life, and babies were kept more and more in the house.

In this connection it might be interesting also to note an old folk remedy that is still used in England and Ireland. Dr. Langdon Porter, child specialist, tells of visiting the rural districts of England and Ireland and finding a concoction there that the grandmother in the family puts up every autumn for the grandchildren. She fills a jar with whole raw eggs and then covers it with sour wine. When the calcium in the shells is dissolved, she stirs the mixture vigorously, strains out the membrane of the egg, and then feeds a spoonful of the concoction to the children once or twice a day throughout the winter.

Modern science approves this remedy. There is calcium in the egg shell, vitamins in the egg yolk, and the acid of the wine acts as a preservative.

Since milk is so generally a good food, health authorities in this country are now experimenting with four methods of increasing Vitamin D in milk to the point where milk so treated will have a sufficient amount of this vitamin to prevent rickets. The first, is to treat yeast with ultra-violet light, which increases the amount of Vitamin D several hundred times. This activated yeast is fed to dairy cattle, and they in turn secrete in the milk enough Vitamin D for it to be antirachitic. Visitors to the 1934 Century of Progress saw a demonstration of this Vitamin D milk in a dairy herd at the south end of the grounds.

A second method is to expose the dairy cows themselves to ultraviolet light so that they build up their own Vitamin D, and give milk with a higher percentage of this important vitamin. A third method is to treat the milk itself with ultraviolet light, and a fourth method is to add to the milk in concentrated form a tasteless cod-liver oil.

It is difficult to say as yet which of these methods will prove the best, and it will be interesting to watch their development. All of them, necessarily but unfortunately, add to the cost of the milk.

But unless you can get this vitamin D milk, give your children a teaspoonful of cod liver oil and see that they are out every sunlight day. Older children may have the yolk of an egg. Children with rickets not only have softening of the bones but they are more liable to pneumonia and other diseases.

These measures should be for the dark months, beginning with October or November and through April.

Rickets occur most frequently during the second half of the first year of life and the first half of the second year.

FLAT REJECTION IS THE SOCIALIST ANSWER TO COMMUNIST UNITY BID

Declares That the Communists are Insincere or Irresponsible Help

Chicago—Terming the communists "uncertain allies" offering "questionable support," the organization committee of the Scoialist party has refused an invitation to joint action in automobile unions ertended by the Communist party.

"The organization committee of the national executive committee meeting in Milwaukee Feb. 11, had before it your letter of Feb. 7 in which you state:

"We propose to you to instruct all socialist party members in the auto and steel industries to come together with the Communists in a united effort to build the Auto Workers' Union and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers into powerful unions capable to meet the situation."

"Insincere or Irresponsible"

"Your proposal is rejected. Our members in the steel industry are hard at work trying to build the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers into militant and mighty union, which can not only bring the steel bosses to terms but which can also take a leading role in establishing a labor government in the United States. We observe that the Communist party is now supporting the A. A. of I. S. and T. W., but recall that you were very reently fighting it tooth and nail through a dual organization known as the Steel and Metal Workers' Industrial Union, and that you even characterized the entire American Federation of Labor as little better than a company union.

"Your shift in policy is so sudden that we are compelled to believe that either you are insincere in your present line, or were recklessly irresponsible in your earlier estimate of trade union problems. Whichever may be the case, members of the Socialist party do not wish to be associated with such uncertain allies.

Won't Back Dual Union

"Our suspicion of your labor responsibility is further increased by your request that we join with you in building up the Auto Workers' Union. We thought that even the Communist party had abandoned this bankrupt dual organization which it had so long dominated. We read in the Daily Worker of December 25 that this union had been dissolved and that the former members had been advised to join the United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated as federal labor unions with the American Federation of Labor. We concluded that this was perhaps one story in the Daily Worker which was accurate.

"If, however, this story was untrue, or if the Communist party has turned another of its frequent somersaults and seeks to revive the Auto Workers' Union, members of the Socialist party will have nothing to do with it. We shall continue to build up the United Automobile Workers of America.

The past tactics of the Communist party have convinced us that we can better serve the working class and aid them in achieving Socialism by continuing our struggle without the questionable support you offer."

MARCH IS THE MONTH..

It's the beginning of a vital new season, the commencement of another month of progress for Thief River Falls and community.

During the year that has just passed everyone realized and appreciated the fact that Thief River Falls possesses shopping facilities complete enough to satisfy every desire. Nothing that you would have is beyond your reach. Thief River Falls merchants, through untiring effort, have made this a stopping point for the completest, most modern selection of the world's goods. And they have done something else, they have brought all of the new fashions, automobiles, the purest foods and the best general merchandise right here to you for an advance Spring display. Planned buying, careful selection in the face of a rapidly rising market, and the wonders of modern transportation have combined to bring the freshest, newest merchandise to you at the earliest possible moment and, what is more important, at the most economical prices. New York, Chicago and St. Louis have contributed their wares. A great deal of gratitude is due the merchants of Thief River Falls for keeping the community supplied with the most up to date merchandise at all times of the year.

But they insist and keep on insisting that not all of the thanks are due to them. The business houses on this page, representative of Thief River Falls' best, say that it is you who have made this possible. By doing all of your buying here you have made such enterprise a more simple task and have graciously acknowledged the efforts that have been spent in your behalf.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

Elliott did not speak, but watched Able as he fumbled in his pocket for a sketch map. Able paused for a moment, and then continued:

"Come over by the window. Now, here's the lay-out,"—spreading the map on the sill. "Here's the railroad, main line. This is Hoot Owl siding with our mill. It's a long, narrow strip, you see; seventy-six forties uncut. Four miles of slash to north of the mill. Our railroad goes up through the chopping, so. We've an old coffee-pot of twenty-ton rod engine and freight cars, all more or less ready for junk. Here's the camp now and we're cutting on the second forty north. Got thirty-odd hands there that pass for men.

"Harrington was handling it for me. Man named Buller's millwright and a fellow named Ruppert's boss at camp. Harrington's gone—driven out—and we're in the soup!"

He paused and looked at Elliott, whose keen eyes were studying the details of the map.

"It's a haywire outfit. The locomotive broke down yesterday and unless the boys get her working the mill will be out of logs in a week. The mill itself is a grand old ruin but saws, after a fashion. The lumber in the yards is mortgaged up to the last cull piece, there's not enough in the bank to meet interest and pay-roll and there's no boss on the job."

Elliott looked at the old man.

"You said it was as pretty a piece of hardwood as ever stood outdoors. If so, why's it in this jam?"

Able Armitage lifted a hand in gesture and whispered sharply one word:

"Brandon!"

Ben put down the map, replaced the pipe stem between his teeth and shoved his hands deep into pockets.

"Brandon, eh?" He nodded. "Checks out on the stories I'd heard. . . . So Brandon's put you on the toboggan! Why?"

Able shrugged. "Six years ago I was made administrator of this estate and to keep the carrying charges from eating it up, I started to operate. There wasn't a chance to sell the stumpage to anybody but Brandon. Nobody's going to put their money into a devil-ridden country like this! There are too many stories going round of what's happened to others who have tried to work alongside Nick. We had to cut and mill or sell the stumpage to Brandon at his own price. Maybe, if it had been mine, I'd have sold; but the owner of this timber is an orphan girl and . . . a man doesn't like to quit under these circumstances.

"But every man I've put on to run the thing has been beaten, and I've had some good ones there. They can't get decent crews in the first place. Buller, the millwright, Thomas, the camp cook, and a crazy Irishman named Bird-Eye Blaine, who's camp boss, are the only three men you can count on. Brandon spies the good men who come along and if they don't work for him he sees to it that his Bull Duval drives 'em out of the country. And this matter of labor is only one item that he makes hard to supply.

"Until now he hasn't been able to touch me. I've managed to hold out against him politically. But he's watching and the probate court is watching, and unless I show some progress by the first of the year I'm going to be booted out as administrator. With another administrator in control he'll buy this timber for a song, a girl will be robbed and the shame of this community will be complete!"

"And what makes you think," Elliott asked, "that I've got a chance to put it over when other men have failed?"

Able did not hesitate.

"Because you have youth and a liking for tough nuts! You've had experience in timber operations and aren't afraid of Nick Brandon, and, last and most important of all, you came to Tincup hunting trouble.

"Son"—putting a hand on his shoulder—"I'd take Bridger's word on men quicker than I'd take the word of any man. He says you can do it if you will. I'm asking you, now, as an old man, with his back to the wall, will you help me on this?"

Ben Elliott did not reply at once. He was staring at the floor as one will when debating with himself and preparing for argument with another. He twisted his head gravely and smiled. Then he looked into Able's face.

"When do we start?" he asked.

The justice swallowed.

"You ready now? Without knowing any more about it?"

"I know enough. It's good timber and it's Brandon who's messing up the detail. . . . Let's go, Judge!"

* * * * * * * * *

It was just before whistle time next morning at the Hoot Owl mill.

"Who's th' young feller with Able?" the trimmerman asked the filer.

"New boss."

"Him?" The trimmerman spat and leaned further forward for a better look at Ben Elliott as he stood talking to the sawyer in the gloom of early day. "Say . . . Ain't he the lad that ducked th' bull? 'Nd took a poke at Brandon?"

"Th' same."

"Well I'll be d—d! Only a kid. He may be a good hand on a birlin' log but won't Nick Brandon find him sweet pickin'! He likes 'em young, Nick does . . . and 'specially after this one took such pains to make himself unpopular with Mister Nick!"

"Yup. He'll be duck soup for Brandon all right!"

The hand of the millwright's watch approached the hour. The sawyer pulled the signal cord. The big shaft commenced to turn and from machine to machine went Buller while Able and Ben watched, examining belting, grease cups, seeing that live rollers ran steadily and true. The pulleys turned slowly for a full five minutes and then as the cracked whistle atop the boiler house cackled its message that another working day had begun, the carriage swept forward and the saw snarled its way into a good maple log.

Elliott stirred on his feet. It was the way a mill should start, anyhow.

But after that beginning the procedure was not so good. The sawyer was not quick in making decisions. Twice in a half dozen logs his slabs were thick to the point of waste; he did not turn one particularly good piece as soon as he should to grade his lumber to the highest point.

The setter, too, was mediocre. The deck man loafed and let the bull chain fill up and stop even when his deck was half empty.

The mill crew was not happy. They appeared to be men working for a cause they felt was lost.

Ben went with Buller, then, from man to man and watched each do his work.

In the yard they passed logs rolled to one side.

"Much veneer stuff good as that?" Ben asked, eyeing them.

"Not much coming in now, but there's a lot of it standing," Buller answered. "Buyer in here ten days ago looking up bird's-eye maple and veneer birch. Harrington was saving it as it came in; some of it. He had too many things to think about, Harrington did. The buyer's due back any day, though. Market's up, I guess. He'll probably pay a fancy figure for what we have to offer him."

Then he went to the particular problem confronting them. With the locomotive laid up the steady supply of logs from camp to mill would be cut off. Snow was falling lightly, now, but sleighing might be days distant. To log the mill by trucks was impractical, he declared, and unless the railroad equipment could be put in working condition they might be forced to shut down. Fortunately a reserve log supply of a sort was on hand, decked high beside the pond.

"We'll have to break out this one deck now," Buller said. "Pond's about empty."

He whistled and waved to the pond man. Picking up a peavey he led the way toward that high bank of maple, beech and birch logs. Ben followed.

"Try the big birch first," Buller said to the pond man.

They engaged the hooks of their peaveys; they heaved. The log rolled away easily and lumbered down the incline to the water. Another . . . and still another, each coming away separately and starting no movement of others above them.

Buller spat. "That d—n beech butt's in tight," he said, tapping the log with his peavey pick. "Try her, Jim; now be careful. When she comes, the whole deck'll move in a hurry."

They heaved to no result. With a sharp "Now!" they heaved again, but the beech, nestling in the face of the deck at the height of a man's hip, refused to budge.

"Hold on! Give you a hand." Ben picked up a peavey and approached.

"Here, take this end, Elliott," the foreman said, moving in toward the center which was under the towering facade of the deck.

"No, go on back. I'll do the risk-taking for this lay-out for a while."

Buller made no reply but grinned. The pond man looked at Ben approvingly and spat on his hands. Peavey hooks bit the log's ends again; a peavey point, with all Ben Elliott's strength bearing on it, pried beneath the center of the reluctant beech. . . . "Now, . . . Together!"

He lifted his weight from the ground. His peavey handle bent.

"Look out!" Buller's voice was shrill on the warning as movement sent Ben Elliott swinging to the right. The key stick popped out, all but upon Ben. The logs above settled with a heavy mutter and then with that thunderous, ringing, booming sound of hardwood in motion, they rolled upon him.

Elliott had dropped his peavey, leaped nimbly over the beech as it struck the ground and bounced on its way to the water. He hopped to the first log and spurned it with his one foot, landed on the following with both, hesitated a split instant and stepped to yet another. Arms spread, balancing carefully, watching those logs as a boxer watches his opponent's blows, he went up that zooming, booming avalanche as it came down. He danced to the left as the end of one stick swung out to clout him to a pulp. He ran rapidly over three that lumbered down beneath him and paused.

Two came riding together, one atop the other, a moving barrier as high as his waist. Buller opened his lips in a cry of warning but thrusting out one hand, touching the topmost of the pair ever so lightly, Ben vaulted over, landing on another that rolled and grumbled behind the two. Crevasses between logs opened and closed before him. Sticks popped out of the tremendous pressure and rolled down slantwise, imperiling him. He did not run rapidly. At times he seemed to move with painful, with dangerous deliberation. But he was watching the logs and his chances and did not make a move until he was certain of where he was going.

Slowly the deck settled. Half of what had been piled logs now bobbed and swayed and rolled in the pond. The rest, reduced from the height to which it had towered a few seconds before, came to rest. And Ben Elliott, on its lowered crest, stood still a moment until certain the movement was ended and then came slowly down, looking not at the men who gaped at him but at the logs over which he walked with a critical, appraising eye.

"Atta boy!" an unidentified voice yelled above the roar of the carriage exhaust, but if Elliott heard this he gave no indication.

"Now, if Buller can't get that locomotive going by noon," he said to the pale and visibly shaken Able, "we'll telegraph for a new spider. No use taking more chances. Come on, Buller, let's look at the stuff you've got piled."

Blinking, the millwright followed him.

"'Y G—d!" muttered the pond man. "Slick shod, he went over that face! Slick shod! 'Y G—d!"

In the crepe rubber soles of his pacs, Ben Elliott had done what would have been a feat for an agile veteran in calked river boots. . . . And immediately gone on about another phase of his job as though such spectacular activity were all in a day's work.

An hour later the mill stood silent for five minutes while a broken conveyor chain was repaired. In that interval every man on the job had heard the story.

When they started the head sawyer was grinning and it seemed as though the saw stayed in the log more constantly than it had before, as if the mill functioned with greater smoothness, as if something in the nature of enthusiasm went into the labor along with brawn and experience.

Annual Convention of Wool Growers

A resolution was adopted upon the suggestion of R. J. Lund wishing R. E. Jones and J. E. Graham a speedy recovery as they are both in hospitals, the latter due to an accident met with while he was driving through Iowa.

One member of the Association rose to state his objections to paying an exchange on checks received for wool which are made on a bank at Wabasha, Minn.; it was moved that this matter be referred to the board of directors and that they take some kind of action so that this charge will be removed.

It was moved and seconded that S. F. 232, which embodies the Direct Buying Plan with points located at suitable points in the state under the supervision of the state of Minnesota; this plan was adopted and a copy of the resolution was sent to the two legislative bodies.

J. W. Christie of the United States Department of Agriculture, gave an interesting talk on wool consumption in the U. S., stating that the consumption had decreased nearly 50 per cent during the past two years. He further stated that it was up to the producers to create a demand for their product. A five pound average of wool consumption per person in the United States would just buy the wool produced in the U. S., Mr. Christie stated.

A. B. Gilfillan gave a very witty discussion on the secret sorrows of a sheep herder, to which class he claimed to belong; his talk was very interesting and fairly drooled from him.

Al Dexter of the Northwestern Drought Division Area explained how the government buying of livestock would create better times for the farmers of this territory and predicted an era of prosperity for the agricultual population within eight months.

H. B. Embach, geneal manager of the Ntaional Wool Marketing Corp., explained the function of this corporation and explained how members of the cooperatives were able to get the highest average prices for their wool. At clipping time, in the spring months, he stated that the prices of wool were usually at the year's low price, while, later, after the farmers had sold their wool, the prices went up slightly; his company was able to spread out this price over the entire year by buying and selling concessions of the product. The stock which the Minn. Coop. Wool Growers' Ass'n has in this company which was bought for $1,500 is now worth, according to Mr. Embach, slightly over $17,000. It was stated by Mr. Embach that the U. S. doesn't have to import wool; that enough wool is produced in the U. S. to supply all that is needed.

Ontario Official to Address Graduation

Officials of the Northwest School of Agriculture have announced the Honorable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture of the Province of Ontario, Canad, as the Commencement speaker on Thursday, March 28. Mr. Marshall is one of the most forceful speakers on agricultural topics in Canada and is known as the father of the School of Agriculture movement in that country. As Minister of Agriculture in Alberta some years ago, Mr. Marshall established schools similar to those in Minnesota at six centers in that Province. In addition to his engagement at the Northwest school, Mr. Marshall will also deliver the commencement addresses at the Central and West Agricultural Schools during the same week.

MEN AND LADY FORESTERS

The men and lady members of the Catholic Order of Foresters held a card party Wednesday evening in the I. O. O. F. hall. Whist and bridge was played at twelve tables. High honors in bridge was won by Fred Crotz and high honors in whist was won by Albert Kasa. Lunch was served after which dancing finished the evening's entertainment.

out the state there has been a rush for state jobs that is unparalleled in Minnesota history. The conferece between the governor, the department heads and the committee from the asociation was the outgrowth of the insistent demand by Farmer-Labor clubs, county committees etc., that something be done for deserving party members. Governor Olson asked the aid of every department head to meet the situation. Despite every effort that is being made, and will be made, however, Mr. Strout pointed out, applicants enlisting party support for appointments are being asked to take cognizance of the almost insurmountable lists of applications already filed.

The report of the housecleaning activities gains added significance in this territory with a rumor prevalent that W. H. Quist, game warden, has been requested to turn in his badge on April first. Mr. Quist, who was formerly a secretary of the couty Farmer-Labor association, has been at odds with the organization for the past two years and failed to support the association ticket during the primary and general election campaigns last year. Association members charge that his opposition, and opposition which he instigated among his friends against the association's legislative ticket resulted in the defeat of Harris, F-L candidate for the senate and the necessity for a contest in the case of W. E. Day, candidate for reelection to the house. They also point out that the election of Tungseth to the state senate is particularly distasteful to Governor Olson because of the nasty attacks that Tungseth has made on the governor. "The fact that Republican editors, lawyers and other old party leaders are moving heaven and earth to save Quist's job, proves our contention that he has been disloyal to the party that got him his job," Otto Rehm, county chairman of the Farmer-Labor association stated this week.

"No, the committee has not made any indorsement of anyone to replace Mr. Quist," Mr. Rehm answered when asked. "And what's more we have no one in mind. It will be time eough to discuss that when the job is vacant, and if we are asked."

There has ben a flurry of activity in Republican circles the past two weeks, in a desperate attempt to save Mr. Quist's scalp, following a visit to the city by a Mr. Falk, who claimed to be an investigator for the fish and game department. He interviewed several Farmer-Laborites and several Republicans, among them the editor of the local Republican paper, as well as some of the Tungseth supporters, to all of whom he is reported to, have stated that the Farmer-Labor county committee has demanded that Mr. Quist shall be ousted. He appeared before a sportsmen's group one evening and is reported to have also informed them that the committee was trying to oust Quist. He is reported to have told this group that "there is only one complaint against Quist and that was made by Otto Rehm." He is also reported to have stated it as his opinion that "Otto Rehm is a godam liar." Farmer-Laborites thruout the county are fighting mad over the dirty slur against their chairman and are rallying around him demanding that both Quist and Falk be dismissed from the state payroll immediately.

Spring Break-Up Means Load Limit for Roads

Engineers of the state highway department anticipate considerable interference with truck traffic on the newly added or secondary trunk routes when the spring break-up sets in, says a department bulletin.

As the frost comes out of the ground, many of these roads will be unable to hold heavy loads, and consequently the highway department will be obliged to post weight limits. If weight restrictions are not enforced, such roads would be pounded to pieces and become impassable, entailing great expense later in restoring them to condition. Districts with heavy snowfall are likely to have an especially large number of restrictions.

Fed. Judge Rules Sec. 7-A Void in Weirton Steel Case

A ruling by Federal Judge John P. Nields that Section 7-A was illegal and void as applied to National Industrial Recovery Act the Weirton Steel company and its business was handed down on Wednesday at Wilmington, Del. This decision was considered a loss of a major battle to the federal government. Under this ruling the "company unions" in the Weirton steel plants are declared legal.

Carley Trump Card Proves Dud; Clark Fantastic Tale Disproved.

Alive to the necessity of injecting something dramatic into the proceedings to revive public interest in their "investigation," the Carley sleuth committee played one of its trump cards last week.

To get a picture of what transpired, one must bear in mind that the committee of the Senate assigned to investigate various departments is for the moment working with the House relief investigating committee in an investigation into relief administration. Much to the discouragement of the dirt seekers, the testimony thus far shows conclusively that every cent of state money appropriated for relief has been expended for such purposes, not a penny going for administrative costs, which are paid for with federal funds.

So clean has been the administration of relief in this state that L. P. Zimmerman, administrator, and a federal official, has willingly gone before the committee, answered every question put to him, produced all records requested, and has submitted himself to questioning as to expenditure of federal monies when he could have told the sleuths it was none of their business and that they could go hang.

So when the investigation into relief was resumed, and with the House committee having no authority whatever to engage into any other inquiry than relief, Senator Carley, to amazement of all present except those "in the know" announced that the first witness of the evening will testify to matters having no conenction with SERA or relief. At the same time, he also said that the proceedings hereafter will be conducted by Thomas B. Mourer, Minneapolis attorney, who acted as campaign manager for Tom Davis and who also is a close friend of Senator Schall. It is thus revealed to the public what has been known for months by every cub reporter in the Twin Cities, that the taxpayers are footing the bill for the Republican campaign of 1936.

And in an atmosphere of tenseness, a certain Donald Clark, St. Cloud granite contractor, was called. It was obvious that all actors in the drama had rehearsed their parts well, and Mouer was not at a loss knowing exactly what questions to ask. In effect, Clark said that, in the presence of Walter Magee, general contractor for the state office building, Carl R. Erickson, state purchasing agent, told him he would have to give to the "party" $10,000 as a condition to receiving the sub-contract for furnishing the granite for the office building.

To those in the audience who knew that Erickson had no power or authority whatever to award the contract, that the entire matter of contracts was under the complete supervision of the State Office Building comimssion, composed of four Christianson and three Olson appointees, the tale sounded weird and preposterous. Furthermore Magee and not the state pays could afford to pay out money to take care of the "party" he could have reduced Magee's bill by exactly that amount. Clark said he would have paid $7,500, but walked out when $10,000 was mentioned without any argument whatever, in itself most fanciful.

The records of the building commission not only give the lie to the Clark claim but show to what desperate ends the political sleuths will go in their attempt to discredit the Olson administration.

These records show that on December 14, Clark and Magee appeared before the building commission, which had formerly decreed that the granite for the structure must be pearl pink granite, which could only have been furnished by the Cold Springs Granite company, to whom the sub-contract was awarded. Clark told the commission that he could save the state money by use of his granite. The following is from the minutes of the meeting, which are public records:

"In view of Mr. Magee's verbal statement that a credit of $10,000 could be given the state by using any Minnesota pink granite (this the Clark company could furnish) for the office building, finished similar to the finish used on the granite in the Historical Society building, that this matter be referred to the committee heretofore appointed to consider possible changes in the office building plans and specifications."

Although the motion carried, the commission later voted in favor of the Cold Springs granite.

So an offer by Clark to save the State of Minnesota $ 10,000, duly recorded in the official records, has now been twisted into an offer by a public official to deliver something which he could not possibly deliver for a consideration of $10,000 to the "party."

Meantime, an espionage system introduced in the Capitol by Carley and his cohorts is doing much to demoralize the state departments. The Capitol is seething with sleuthing and snooping. Employees look each other in the face with a sort of distrust and say to themselves: "I wonder if you are a sleuth?"

Employees hired to be loyal to their department heads and to the best interests of the state have been engaged by the Carley committee to act as stool pigeons against their employers for a fee of from $7 to $10 a day. Their regular salaries continue. A premium is thus placed on disloyalty, which is certain to be destructive of the morale of the departments for years to come. This is the price of sordid politics played by the Carley committee.

But the implications do not end there. The Carley committee is of establishing an espionage system against the United States government in the offices of the relief administration. At least one employee is engaged to spy on federal officials on a $10 per diem basis. Others are also known to have been hired. What the reactions of Washington will be to this remains to be seen.

Governor Submits Tax Program

While the conservative groups in the Legislature are wasting their time and the people's money jockeying around with politics, Goveror Olson this week submitted his program for tax revision and relief for the owner of real property. The conservatives want to submit a constitutional amendment limiting the amount of taxes which can be effective in 1937. Their replacement program is a sales tax—a tax on poverty—but they plan to pass this tax in 1936, when a man more favorable to a tax on poverty than Olson, they hope, will be in the Governor's chair.

The need for tax relief for real estate, the Governor pointed out in his message, is "acutely present," and legislation to bring it about should not be delayed. Furthermore, if the costitutional amendment fails of adoption, the governor said, there will be no relief at all.

The Governor urged the Legislature to pass a measure limiting the tax on real property, with the following program for tax revision; substantial increase in rates in the higher brackets of the income tax; substantial increase in the rates in the upper brackets of the inheritance tax; substantial increase in the gross earnings tax upon such public utilities as are subject to legislative action, and the submisison to the people of a legislative act increasing gross earnings tax on railroads; a substantial increase in the occupation and royalty tapes upon iron ore; re-passage of the corporate excess tax law, with provisios in the new act remedying any legal objections that may exist as to the original law and providing for the imposition of a tax of 20 mills; increase of the money and credits tax from 3 to 5 mills, with the right of deducting any amounts paid as money and credits tax from any amount due as a corporate excess tax; increase in the tax on chain enterprises.

Representative Stockwell's bill, in the form of a constitutional amendment to give the people the right to determine for themselves whether the state shall engage in the power business, has been killed in the House. A few liberals deserted the ranks to vote against the bill while Representative Wahlstrand, who is ilned up with the conservative group, voted in its favor.

State Relief Head Under Fire by Fed. Relief Adm.

L. P. Zimmerman, acting relief administrator for Minnesota since Gov. Olson resigned, is to be removed soon, according to an announcement made by H. L. Hopkins, relief administrator at Washington.

Secret reports of investigators for the federal government have given hints of collusion and waste of public funds and a report of one expert who has been studying transient camps asks that more time be given in the investigation to determine if collusion existed in awarding contracts for material and equipment and that he recommends more time be used in determining this matter.

Charges that bad engineering caused a great deal of waste on some projects are being laid at the relief administrator's door, and that expensive equipment was allowed to lie out and rust, was also charged.

Conservation Commission Asks Closed Duck Season

The Minnesota Conservation Commission has gone on record as again favoring a closed season during 1935 on all species of wild ducks. Through this action Minnesota again takes the lead in conservation endeavor among the states of the Union, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conservation, pointed out.

Last summer the Commission wired Federal authorities asking for a closed season. Action taken for this year only reiterates the former stand taken.

It is hoped that the United States Bureau of Biological Survey will see fit to close all duck shooting this year so that depleted wild duck species will be given a chance to regain a foothold and avoid absolute extinction, Mr. Willard said. "If such action is impossible then we recommend the staggered seasons which were in vogue last year be abolished."

Local Hockey Team Defeats Roseau Sunday Feb. 24

For the first time in four years the Thief River Falls hockey team defeated the Roseau team in a fast game played Sunday on the local rink by a score of 4 to 3. The sterling play of goalie Higinbotham, who has been out of the game for the past month because of an injury he received in one of the early games, was an important factor in the winning of the game.

McCARREN AMENDMENT PRESIDENT BILL CAUSES SPLIT OF PARTY LINES

The defeat of the subsistence wage of Roosevelt's plan by the McCaran amendment for prevailing wages on relief projects caused even a wider split between the White House and the United States Senate. Administration leaders voiced an opinion that President Roosevelt would take up the matter with the people through the medium of radio broadcasts on the subject.

The President's plan calls for a fifty dollar a month scale to be paid to relief applicants who receive work on federal projects. This clause of the $4,880,000,000 relief bill of Roosevelt's is being fought tooth and claw by the American Federation of Labor and indications are that they will continue to fight the "subsistence wage" with all the power they can muster.

STRIKERS CHEER SOCIALIST COOPERATION

New York—Prolonged cheering greeted the announcement by William A. Galvin, president of the Inside Bakery Workers' Union, No. 19585, A. F. of L., that the Socialist party has volunteered to organize housewives' committees to visit local grocers on behalf of the strikers, and to extend local cooperation to the strikers in every city where there is a plant of the National Biscuit Company.

SHIFT IN 4TH DISTRICT TRANSIENT SUPERVISION

The registration office of the 4th district, transient relief division, Minnesota SERA, has been moved from Detroit Lakes, Becker county, to Breckenridge, Wilkin county. Included in this district are the following counties: Becker, Clay, Hubbard, Mahnomen, Norman, Otter Tail, Wadena and Wilkin. Transient relief will be discontinued in Detroit Lakes for single men. Approved relief orders for transient families in these counties will be issued from Breckenridge.

WINTER FISHING CLOSES FRIDAY, MARCH 1

All forms of licensed winter fishing except that being done under contract with Minnesota State Division of Game and Fish in the removal of rough fishes, will terminate Friday, March 1, Erling Swenson, division director, announced. On that date all angling and fish-house fishing of any kind will close. All species of game and rough fishes are included.

Minnesota anglers will then await opening of the annual trout season which occurs May 1 in most counties. The trout season is delayed until May 15 in certain counties.

In 1933, a total of 11,683 fish-house licenses were issued by the state with a revenue accruing of $11,683. This was a slight decrease over the year 1932 when 12,913 fish-house licenses were issued for a total of $12,913. No figures are likely to be available for 1934 fish-house license sales.

A resolution was adopted upon the suggestion of R. J. Lund wishing R. E. Jones and J. E. Graham a speedy recovery as they are both in hospitals, the latter due to an accident met with while he was driving through Iowa.

One member of the Association rose to state his objections to paying an exchange on checks received for wool which are made on a bank at Wabasha, Minn.; it was moved that this matter be referred to the board of directors and that they take some kind of action so that this charge will be removed.

It was moved and seconded that S. F. 232, which embodies the Direct Buying Plan with points located at suitable points in the state under the supervision of the state of Minnesota; this plan was adopted and a copy of the resolution was sent to the two legislative bodies.

J. W. Christie of the United States Department of Agriculture, gave an interesting talk on wool consumption in the U. S., stating that the consumption had decreased nearly 50 per cent during the past two years. He further stated that it was up to the producers to create a demand for their product. A five pound average of wool consumption per person in the United States would just buy the wool produced in the U. S., Mr. Christie stated.

A. B. Gilfillan gave a very witty discussion on the secret sorrows of a sheep herder, to which class he claimed to belong; his talk was very interesting and fairly drooled from him.

Al Dexter of the Northwestern Drought Division Area explained how the government buying of livestock would create better times for the farmers of this territory and predicted an era of prosperity for the agricultual population within eight months.

H. B. Embach, geneal manager of the Ntaional Wool Marketing Corp., explained the function of this corporation and explained how members of the cooperatives were able to get the highest average prices for their wool. At clipping time, in the spring months, he stated that the prices of wool were usually at the year's low price, while, later, after the farmers had sold their wool, the prices went up slightly; his company was able to spread out this price over the entire year by buying and selling concessions of the product. The stock which the Minn. Coop. Wool Growers' Ass'n has in this company which was bought for $1,300 is now worth, according to Mr. Embach, slightly over $17,000. It was stated by Mr. Embach that the U. S. doesn't have to import wool; that enough wool is produced in the U. S. to supply all that is needed.

Ontario Official to Address Graduation

Officials of the Northwest School of Agriculture have announced the Honorable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture of the Province of Ontario, Canad, as the Commencement speaker on Thursday, March 28. Mr. Marshall is one of the most forceful speakers on agricultural topics in Canada and is known as the father of the School of Agriculture movement in that country. As Minister of Agriculture in Alberta some years ago, Mr. Marshall established schools similar to those in Minnesota at six centers in that Province. In addition to his engagement at the Northwest school, Mr. Marshall will also deliver the commencement addresses at the Central and West Agricultural Schools during the same week.

MEN AND LADY FORESTERS

The men and lady members of the Catholic Order of Foresters held a card party Wednesday evening in the I. O. O. F. hall. Whist and bridge was played at twelve tables. High honors in bridge was won by Fred Crotz and high honors in whist was won by Albert Kassa. Lunch was served after which dancing finished the evening's entertainment.

out the state there has been a rush for state jobs that is unparalleled in Minnesota history. The conferece between the governor, the department heads and the committee from the asociation was the outgrowth of the insistent demand by Farmer-Labor clubs, county committees etc., that something be done for deserving party members. Governor Olson asked the aid of every department head to meet the situation. Despite every effort that is being made, and will be made, however, Mr. Strout pointed out, applicants enlisting party support for appointments are being asked to take cognizance of the almost insurmountable lists of applications already filed.

The report of the housecleaning activities gains added significance in this territory with a rumor prevalent that W. H. Quist, game warden, has been requested to turn in his bauge on April first. Mr. Quist, who was formerly a secretary of the couty Farmer-Labor association, has been at odds with the organization for the past two years and failed to support the association ticket during the primary and general election campaigns last year. Association members charge that his opposition, and opposition which he instigated among his friends against the association's legislative ticket resulted in the defeat of Harris, F-L candidate for the senate and the necessity for a contest in the case of W. E. Day, candidate for reelection to the house. They also point out that the election of Tungseth to the state senate is particularly distasteful to Governor Olson because of the nasty attacks that Tungseth has made on the governor. "The fact that Republican editors, lawyers and other old party leaders are moving heaven and earth to save Quist's job, proves our contention that he has been disloyal to the party that got him his job," Otto Rehm, county chairman of the Farmer-Labor association stated this week.

"No, the committee has not made any indorsement of anyone to replace Mr. Quist," Mr. Rehm answered when asked. "And what's more we have no one in mind. It will be time eough to discuss that when the job is vacant, and if we are asked."

There has ben a flurry of activity in Republican circles the past two weeks, in a desperate attempt to save Mr. Quist's scalp, following a visit to the city by a Mr. Falk, who claimed to be an investigator for the fish and game department. He interviewed several Farmer-Laborites and several Republicans, among them the editor of the local Republican paper, as well as some of the Tungseth supporters, to all of whom he is reported to, have stated that the Farmer-Labor county committee has demanded that Mr. Quist shall be ousted. He appeared before a sportsmen's group one evening and is reported to have also informed them that the committee was trying to oust Quist. He is reported to have told this group that "there is only one complaint against Quist and that was made by Otto Rehm." He is also reported to have stated it as his opinion that "Otto Rehm is a godam liar." Farmer-Laborites thruout the county are fighting mad over the dirty slur against their chairman and are rallying around him demanding that both Quist and Falk be dismissed from the state payroll immediately.

Spring Break-Up Means Load Limit for Roads

Engineers of the state highway department anticipate considerable interference with truck traffic on the newly added or secondary trunk routes when the spring break-up sets in, says a department bulletin.

As the frost comes out of the ground, many of these roads will be unable to hold heavy loads, and consequently the highway department will be obliged to post weight limits. If weight restrictions are not enforced, such roads would be pounded to pieces and become impassable, entailing great expense later in restoring them to condition. Districts with heavy snowfall are likely to have an especially large number of restrictions.

Fed. Judge Rules Sec. 7-A Void in Weirton Steel Case

A ruling by Federal Judge John P. Nields that Section 7-A of the was illegal and void as applied to National Industrial Recovery Act the Weirton Steel company and its business was handed down on Wednesday at Wilmington, Del. This decision was considered a loss of a major battle to the federal government. Under this ruling the "company unions" in the Weirton steel plants are declared legal.

Carley Trump Card Proves Dud; Clark Fantastic Tale Disproved.

Alive to the necessity of injecting something dramatic into the proceedings to revive public interest in their "investigation," the Carley sleuth committee played one of its trump cards last week.

To get a picture of what transpired, one must bear in mind that the committee of the Senate assigned to investigate various departments is for the moment working with the House relief investigating committee in an investigation into relief administration. Much to the discouragement of the dirt seekers, the testimony thus far shows conclusively that every cent of state money appropriated for relief has been expended for such purposes, not a penny going for administrative costs, which are paid for with federal funds.

So clean has been the administration of relief in this state that L. P. Zimmerman, administrator, and a federal official, has willingly gone before the committee, answered every question put to him, produced all records requested, and has submitted himself to questioning as to expenditure of federal monies when he could have told the sleuths it was none of their business and that they could go hang.

So when the investigation into relief was resumed, and with the House committee having no authority whatever to engage into any other inquiry than relief, Senator Carley, to amazement of all present except those "in the know" announced that the first witness of the evening will testify to matters having no conenction with SERA or relief. At the same time, he also said that the proceedings hereafter will be conducted by Thomas B. Mourer, Minneapolis attorney, who acted as campaign manager for Tom Davis and who also is a close friend of Senator Schall. It is thus revealed to the public what has been known for months by every cub reporter in the Twin Cities, that the taxpayers are footing the bill for the Republican campaign of 1936.

And in an atmosphere of tenseness, a certain Donald Clark, St. Cloud granite contractor, was called. It was obvious that all actors in the drama had rehearsed their parts well, and Mouer was not at a loss knowing exactly what questions to ask. In effect, Clark said that, in the presence of Walter Magee, general contractor for the state office building, Carl R. Erickson, state purchasing agent, told him he would have to give to the "party" $10,000 as a condition to receiving the sub-contract for furnishing the granite for the office building.

To those in the audience who knew that Erickson had no power or authority whatever to award the contract, that the entire matter of contracts was under the complete supervision of the State Office Building commission, composed of four Christianson and three Olson appointees, the tale sounded weird and preposterous. Furthermore Magee and not the state pays could afford to pay out money to take care of the "party" he could have reduced Magee's bill by exactly that amount. Clark said he would have paid $7,500, but walked out when $10,000 was mentioned without any argument whatever, in itself most fanciful.

The records of the building commission not only give the lie to the Clark claim but show to what desperate ends the political sleuths will go in their attempt to discredit the Olson administration.

These records show that on December 14, Clark and Magee appeared before the building commission, which had formerly decreed that the granite for the structure must be pearl pink granite, which could only have been furnished by the Cold Springs Granite company, to whom the sub-contract was awarded. Clark told the commission that he could save the state money by the use of his granite. The following is from the minutes of the meeting, which are public records:

"In view of Mr. Magee's verbal statement that a credit of $10,000 could be given the state by using any Minnesota pink granite (this the Clark company could furnish) for the office building, finished similar to the finish used on the granite in the Historical Society building, that this matter be referred for consideration to the committee heretofore appointed to consider possible changes in the office building plans and specifications."

Although the motion carried, the commission later voted in favor of the Cold Springs granite.

So an offer by Clark to save the State of Minnesota $ 10,000, duly recorded in the official records, has now been twisted into an offer by a public official to deliver something which he could not posibly deilver for a consideration of $10,000 to the "party."

Meantime, an espionage system introduced in the Capitol by Carley and his cohorts is doing much to demoralize the state departments. The Capitol is seething with sleuthing and snooping. Employees look each other in the face with a sort of distrust and say to themselves: "I wonder if you are a sleuth?"

Employees hired to be loyal to their department heads and to the best interests of the state have been engaged by the Carley committee to act as stool pigeons against their employers for a fee of from $7 to $10 a day. Their regular salaries continue. A premium is thus placed on disloyalty, which is certain to be destructive of the morale of the departments for years to come. This is the price of sordid politics played by the Carley committee.

But the implications do not end there. The Carley committee is of establishing an espionage system against the United States government in the offices of the relief administration. At least one employee is engaged to spy on federal officials on a $10 per diem basis. Others are also known to have been hired. What the reactions of Washington will be to this remains to be seen.

Governor Submits Tax Program

While the conservative groups in the Legislature are wasting their time and the people's money jockeying around with politics, Goveror Olson this week submitted his program for tax revision and relief for the owner of real property. The conservatives want to submit a constitutional amendment limiting the amount of taxes which can be effective in 1937. Their replacement program is a sales tax—a tax on poverty—but they plan to pass this tax in 1936, when a man more favorable to a tax on poverty than Olson, they hope, will be in the Governor's chair.

The need for tax relief for real estate, the Governor pointed out in his message, is "acutely present," and legislation to bring it about should not be delayed. Furthermore, if the costitutional amendment fails of adoption, the governor said, there will be no relief at all.

The Governor urged the Legislature to pass a measure limiting the tax on real property, with the following program for tax revision; substantial increase in rates in the higher brackets of the income tax; substantial increase in the rates in the upper brackets of the inheritance tax; substantial increase in the gross earnings tax upon such public utilities as are subject to legislative action, and the submisison to the people of a legislative act increasing gross earnings tax on railroads; a substantial increase in the occupation and royalty tapes upon iron ore; re-passage of the corporate excess tax law, with provisios in the new act remedying any legal objections that may exist as to the original law and providing for the imposition of a tax of 20 mills; increase of the money and credits tax from 3 to 5 mills, with the right of deducting any amounts paid as money and credits tax from any amount due as a corporate excess tax; increase in the tax on chain enterprises.

Representative Stockwell's bill, in the form of a constitutional amendment to give the people the right to determine for themselves whether the state shall engage in the power business, has been killed in the House. A few liberals deserted the ranks to vote against the bill while Representative Wahlstrand, who is ilned up with the conservative group, voted in its favor.

State Relief Head Under Fire by Fed. Relief Adm.

L. P. Zimmerman, acting relief administrator for Minnesota since Gov. Olson resigned, is to be removed soon, according to an announcement made by H. L. Hopkins, relief administrator at Washington.

Secret reports of investigators for the federal government have given hints of collusion and waste of public funds and a report of one expert who has been studying transient camps asks that more time be given in the investigation to determine if collusion existed in awarding contracts for material and equipment and that he recommends more time be used in determining this matter.

Charges that bad engineering caused a great deal of waste on some projects are being laid at the relief administrator's door, and that expensive equipment was rented at high prices and was allowed to lie out and rust, was also charged.

Conservation Commission Asks Closed Duck Season

The Minnesota Conservation Commission has gone on record as again favoring a closed season during 1935 on all species of wild ducks. Through this action Minnesota again takes the lead in conservation endeavor among the states of the Union, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conservation, pointed out.

Last summer the Commission wired Federal authorities asking for a closed season. Action taken for this year only reiterates the former stand taken.

It is hoped that the United States Bureau of Biological Survey will see fit to close all duck shooting this year so that depleted wild duck species will be given a chance to regain a foothold and avoid absolute extinction, Mr. Willard said. "If such action is impossible then we recommend the staggered seasons which were in vogue last year be abolished."

LocalHockey Team Defeats Roseau Sunday Feb. 24

For the first time in four years the Thief River Falls hockey team defeated the Roseau team in a fast game played Sunday on the local rink by a score of 4 to 3. The sterling play of goalie Higinbotham, who has been out of the game for the past month because of an injury he received in one of the early games, was an important factor in the winning of the game.

McCARREN AMENDMENT PRESIDENT BILL CAUSES SPLIT OF PARTY LINES

The defeat of the subsistence wage of Roosevelt's plan by the McCaran amendment for prevailing wages on relief projects caused even a wider split between the White House and the United States Senate. Administration leaders voiced an opinion that President Roosevelt would take up the matter with the people through the medium of radio broadcasts on the subject.

The President's plan calls for a fifty dollar a month scale to be paid to relief applicants who receive work on federal projects. This clause of the $4,880,000,000 relief bill of Roosevelt's is being fought tooth and claw by the American Federation of Labor and indications are that they will continue to fight the "subsistence wage" with all the power they can muster.

STRIKERS CHEER SOCIALIST COOPERATION

New York—Prolonged cheering greeted the announcement by William A. Galvin, president of the Inside Bakery Workers' Union, No. 19585, A. F. of L., that the Socialist party has volunteered to organize housewives' committees to visit local grocers on behalf of the strikers, and to extend local cooperation to the strikers in every city where there is a plant of the National Biscuit Company.

SHIFT IN 4TH DISTRICT TRANSIENT SUPERVISION

The registration office of the 4th district, transient relief division, Minnesota SERA, has been moved from Detroit Lakes, Becker county, to Breckenridge, Wilkin county. Included in this district are the following counties: Becker, Clay, Hubbard, Mahnomen, Norman, Otter Tail, Wadena and Wilkin. Transient relief will be discontinued in Detroit Lakes for single men. Approved relief orders for transient families in these counties will be issued from Breckrenridge.

WINTER FISHING CLOSES FRIDAY, MARCH 1

All forms of licensed winter fishing except that being done under contract with Minnesota State Division of Game and Fish in the removal of rough fishes, will terminate Friday, March 1, Erling Swenson, division director, announced. On that date all angling and fish-house fishing of any kind will close. All species of game and rough fishes are included.

Minnesota anglers will then await opening of the annual trout season which occurs May 1 in most counties. The trout season is delayed until May 15 in certain specified counties.

In 1933, a total of 11,683 fish-house licenses were issued by the state with a revenue accruing of $11,683. This was a slight decrease over the year 1932 when 12,913 fish-house licenses were issued for a total of $12,913. No figures are yet available for 1934 fish-house license sales.

It was stated by Mr. Embach that the U. S. doesn't have to import wool; that enough wool is produced in the U. S. to supply all that is needed.

Officials of the Northwest School of Agriculture have announced the Honorable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture of the Province of Ontario, Canad, as the Commencement speaker on Thursday, March 28, Mr. Marshall is one of the most forceful speakers on agricultural topics in Canada and is known as the father of the School of Agriculture movement in that country. As Minister of Agriculture in Alberta some years ago, Mr. Marshall established schools similar to those in Minnesota at six centers in that Province. In addition to his engagement at the Northwest school, Mr. Marshall will also deliver the commencement addresses at the Central and West Agricultural Schools during the same week.

MEN AND LADY FORESTERS

The men and lady members of the Catholic Order of Foresters held a card party Wednesday evening in the I. O. O. F. hall. Whist and bridge was played at twelve tables. High honors in bridge was won by Fred Grotz and high honors in whist was won by Albert Kassa. Lunch was served after which dancing finished the evening's entertainment.

out the state there has been a rush for state jobs that is unparalleled in Minnesota history. The conference between the governor, the department heads and the committee from the association was the outgrowth of the insistent demand by Farmer-Labor clubs, county committees etc., that something be done for deserving party members. Governor Olson asked the aid of every department head to meet the situation. Despite every effort that is being made, and will be made, however, Mr. Strout pointed out, applicants enlisting party support for appointments are being asked to take cognizance of the almost insurmountable lists of applications already filed.

The report of the housecleaning activities gains added significance in this territory with a rumor prevalent that W. H. Quist, game warden, has been requested to turn in his badge on April first. Mr. Quist, who was formerly a secretary of the couty Farmer-Labor association, has been at odds with the organization for the past two years and failed to support the association ticket during the primary and general election campaigns last year. Association members charge that his opposition, and opposition which he instigated among his friends against the association's legislative ticket resulted in the defeat of Harris, F-L candidate for the senate and the necessity for a contest in the case of W. E. Day, candidate for reelection to the house. They also point out that the election of Tungseth to the state senate is particularly distasteful to Governor Olson because of the nasty attacks that Tungseth has made on the governor. "The fact that Republican editors, lawyers and other old party leaders are moving heaven and earth to save Quist's job, proves our contention that he has been disloyal to the party that got him his job," Otto Rehm, county chairman of the Farmer-Labor association stated this week.

"No, the committee has not made any indorsement of anyone to replace Mr. Quist," Mr. Rehm answered when asked. "And what's more we have no one in mind. It will be time eough to discuss that when the job is vacant, and if we are asked."

There has ben a flurry of activity in Republican circles the past two weeks, in a desperate attempt to save Mr. Quist's scalp, following a visit to the city by a Mr. Falk, who claimed to be an investigator for the fish and game department. He interviewed several Farmer-Laborites and several Republicans, among them the editor of the local Republican paper, as well as some of the Tungseth supporters, to all of whom he is reported to have stated that the Farmer-Labor county committee has demanded that Mr. Quist shall be ousted. He appeared before a sportsmen's group one evening and is reported to have also informed them that the committee was trying to oust Quist. He is reported to have told this group that "there is only one complaint against Quist and that was made by Otto Rehm." He is also reported to have stated it as his opinion that "Otto Rehm is a godam liar." Farmer-Laborites thruout the county are fighting mad over the dirty slur against their chairman and are rallying around him demanding that both Quist and Falk be dismissed from the state payroll immediately.

Spring Break-Up Means Load Limit for Roads

Engineers of the state highway department anticipate considerable interference with truck traffic on the newly added or secondary trunk routes when the spring break-up sets in, says a department bulletin.

As the frost comes out of the ground, many of these roads will be unable to hold heavy loads, and consequently the highway department will be obliged to post weight limits. If weight restrictions are not enforced, such roads would be pounded to pieces and become impassable, entailing great expense later in restoring them to condition. Districts with heavy snowfall are likely to have an especially large number of restrictions.

Fed. Judge Rules Sec. 7-A Void in Weirton Steel Case

A ruling by Federal Judge John P. Nields that Section 7-A of the was illegal and void as applied to National Industrial Recovery Act the Weirton Steel company and its business was handed down on Wednesday at Wilmington, Del. This decision was considered a loss of a major battle to the federal government. Under this ruling the "company unions" in the Weirton steel plants are declared legal.

Carley Trump Card Proves Dud; Clark Fantastic Tale Disproved.

Alive to the necessity of injecting something dramatic into the proceedings to revive public interest in their "investigation," the Carley sleuth committee played one of its trump cards last week.

To get a picture of what transpired, one must bear in mind that the committee of the Senate assigned to investigate various departments is for the moment working with the House relief investigating committee in an investigation into relief administration. Much to the discouragement of the dirt seekers, the testimony thus far shows conclusively that every cent of state money appropriated for relief has been expended for such purposes, not a penny going for administrative costs, which are paid for with federal funds.

So clean has been the administration of relief in this state that L. P. Zimmerman, administrator, and a federal official, has willingly gone before the committee, answered every question put to him, produced all records requested, and has submitted himself to questioning as to expenditure of federal monies when he could have told the sleuths it was none of their business and that they could go hang.

So when the investigation into relief was resumed, and with the House committee having no authority whatever to engage into any other inquiry than relief, Senator Carley, to amazement of all present except those "in the know" announced that the first witness of the evening will testify to matters having no conenction with SERA or relief. At the same time, he also said that the proceedings hereafter will be conducted by Thomas B. Mourer, Minneapolis attorney, who acted as campaign manager for Tom Davis and who also is a close friend of Senator Schall. It is thus revealed to the public what has been known for months by every cub reporter in the Twin Cities, that the taxpayers are footing the bill for the Republican campaign of 1936.

And in an atmosphere of tenseness, a certain Donald Clark, St. Cloud granite contractor, was called. It was obvious that all actors in the drama had rehearsed their parts well, and Mouer was not at a loss knowing exactly what questions to ask. In effect, Clark said that, in the presence of Walter Magee, general contractor for the state office building, Carl R. Erickson, state purchasing agent, told him he would have to give to the "party" $10,000 as a condition to receiving the sub-contract for furnishing the granite for the office building.

To those in the audience who knew that Erickson had no power or authority whatever to award the contract, that the entire matter of contracts was under the complete supervision of the State Office Building commission, composed of four Christianson and three Olson appointees, the tale sounded weird and preposterous. Furthermore Magee and not the state pays could afford to pay out money to take care of the "party" he could have reduced Magee's bill by exactly that amount. Clark said he would have paid $7,500, but walked out when $10,000 was mentioned without any argument whatever, in itself most fanciful.

The records of the building commission not only give the lie to the Clark claim but show to what desperate ends the political sleuths will go in their attempt to discredit the Olson administration.

These records show that on December 14, Clark and Magee appeared before the building commission, which had formerly decreed that the granite for the structure must be pearl pink granite, which could only have been furnished by the Cold Springs Granite company, to whom the sub-contract was awarded. Clark told the commission that he could save the state money by the use of his granite. The following is from the minutes of the meeting, which are public records:

"In view of Mr. Magee's verbal statement that a credit of $10,000 could be given the state by using any Minnesota pink granite (this the Clark company could furnish) for the office building, finished similar to the finish used on the granite in the Historical Society building, that this matter be referred for consideration to the committee heretofore appointed to consider possible changes in the office building plans and specifications."

Although the motion carried, the commission later voted in favor of the Cold Springs granite.

So an offer by Clark to save the State of Minnesota $ 10,000, duly recorded in the official records, has now been twisted into an offer by a public official to deliver something which he could not posisbly deilver for a consideration of $10,000 to the "party."

Meantime, an espionage system introduced in the Capitol by Carley and his cohorts is doing much to demoralize the state departments. The Capitol is seething with sleuthing and snooping. Employees look each other in the face with a sort of distrust and say to themselves: "I wonder if you are a sleuth?"

Employees hired to be loyal to their department heads and to the best interests of the state have been engaged by the Carley committee to act as stool pigeons against their employers for a fee of from $7 to $10 a day. Their regular salaries continue. A premium is thus placed on disloyalty, which is certain to be destructive of the morale of the departments for years to come. This is the price of sordid politics played by the Carley committee.

But the implications do not end there. The Carley committee is of establishing an espionage system against the United States government in the offices of the relief administration. At least one employee is engaged to spy on federal officials on a $10 per diem basis. Others are also known to have been hired. What the reactions of Washington will be to this remains to be seen.

Governor Submits Tax Program

While the conservative groups in the Legislature are wasting their time and the people's money jockeying around with politics, Goveror Olson this week submitted his program for tax revision and relief for the owner of real property. The conservatives want to submit a constitutional amendment limiting the amount of taxes which can be effective in 1937. Their replacement program is a sales tax—a tax on poverty—but they plan to pass this tax in 1936, when a man more favorable to a tax on poverty than Olson, they hope, will be in the Governor's chair.

The need for tax relief for real estate, the Governor pointed out in his message, is "acutely present," and legislation to bring it about should not be delayed. Furthermore, if the costitutional amendment fails of adoption, the governor said, there will be no relief at all.

The Governor urged the Legislature to pass a measure limiting the tax on real property, with the following program for tax revision; substantial increase in rates in the higher brackets of the income tax; substantial increase in the rates in the upper brackets of the inheritance tax; substantial increase in the gross earnings tax upon such public utilities as are subject to legislative action, and the submisison to the people of a legislative act increasing gross earnings tax on railroads; a substantial increase in the occupation and royalty tapes upon iron ore; re-passage of the corporate excess tax law, with provisios in the new act remedying any legal objections that may exist as to the original law and providing for the imposition of a tax of 20 mills; increase of the money and credits tax from 3 to 5 mills, with the right of deducting any amounts paid as money and credits tax from any amount due as a corporate excess tax; increase in the tax on chain enterprises.

Representative Stockwell's bill, in the form of a constitutional amendment to give the people the right to determine for themselves whether the state shall engage in the power business, has been killed in the House. A few liberals deserted the ranks to vote against the bill while Representative Wahlstrand, who is lined up with the conservative group, voted in its favor.

State Relief Head Under Fire by Fed. Relief Adm.

L. P. Zimmerman, acting relief administrator for Minnesota since Gov. Olson resigned, is to be removed soon, according to an announcement made by H. L. Hopkins, relief administrator at Washington.

Secret reports of investigators for the federal government have given hints of collusion and waste of public funds and a report of one expert who has been studying transient camps asks that more time be given in the investigation to determine if collusion existed in awarding contracts for material and equipment and that he recommends more time be used in determining this matter.

Charges that bad engineering caused a great deal of waste on some projects are being laid at the relief administrator's door, and that expensive equipment was rented at high prices and was allowed to lie out and rust, was also charged.

Conservation Commission Asks Closed Duck Season

The Minnesota Conservation Commission has gone on record as again favoring a closed season during 1935 on all species of wild ducks. Through this action Minnesota again takes the lead in conservation over other states of the Union, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conservation, pointed out.

Last summer the Commission wired Federal authorities asking for a closed season. Action taken for this year only reiterates the former stand taken.

It is hoped that the United States Bureau of Biological Survey will see fit to close all duck shooting this year so tha depleted wild duck species will be given a chance to regain a foothold and avoid absolute extinction, Mr. Willard said. "If such action is impossible then we recommend the staggered seasons which were in vogue last year be abolished."

LocalHockey Team Defeats Roseau Sunday Feb. 24

For the first time in four years the Thief River Falls hockey team defeated the Roseau team in a fast game played Sunday on the local rink by a score of 4 to 3. The sterling play of goalie Higinbotham, who has been out of the game for the past month because of an injury he received in one of the early games, was an important factor in the winning of the game.

McCARREN AMENDMENT PRESIDENT BILL CAUSES SPLIT OF PARTY LINES

The defeat of the subsistence wage of Roosevelt's plan by the McCaran amendment for prevailing wages on relief projects caused even a wider split between the White House and the United States Senate. Administration leaders voiced an opinion that President Roosevelt would take up the matter with the people through the medium of radio broadcasts on the subject.

The President's plan calls for a fifty dollar a month scale to be paid to relief applicants who receive work on federal projects. This clause of the $4,880,000,000 relief bill of Roosevelt's is being fought tooth and claw by the American Federation of Labor and indications are that they will continue to fight the "subsistence wage" with all the power they can muster.

STRIKERS CHEER SOCIALIST COOPERATION

New York—Prolonged cheering greeted the announcement by William A. Galvin, president of the Inside Bakery Workers' Union, No. 19585, A. F. of L., that the Socialist party has volunteered to organize housewives' committees to visit local grocers on behalf of the strikers, and to extend local cooperation to the strikers in every city where there is a plant of the National Biscuit Company.

SHIFT IN 4TH DISTRICT TRANSIENT SUPERVISION

The registration office of the 4th district, transient relief division, Minnesota SERA, has been moved from Detroit Lakes, Becker county, to Breckenridge, Wilkin county. Included in this district are the following counties: Becker, Clay, Hubbard, Mahnomen, Norman, Otter Tail, Wadena and Wilkin. Transient relief will be discontinued in Detroit Lakes for single men. Approved relief orders for transient families in these counties will be issued from Breckenridge.

WINTER FISHING CLOSES FRIDAY, MARCH 1

All forms of licensed winter fishing except that being done under contract with Minnesota State Division of Game and Fish in the removal of rough fishes, will terminate Friday, March 1, Erling Swenson, division director, announced. On that date all angling and fish-house fishing of any kind will close. All species of game and rough fishes are included.

Minnesota anglers will then await opening of the annual trout season which occurs May 1 in most counties. The trout season is delayed until May 15 in certain specified counties.

In 1933, a total of 11,683 fish-house licenses were issued by the state with a revenue accruing of $11,683. This was a slight decrease over the year 1932 when 12,913 fish-house licenses were issued for a total of $12,913. No figures are yet available for 1934 fish-house license sales.

$80,000 BONDS TO BE FLOATED HERE MAR. 22

Issued to Absorb Outstanding Warrants Held Against The County

WILL BE SOLD LOCALLY

Persons Who Wish to Buy Should Contact County Auditor At Once

$80,000 worth of bonds are to be put on the auction block March 22 according to the action taken by the county board at their meeting which was held Tuesday. Money derived from the sale of these bonds is to be used in taking up of outstanding warrants held against the county. Bids will be accepted only by residents of Pennington county and any local person interested in investing their money should make arrangements as soon as possible with the county auditor to insure their getting a chance to so invest their money, according to H. L. Fowler, county auditor.

Business of the county board was mostly routine with 14 applications for old age pensions approved. Sunday dance permits will be taboo this year and no dance can be held legally in Penington county on Sundays during the ensuing year, the board decided.

Enabling Act is Needed In Mud Lake Purchase

An enabling act is required in order that the Federal Government may be able to camplete the purchase of the 52,700 acres approved by the United States Bureau of Biological Surbey for the Mud Lake Wild migratory waterfowl project in Northwestern Minnesota. A bill instigated by the Department of Conservation designed to remove condemnation obstacles was introduced in the legislature Friday.

"Sportmen of the State can perform no greater immediate service to the wild life restoration program in Minnesota than by getting behind this bill," E. V. Willard Commissioner of Conservation, said. "State Senators and Representatives should be urged to support this measure so that the important Mud Lake project can get under way as early as possible.

Federal funds available for improvements within the area must be definitely committed before March 31 or they will revert to the Federal treasuy and be lost to the project. It is to be able to get these funds that the pending enableing act must be passed."

F-L CLUB HITS AT GROSS TURN OVER TAX, FRI.

Principle of Net Income Tax Is Urged by Members at Meeting

The Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor club held its regular meeting Feb. 15 at the Pennington county courthouse at which time the following resolutions were adopted:

At a meeting of the Thief River Falls, Minnesota, Farmer-Labor club, held on February 15, 1935, it was moved, seconded and carried that the following resolution be adopted:

"WHEREAS, there is considerable mention at this time of a so-called Gross Turnover Tax, and also of a Sales Tax, and other similar vicious tax measures, and

"WHEREAS, we also understand that a bill has been, or is about to be introduced in the Legislature to provide for a Gross Turn Over Tax, or a Sales Tax, and similar tax measures, and

"WHEREAS, we believe in and favor the principle of a Net Income Tax,

NOW THEREFORE BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED, That upon due consideration and discussion and study we are absolutely opposed to the so-called Gross Turnover Tax, and to all Sales Taxes, and similar vicious forms of taxation, and that it is in our opinion that such legislation should not be passed, and should be voted down if introduced in the Legislature, and

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That we favor the principle of the Net Income Tax as against any other form of taxation, and urge our members of the Legislature to use their best efforts to strengthen the present income tax, and if necessary to raise the rate of taxation upon the higher brackets, and

Wangenstein's Jewelry and Lund Insurance Agency Suffer Big Loss

ALL LOSSES ARE COVERED

Dropping Coals From Furnace Believed Cause of the Conflagration

A ten thousand dollar loss was sustained by Wangenstein's Jewelry and the Robert Lund Insurance agency early Monday morning when a fire broke out in the basement under the store and office. The local fire department was called out about four a. m., and when they arrived at the scene of the fire the ground floor was in a blaze and well under way. On talking over the origin of the fire with the superintendent of the local fire department it was stated that it was probably caused by hot ashes being dropped near a pile of papers and not by any slow combustion of materials because, Mr. Hanson stated, two persons passed by the place at about 3:30 a. m. and at that time there was no sign of smoke nor of smoke in the air at that vicinity.

Because the fire was well under way when the firemen arived the situation was very difficult to get control of, and it was not until most of the ground floor had been burned away that it was finally brought under control. As it was, the show cases in the jewelry store and the office equipment in the insurance office fell through into the basement causing a great deal of damage to the fixtures. The jewelry store was covered by insurance and it is probable that the Lund Insurance Company's office was also fully covered, according to the firemen. Considerable damage was done by water due to the encessity of soaking the walls and ceilings of the two places to prevent the fire from spreading to the up-stairs sleeping apartments of the Dudley building.

Minnesotans Are Safety Conscious Says Roosevelt

The national government, personified by President Roosevelt, has recognized the merits in the educational campaign against traffic fatalities, launched last May by the division of safety, Minnesota SERA.

In a recent letter to A. V. Rohweder, Duluth chairman of the SERA safety advisory committee, President Roosevelt expresses the hope that the splended results in Minnesota will act as a stimulus to similar activities in other states. The writer gives his endorsement in these words: "I know of no better method of enlisting the co-operatio n of the public and making users of streets and highways safety conscious than a public safety educational program such as sponsored by your committee in Minnesota."

Since June 1934, public safety commissioners have been functioning in every city and county in Minnesota.

Sleet and Rain Followed by Cold Wave Leaves Roads in Dangerous Condition

Precarious driving and walking conditions prevail all over the northern part of the state due to a rain and sleet storm which occurred Sunday and Monday. Rain fell in most parts of the northwest Sunday evening and continued spasmodically through Monday and Monday night. Duluth, and nearly all the range towns were isolated because the weight of the ice which formed on communications wires caused them to break and so severed connections with the outside. Radio communication was finally established after several hours of work.

Rumor has it that farmers in the vicinity of Crookston took advantage of the icy roads to save gasoline and skated to town with their cream. Driving on all highways is extremely dangerous and a speed of 20 miles per hour is considered to be the fastest safe speed to travel. A cold wave followed the sleet storm and added to the slipperiness of the ice-covered roads and sidewalks. Temperature dropped to well below zero Tuesday and Wednesday mornings but took a turn upward today.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Dies in Washington, Wed

Oliver Wendell Holmes, noted liberal judge, died Wednesday, March 6th, at his home in Washington, D. C., at the age of 93 just two days before his 94th birthday. Judge Holmes was a Supreme Court justice for 30 years resigning two years ago because of weakness of old age. He was noted as a defender of "Human Rights" against "Property Rights" and because of this he was often referred to as "the great dissenter." His death is mourned by all liberals and his name will be long remembered by his many friends and foes.

Township Elections to be Held Tuesday, March 12

Township elections will be held March 12 in Pennington county, Mr. Fowler, county auditor, stated today. The town clerk, assessor, justice of the peace and constable will be elected and the tax levy for town purposes will be made at this time. Polling places will be open throughout the day at the usual places in the various townships.

4-H Leaders to Discuss Plans for Year Today

A meeting of 4H club leaders from Pennington county will be held today at two p. m. in the commercial club rooms of the auditorium for the purpose of discussing plans for the coming year. Miss Schenck, one of the state club leaders, will address the group and outline a tentative program for the year. Anyone interested is invited to come, County Agent Douglass announced.

C. Gustafson & Son Will Hold Opening Mar. 20th

The annual spring program and entertainment of C. Gustafson and Son, Inc., has been set for March 20th to which everyone is invited. The program will be similar to those of other years, and in addition, a "talkie" movies has been arranged and at noon a lunch will be served.

Many new machines will be displayed and explained to the interested spectator that he may better understand the progress being made in farm equipment to improve agricultural and rural conditions.

The annual high school basketball tournament of district 31 got under way last night to a fast start, and will be continued tonite and Friday night when the district championship game will be played.

Paired for tonight's games are East Grand Forks and Plummer and in the second game Thief River Falls and Crookston will play to decide who is to play the winner of the E. G. F.-Plummer game for the title Friday night following the consolation game which will be played by the two teams losing tonight.

By virtue of defeating Fisher 48 to 15 Wednesday evening in the first game of the tournament East Grand Forks advanced to the semi-finals, while Plummer defeated Warren 30 to 19 to also advance to the semi-finals. E. G. F. encountered no difficulty in subduing their opponents although Plummer had a more difficult job, it must be remembered that Warren has always had a title contending team, while Omer Neslund Wins Prize of R. R. V. D.

Winners of the Red River Valley Dairy men's Association's Dairy Herd Management Contest were announced today by C. M. Pesek, secretary of the Association. The first prize, a fifteen dollar scholarship, went to Omer Neslund of Oklee and the second prize of a ten dollar scholarship was won by James Weckworth of Hazel.

This contest was conducted by the boys at the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston under the direction of R. J. Christgan, project leader, over a period of six months. The contest was based on results obtained in keeping a complete set of records in managing the home dairy herd including cost of feed, weights and test of milk obtained, etc.

Local H. S. Debators Defeat Oklee Tues.

Thief River Falls High School debators won Tuesday night from the Oklee debating team by a decision of the judges of two to one. The subject debated was, "Reselved, that the federal government should adopt the policy of equalizing educational opportunity thruout the nation by means of annual grants to the several states for public elementary and secondary education."

Members of the Thief River Falls team were Kendall Gustafson, Corlan Dokken and Dorothy Rau who upheld the affirmative side of the question. Oklee was represented by Alice Melby, Katherine Melby and Lillian Fore who presented a strong argument for the negative side of the question. Judges were Professors T. M. McCall, E. R. Clark and John Mlinar, all of the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston.

Teachers' Institute to Be Held Sat., Mar. 9

A. C. Matheson, county superintendent of schools, announced today that a Teachers' Institute will be held for the benefit of the county school teachers Saturday, March 9, at four p. m., in the Pennington county court house. Miss Fern Kennedy, state institute instructor, will discuss "Primary Reading" at this meeting.

An example of review lessons, Social Studies as taught in the eighth grade will be given by Miss Kennedy; correct usage of the dictionary will also be taken up by her. Questions pertinent to country school problems will be answered at this time to the best of Miss Kennedy's ability, Mr. Matheson stated.

I. U. A. W. Held Meet At Crookston, Sun. Mar. 3

The regular meeting of the Independent Union of All Workers, local No. 13, was held at the Polk county court house in Crookston last Sunday. Those who attended the meeting from Thief River Falls were Ed. Odelin, Herman Kjos, Patrick Harris, Albert Severson and Gust Hanson.

The meeting was featured by a talk by Judge James E. Montague of Crookston. The next meeting was set for April 7th and will be held at Warren. Minnesota; members are urged to be present.

Dostal-Lanning Bowling Team Garners 1283 Pins

The Red River Valley Bowling tournament which is being held in Crookston is now nearing completion; as only one team, representing a city in the Red River Valley, bowls each Sunday, the length of time required is quite extended. Thief River Falls day was last Sunday at which time the following scores were turned in by local bowlers In the doubles, DuChamp and Cerney totaled 1183 pins, Dostal and Lanning 1283, Olson and Lufkin 1179; in the singles, G. Winter gathered 630 in four games, Cerney 683, Olson 675, Dostal 668, and DuChamp 565.

Crookston, the last team on the list will bowl next Sunday; the winners of the doubles will receive $50 cash prize and the winner of the singles high average will receive $40 cash prize.

Thi Ri Fa Mu Club Holds Meeting Tuesday Mar. 5

The Thi Ri Fa Mu Club met at the Studio of Thelma Holm Erickson, Tuesday, March 5th. After musical current events and the regular business meeting Helen Howick gave a report on Russian composers. Jean Hanson of Warroad played "Melody in F" by Rubenstein. Mrs. Chester Myrom, accompanied by Violet Rhodegard sang "Only a Yearning Heart" by Tschaikowsky. Helen Granum played "Prelude in G Minor" by Rachimaninoff. Mrs. Erickson gave a report on the Russian Ballet Russe, which she attended in Winnipeg in February. Ethel Parnow gave a report on Modern composers. Jean Gustafson played the "Man in the Moon," by Beryl Rubenstein. Angeline Havel played "Frolic of the Waters," by Rabel and Helen Rice played "Flirtation in a Chinese Garden," by Chasins, and "Claire de Lune" by Debussy. Refreshments were served by the hostesses Eileen Rolland, Gloria Engelstad and Helen Howick.

Land O' Lakes District 17 Convention Attracts Big Crowd Despite Bad Roads

Pres. John Brandt, and O. Z. Ramsberg Of Central Co-op. Address the Meeting

CONVENTION SPEAKER

John Brandt
President of Land O' Lakes

From 1200 to 1500 people thronged the municipal auditorium at the anual meeting of the Land O' Lakes District 17 creamery operators, managers, officials and patrons on Wednesday. Following the business meeting there were speeches and awards to operators for efficiency, grading, etc. President John Brandt of Land O' Lakes and O. Z. Ramsberg of Central Livetock association of St. Paul, addressed the afternoon session.

N. E. Olson, operator at Leonard lead the field on cream grading with an average grading score percentage of 98.60; Oscar Edeen of Clearbrook took second place with a percentagee of 92.45 and W. J. Strandlie of Roseau won third place with an average percentage of 91.16.

P. W. Ruthkowski of Gully took the lead in the operators' efficiency contest with a score of 99.08; John Lager of Lancaster took second with a score of 99.00, and Norman Aslakson of Bronson took third with a score of 98.80. Warren creamery's operators held second place in this scoring with an average of 99.01 but were ineligible for prizes due to the fact that there was a change of operators. C. J. Lindberg operating for nine months and his brother, W. A. Lindberg, operating for three months out of the year. This contest was based on the average efficiency compiled on figures covering weights, workmanship, composition, mold and yeast.

P. L. Anderson, fieldman for district, gave a short talk on the importance of selecting a creamery helper and Olaf Holdahl, secretary of the Roseau creamery spoke shortly on the duties and responsibilities of the creamery directors.

The local Land O' Lakes employees' club served dinner to approximately 1000 people and four members of the club assisted in the entertainment of the visitors with several quartet selections.

Attendance contest winners have not yet been established, but the five largest delegations came from Goodridge, Grygla, Four Town, Grygla Greenbush and Spooner. The turnout was wonderful, Stuart McLeod, chairman of the meeting, stated, when the icy and dangerous conditions of the roads are considered.

Following the afternoon business session, O. Z. Ramsberg, fieldman for Central Livestock association spoke on "Direct Marketing." He scored Secretary Wallace's stand on the direct marketing question, stating that Wallace said in 1928 that direct marketing is a menace. Now he is apparently favoring it, he said. He cited the earnings of the large packers during 1934 and showed where their net earnings were $31,000,000 for the year as compared with earnings of 25 millions in 1933. Their 1935 earnings will exceed the earnings of last year, he said, because they have availed themselves of the forced marketing due to drouth conditions and will cash in by selling at high prices next

Shipping Assoc. Holds Election Sat. Mar. 2

The Thief River Falls Shipping Association held their annual meeting Saturday at which time they elected their officers for the coming year. Emil Gribstein, who has been manager for the past year, was elected president of the association and Carl Beiswinger vice-president. Directors of the organization elected were Reynold Johnson, Christ Larson and Ole Helgeland.

Mr. Greibstein resigned as manager, which leaves a vacancy to be filled at an early date for which purpose a meeting of the directors will be called in about two weeks, according to Mr. Douglass.

Douville Named Chairman Of WPA at Mon. Meeting

A re-organization meeting of the Workmen's Protective Association was held in the Commercial Club rooms at the auditorium Monday night at which time Wm. Douville was re-elected chairman of the group. Other officers elected were: vice-chairman, John Thomas; secretary, E. C. Peterson; marshall, Paul Vinge; and members of the executive committee were chosen as follows: Ed. Kelly, Nick Waldorf, Ed. Ahlstrom, Helmer Ostram, Harry Mjelde, Harold Hicks and Martin Olson.

The next meeting will be held at the same place next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock, and Chairman Douville urges all members to be present.

T. R. F. Independent Team Goes to State

The Thief River Falls Independent basketball team playing in the recreational tournament at Warren Feb. 27 and 28 won first prize of twenty dollars and the right to represent this district in the regional tournament which was held in Fosston last Sunday, March 3rd. By winning the regional tournament last Sunday the local team also won the right to represent this region in the state tournament; the final game of the regional tournament between T. R. F. and Fosston was won 28 to 16.

The State Tournament will be played in the St. Paul Armory on Saturday, March 9th. The following local players will make the trip: M. Lindberg, Paul Dahl, Buzz Battelson, Bob Booren, Tom Fuller, Scotty Cameron and Haakon Christianson and Manager Alvin Christofferson. The first game played by the local boys will be at 2 p. m.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

Work of the state highway department in 1933 and 1934, as outlined in its biennial report just issued, includes the following:

Grading, 529 miles; graveling, 742 miles; bituminous surfacing, 451 miles; paving, 154 miles; paving base, 127 miles; shouldering, 148 miles; new bridges, 54 bridges widened, 39; bridges rebuilt or repaired, 633; brade crossings eliminated, 27; dangerous center piers eliminated in underpasses, 13 In 1935, the report says, it is hoped to eliminate all remaining center piers on the trunk system.

Official mileage of the system by types, is shown as follows: Total system, 11,339 miles, which is made up of 2,686 miles of concrete paving, 101 miles of bitumious pavement, 3,086 miles of bituminous treated gravel, 4,520 miles of untreated gravel. 74 miles of graded dirt road and 872 miles of ungraded dirt road. A considerable portion of the graveled roads, the report states, hardly comes up to that classification because the graveling is so light and is on inferior grades or foundations. Much of this type of road was added to the system in the 1934 expansion.

Owing to federal regulations governing most of the highway construction of the past biennium, the work was brokein up into many small projects widely scattered over the state. This was done as on employment measure and resulted in providing more jobs, says the report, but it also increased the cost of the work.

The report was presented to Governor Olson by N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, and copies were supplied to the legislature.

YOUNG WORKERS' EFFORTS TO EVADE LABOR SERVICE IN VAIN

Berlin (TIS)—The plight of Germany's yong workers under 25 years of age is assuming serious proportions. Under the Nazi labor plan millions of them have been forced to give up their jobs in favor of older workers. They are now incorporated into the labor service. The labor service in its present form simply fulfills the role which the old German army played in the compulsory military training the German citizens. Only young workers who have been active members of the Nazi movement for a long time will be able to retain their jobs.

As a last means of saving themselves from forced labor, many young workers have sought refuge in marriage, since the law specifies that workers taking care of a family and relatives are exempt from the labor service. The flight has become so serious to the government's labor plans that a new ruling has just been made public to the effect that "emergency marriages" will not be considered an excuse nor will they afford exemption from compulsory enrollment in the labor service.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK AT NORAHWEST SCHOOL BEING ARRANGED FOR MAR. 23-28

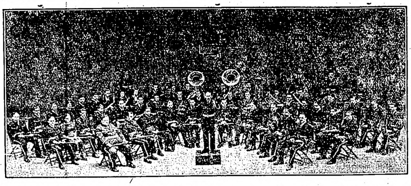
Commencement Week activities at the Northwest School of Agriculture will open Saturday, March 23, and close Thursday evening, March 28. The opening day will be devoted to the annual inter-class field meet in which members of the various classes will compete for class honors.

The baccalaureate sermon is scheduled for Sunday, March 24, with the declamatory and extemporaneous speaking contest scheduled for the following evening. This contest will include four sections: oratory, dramatic reading, extemporaneous speaking, and humorous reading, with one representative from each class entering each of the final contests. The following evening, March 26, members of the senior class will be honored at a special reception to be held at the home of Superintendent and Mrs. A. A. Dowell on the campus.

Wednesday evening, March 27, will be devoted to a concert recital by the department of music under the direction of Misses Katherine Hennig, Constance Lane and Grace Warue. Three special events will be held on the closing day of Commencement week. The alumni dinner will be held during the noon hour. During the afternoon the senior class will hold their annual class day exercises, this being a traditional feature of commencement week. During the evening Honorable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, Ontario, Can. will deliver the commencement address, following which Superintendent A. A. Dowell will present diplomas to members of the senior and advanced classes and scholarship and other awards to honor students. Registrar J. W. Mlinar has announced 56 seniors and 34 advanced, making a total of 90 students eligible for graduation this year. Enrolment at the Northwest School this year has been the second largest in the history of the institution, being exceeded only by the record established in 1929-30.

JERSEY SOCIALISTS START LABOR SCHOOL AT NEWARK

NEWARK—The New Jersey Labor School, sponsored by the Socialist party, will begin its first term here March 1. All sessions will be held at 1085 Broad st. Clases will be offered by August Tyler, Phil Heller, Irving Brown, Herbert Zam and Lazar Becker. Special lectures and forums will be held by outstanding people in the labor and Socialist movement.



Concordia College Band which will play a concert under the auspices of the T. R. F. Municipal Band at the auditorium Sunday, March 10

NEW ULM TRANSIENTS BUILD ARTIFICIAL LAKE

Some 80 men in the transient camp at New Ulm are clearing the bed for the proposed Cottonwood lake, near the golf course. Cutting of trees will be finished this winter, and in the spring all the stumps and debris will be removed. The state, through its executive council, has authorized the expenditure of $58,000 for the purchase of lands to be flooded. Almost $26,000 already has been paid to some owners.

TIME TO START SPRING POULTRY BREEDING SAYS N. W. SCHOOL EXPERT

It is not too early for poultry producers to arrange their special breeding pens for hatching purposes this spring. The superior females should be placed in special breeding pens and mated with males of approved quality and breeding, Such mating should begin at least three weks before eggs are to be kept for hatching purposes, as this will insure high fertility. According to A. M. Pilkey poultryman at the Northwest Experiment Station, the selection should be based not only upon color, type, freedom from standard breed defects and general bodily health, but also with emphasis on superior egg production. The birds should exceed body requirements for the breed and produce eggs of uniform color and size averaging not less than 23 ounces per dozen.

Mr. Pilkey states that best results are secured when the birds are segregated into comparatively small groups. The number of males required varies considerably by breed, size of flock, season of year, and general health and vigor of the birds. In the case of light breeds, such as Leghorns, one male should be placed with every fifteen females, while with the heavier breeds, such as Rocks and Reds, Mr. Pilkey recommends one male to every ten females and with such as Orpingtons, one male to eight females.

Many poultry raisers attempt to improve their flocks by mass breeding. According to Mr. Pilkey this method is not to be recommended. Improvement can be brought about more quickly by special breeding pens where superior males can be mated to highest producing females. The flock should be culled systematically some time in August and again during the following spring. All who are interested in flock improvement should secure a copy of Special Bulletin 150, "Culling for Egg Production," through the office of the local county agent or by writing to the Northwest Experiment Station, Crookston.

FAR-REACHING SOCIALIST PROGRAM IS BEFORE WSCONSIN ASSEMBLY

Madison, Wis.—A Socialist bill forf the creation of the Wisconsin Production corporation, to purchase and acquire natural resources, to engage in enterprises to obtain raw materials, to buy, distribute and sell, and to manufacture all the products necessary for the "American standard of living.' has been introduced in the state asembly.

This bill is the central aim of a broad Socialist program being prepared by the party's legislative committee. The program includes a state-owned bank, a state-owned and operated marketing agency for farm products, a state owned and operated power system and a demand for a modernized constitution which will permit the state to engage in an industry if it sees fit.

20 PERCENT OF TRUCKS STOPPED OVERWEIGHT

Twenty per cent of trucks stopped recently by the State highway patrol have been overweight, according to a highway department bulletin. Of 425 trucks stopped in various parts of the state, principally at Anoka, Breckenridge, St. Cloud, Farmington and along Trunk Highway No. 61 north of the Twin Cities, 82 were from a few pounds to six and a half tons overweight. Heavy damage can be done to highways in softened condition as the spring breakup nears, and the patrol is now stopping and weighing trucks in all parts of the state, Of the 82 truck drivers found violating the law, all were taken into court and fined.

The Beer Parlor And the Saloon

Women and Children are Now Large, if not the Largest, Consumers

By W. G. Calderwood

Tradition sets 1862 as the date when one half of one per cent alcohol was made the dividing line between intoxicating and non-intoxicating liquor. And there seems to be quasi-historical grounds for the statement that it was the brewers who demanded that definition to protect them from bootleggers and blindpiggers who otherwise would traffic in light beer, under the claim that it was not intoxicating. In upholding the definition, the Supreme Court of the United States held that "legislation and decisions of the highest courts deem it impossible effectively to enforce either prohibition or regulatory laws unless there is a rigid classification of beverages.".

Contrary to general public belief, there is no federal law defining intoxicating beverages. Since 1862 one half of one per cent has been the definition under a regulation of the treasury department, for revenue purposes. This regulation was enacted into law in the Volstead Act, but when that was repealed, the authority for the definition fell back again into rule of the internal revenue department.

While the federal government never defined liquors containing less than 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight as non-intoxicating, many of the state legislatures did enact that provision into law early in 1933. It is claimed by many informed people that this false definition is responsible for the major part of the drinking and drunkenness among present day women and children. In the pre-prohibition days liquor was legally accessible to men only. Under the deceptive definition, it is openly sold, in many states, to practically all who can pay for it without regard to age or sex.

The prey of the old saloon was men, young and old. The modern saloon, protected by the legal fraud that misdefines beer, which constituted nine-tenths of the liquor business prior to prohibition, feeds its greed fat largely if not chiefly on the blood of childhood and motherhood.

NAZI LABOR UNITS UNDERGO DRASTIC CHANGES

Munich (TIS)—Changes of Far-reaching importance have taken place in the N.S.B.O., the National Socialist shop cell organization, during recent months. The headquarters of the organization, which was instrumental in bringing the labor movement under the Nazi whip, has been moved from berlin to Munich. Its newly appointed leader is a Dr. Hupfauer, entirely unknown in the labor ranks. After the systematic curtailment of the influence which the N.S.B.O. exercised during 1933 and the early part of 1934, it seems now that new attempts are being made to revive it as police force of the party in the factories. The members of the organization keep constant check on their fellow workers and report every sign of unrest and grumbling to the Nazi superiors. The N.S.B.O. serves also as a highly efficient instrument for sifting all candidates for jobs in the Nazi state and party machinery.

MINNESOTA IKES TO MAKE CHICAGO TREK

Minnesota's Izaak Walton League chapters are making plans too send representatives to the annual convention of the organization which will be held in Chicago April 11, 12 and 13.

Highlights of the conventoin will be a declaration of support for restoration of waterfowl numbers, including a closed season if necessary; restoration of marshlands; a nation-wide plan to control water pollution through the establishment of district watershed boards, and the perpetuation of the salmon and steelhead fisheries of the Pacific coast.

March 20th, 1935

March 20th is the date we have set aside for our annual spring program and entertainment, to which we invite all our friends and customers.

Our plans for this annual event are much the same as in the past. Only this year we will have talkie movies. We will have lunch at noon and want you to plan to spend as much of the day with us as possible and we shall try to make it interesting from morning until night.

We have a lot of new machines, tractors and equipment, that we want you to see and know you will be interested to learn of progress made in this equipment to improve agriculture and rural conditions.

Many have paid us the compliment that our annual event is just as interesting as any of the Pioneer Days, Whisker Club celebrations or even the Automobile Show and the annual fair. So let's all plan for March 20th. Come and help us make it a great day again.

EVER SINCE THE BEGINNING

Ever since the first settlers landed in this section of the country there have been McCormick and Deering machines in use here and it has fallen our lot to serve this territory in furnishing this outstanding line of farm equipment and we feel it is our duty in continuing this service to give satisfactory repair service. So this year we are putting in almost $15,000 stock of repair parts, in special effort to please and to serve our customers well. We know that we could make more money by cutting down on our investment in stock of repairs, but believe that our trade will appreciatethese facts, and that our service on repairs backed by the best farm equipment made will warrant your patronage on your new equipment.

TRACTOR POWER

If you will investigate, you will find it is a fact that the International Harvester Company do underrate all of their tractors, as well as trucks and engines. The 10-20 McCormick-Deering tractor, for instance, has always been represented as a two-plow tractor, but we have gone into the field with this 10-20 in demonstrations against so-called three-plow tractors many times and this same 10-20 will take the three plow load against any of them. There is no better way to find out tractor power and value than actual tests, and we are always willing to give demonstrations. McCormick-Deering Tractors are outstanding tractor values.

"F12"

Fast and every day "F12" is becoming a name in itself, which every farmer knows means the latest addition and outstanding value of McCormick-Deering Farmall tractors, and if it is not a McCormick-Deering, it is not a Farmall.

The "F12" is outstanding, because it is small and does a big job for less money. It is the wonder two plow tractor and suited especially for all regular farm jobs in this section as no other tractor ever did. We have a limited quantity bought on which we can save you $50.00 of the present price on these "F12" tractors, and the same saving on all other McCormick-Deering tractors for a limited time only.

PHOSPHATE

We urge the placing of all orders for treble strength Superphosphate and other mixtures of fertilizer at this time. We are placing our order with the mills in the near future and must gauge our shipments in line with quantity sold. We cannot afford to carry this material in stock. No farmer can afford not to use Phosphate. Phosphate pays big returns.

The loudest denouncers of strikers—those who declare that they ought to be put down by force if necessary, are to be found among the class who have grown rich through extortion backed by force.

The very men who are now calling so loudly for maintaining by the bayonet, if necessary, the liberty to work, are the most strenuous supporters of a system which denies the liberty to work.—Henry George.

THE TURNOVER TAX AGAIN

We have a letter from Gustav Gunstenson of Oklee, wherein he takes us to task for our views and statements about the Turnover tax as expressed in this column two weeks ago. Mr. Gunstenson's letter is found in another column on this page. The views which Mr. Gunstenson expresses are interesting because his logic is so decidedly illogical, and because altho he is, according to his own words a farmer, and therefore a producer, and a member of the class which is always the loser under any system of taxation which taxes earned cumulations and chance exchange on the same basis or even more drastically than it taxes unearned cumulated values, he has swallowed hook, line and sinker just the philosophy which "Wall Street" and the "Kept Press would have him swallow, and is proud of it.

If Mr. Gunstenson has been a reader of the Forum for any length of time he must know, we are sure, that we have consistently favored every measure brought forward designed to assist the hard pressed home owners and farmers to keep their homes and farms. We favored the Moratorium Law because it would tend to retard the all-too-rapid trend of tenantry. We favored the taxing of homes and homesteads on a lower valuation than business property, and we have on several occasions voiced the opinion that homes and farms up to a reasonable value, say $4,000 should be exempt from taxation because it would tend to encourage home and farm ownership among the common people.

The fact that the Farm Bureau Federation has endorsed the turnover tax does not necessarily prove its members to be more enlightened than the members of other farm organizations, Mr. Gunstenson. We might mention that the Farmers National Cooperative and Educational Union and its various state organizations are unequivocally opposed to the turnover or sales tax and are fighting it hammer and tongs. And they have never had to apologize for lack of brains, nor for the acts of their national officers.

We repeat what we said before that the banks, mortgage companies, loan companies and insurance companies were in the past opposed to any change in the tax system, regarding the property tax as at present constituted as sacred. So sacred in fact that a tax on net incomes was considered blasphemy. All because they did not have to pay the real estate tax. Now when their possession of land rather than paper is passing the burden on them they are much exercised over the conditions of the overburdened taxpayers and want to shift to a gross earnings tax. So they may own real estate without the heavy tax burden. For a producer; a farmer or a workingman to favor the turnover tax as against the real estate tax, is if he is a property owner to choose between tweedlededee and tweedlededum. Would you rather fried than cooked?

The "simplicity" of the turnover tax would surprise you. If you as a farmer drove to town with some of your commorities, just as you no doubt do quite often, and delivered five gallons of cream at the creamery the buttermaker would test your cream and figure your return at market price. Then he would deduct one half of one percent tax. You would deliver those ten bushels of potatoes to Melby Brothers and they would also pay you market price for the spuds, but under the law would have to hold out the tax. Peter Bergeron would also have to hold out the tax on your five bushels of onions. J. Melby would have to do the same when you sold him a steer. At the end of every three months these firms would be required to turn over the tax collected from you and the hundreds of other farmers from whom they may buy commodities to the county treasurer with their affidavits. You will be required to also report to the treasurer the fact that you sold them your commodities and the amount of each transaction. Its simplicity is astounding. So is its fairness. We are sure you would jump at the opportunity of paying a tax of one-half of one percent on the sale of one hundred bushels of wheat at 50 cents per bushel if your production cost on that wheat was 75 cents a bushel.

There is no question that the real estate tax, the personal property tax and the sales tax, or turnover tax are cumulative. Business pays no taxes that it can pass on to the consumer. Economists are generally agreed that there is only one fair tax and that is the net income tax. The graduated Net Income Tax, is the only tax, that lays the burden according to ability to pay. It is the only tax that attempts to tax the unearned income of swollen fortunes accoording to the degree in which it may be theoretically unearned when it exceeds certain limits.

We don't want to jump from the frying pan into the fire, we want a different tax system than the real estate tax, but we want the graduated net income tax and we will accept no quack substitute.

THE JOURNAL HEARS ITS MASTER S VOICE

It seems to us that in the dim and distant past (not too dim and not too distant) the Minneapolis Journal raised its hands with holy unction and proclaimed to the world and all its inhabitants (those who would listen) that in its pious concern over the morals of its readers it would refrain from accepting liquor advertising. It would seem that the "copy boy" spoke without consulting his master, the advertising manager, for lo, and last week the Journal blossomed out with a nice big four (or was it five) column whiskey advertisement. And strange to say, no editorial announcing that someone had changed their mind accompanied it.

And so Lucifer fell from Grace and it leaves more room for the few remaining non-liquor advertising newspapers like the Forum to flap their snow-white wings. We never liked the Journal's company, anyway.

THE READER'S ROSTRUM

Oklee, Minn.
Feb. 25. 1935.

Editor, Thief River Falls Forum,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:

In your issue of Feb. 21, you have an editorial about the Gross Turnover Tax. containing some statements which I thing would be well to sprinkle some salt on. Evidently in your avowed belief in taxing the hell out of companies owning land and home properties, there is to be taken little consideration of the thousands of farmers and home owners still in possession of their properties. No credit is to be given them for having put more thought or shown greater sacrifice in order to keep themThey are just to keep on forever paying a greater percentage of taxes in relation to their income then any of the lower salaried class. It is significent that the Farm Bureau and other enlightened farmers are coming out in favor of the turnover tax. So it simmers down to the conclusion that labor alone is unwilling to pay their just share of taxation.

But to get back to the editor's idea that mortgage companies are so anxious to get or retain actual possession of mortgaged property. I think I'm safe in asserting that the experiences of the last few years have made them feel a pathetic reluctance to entertain any such ambitious. That they have had to take over such properties show clearly that the former owners have found out to their sorrow, that a system of taxation and ursury that takes no consideration of ability to pay to be too much to contend with. As it refers to labor, it seems to me that the tax looms so prodigously only too those who can see no further than their noses. There is no business that has tax or multiplicity of taxes to consider and check off on their operating cost. The simplicity of the turnover tax makes them able to check off the exact amount without needing to add some extra sums for good measure. The fact is that with the broader tax base they are likely to pay a smaller sum total sum than heretofore. It would give the farmer and business man with a small turnover the squarest deal they have ever had. I wonder who wouldn't jump at the chance of paying only $50. tax on a $10,000 gross income or coresponding amounts. The implication that the turnover tax alone of all tax systems has a cumulative effect as goods pass from hand to hand shows either lack of logic or deliberate misinterpretation. The same goes when it concerns interstate commerce.

As a last bait for the gullible some of the labor element see fit to weep crocodile tears of it being a "tax on poverty" when in actuality the aim is to make everybody who receive any assumed benefit from government pay for it in equal proportion. That same element seem really to be so opposed to property that they would rather keep on taxing it till it materializes into some communistic form, which a glance into tax delinsuent lists show to be more fact than theory. In closing I wish to say your publication is stimulationg and I cordially wish your continued success. These are the views of a farmer and not a servant of Wall Street or the "Kept press."

Yours cordially,
Gustav Gunstenson

WHAT FOOLS WE MORTALS BE
By S. O. Sanderson

The Supreme Court has rendered its decision in the Gold Clause Cases, but the mess we are in, still remains.

The cases have at least proven the terrible curse a Nation brings upon itself when its government legislates a certain value into GOLD or any other commodity, for the purpose of creating money to serve as a medium of exchange.

Entering into contracts for the future payent of money in GOLD constitutes SHORT SELLING in its worst form.

During the war our government was inveigled into the execution of contracts (bonds) to deliver fifty billion dollars (viz: 25½ billion in bonds and 24½ bililon in interest thereon) in GOLD within a period of thirty years.

When these bonds were issued, there was only three billion dollars of Gold in the U. S., and less than seven billion dollars in the world.

The average annual production of Gold was then and is now, less than fifty million dollars in the U. S. and less than 385 million dollars in the world.

Assuming that the world production would continue at this rate during this 30 year period, there would then (at $20.67 an ounce) be only 19 billion dollars worth of Gold in the world with which to fulfil not only our fifty billion dollars in contracts, but also hundreds of billions of dollars in other similar contracts throughout the world.

Can you imagine a civilization so stupid as to enter into the wholesale execution of contracts to deliver IN GOLD at least twenty or more times the total amount of Gold available in the whole world?

We might well exclaim, "WHAT FOOLS WE MORTALS BE!"

The Farmers' Union at Washington

Washington, D. C.
February 28, 1935

A bill is about to be introduced in the House which provides for increasing the flax acreage in this country from about one million acres to approximately three million acres, by making benefit payments to growers of about 65 cents per bushel. The funds for the benefit payments would be provided by lowering the tariff on flaxseed 32½ cents, and substituting a processing tax of 35 cents per bushel, as well as imposing a compensating tax on imported oils which compete with linseed oil. This also make possible crop insurance to the extent of 65 cents per bushel on the historic production.

Approximately five million bushels of Flaxseed were produced in the United States last year, while about fifteen million bushels were imported. The difference between these figures and our normal consumption of flaxseed being absorbed by importations of oils such as China-wood oil, hempseed oil, fish oil, etc., which are now admitted duty free.

It is calculated that by imposing a 35 cent processing tax on Flaxseed and competing oils it will be possible to bring the returns up to parity, which at the present time is about $2.15.

The increase of two mililon acres is more than can be accomplished in 1935. This opens the way for future legislation to make it possible for the American farmer to take over the entire American market, if he so desires.

The Northwest Farers Union Legislative Committee are exerting every effort to bring about a worth while program for barley and rye.

"It is not the policy of the Farm Credit Administration to require a farmer to sign a mortgage for past seed and feed loans to become eligible for 1935 seed loan," said Governor Wm. I. Meyers today, in a group meeting with the members of the northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee.

Many complaints by farmers in regard to irregularities of government field men in disqualifying farmers for 1935 seed loans unless they first signed a mortgage on 1935 crops to secure previous seed and feed loans was brought to the attention of Governor Meyers by the Northwest group, and they were advised that definite instructions have been sent to all regional directors and field men to this effect.

The $60,000,000.00 emergency seed loan bill for 1935 seed loans has now been signed by the President and become law, and is at present before the Appropriations Committee to provide funds. Assurances have been made by the Farm Credit Administration, who will administer this fund, that as soon as this money is turned over to them it will be made available in the territories where these loans are needed with the greatest possible speed. The Farmers Union legislative group at Washington, who represent a large portion of the drouth area, have been following this matter up since their arrival here, pointing out the need for haste in order to get the farmers loans cleared in time for this spring's seeding.

Seed loans under the Emergency Seed loan act may be obtained by any bona fide farmer who has no other source of credit. Security for the loans will be taken in the form of liens on 1935 crops in the case of marketable crops, and livestock mortgage or milk check assignment in the case of feed crops.

Education in Russia

Word comes that the Soviet government has laid plans for the construction of 374 new schools. at an outlay to exceed 223 million rubles. This is the immediate result of the movement for popular education which swept that country after the revolution.

In Czaist days Russia was one of the most illiterate countries; now it is one of the most literate. Illiteracy is being cut down steadily, and in a few years the Sovets hope to have a very small per cent. Under the rule of Czars and the Greek Catholic church, Russia was a land of darkness; now, under the banner of socialism, the whole country is moving forward with a pace that astonishes the entire world.

—O—

Change the System

". . . whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends (life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness), it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundations on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness . . . It is their right, it is their duty to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security." —From the Declaration of Independence.

Take this any way you like; the meaning remains the same; when one form of government becomes antagonistic to the masses of people, it should no longer be tolerated by those masses. In this enlightened age, the masses are awakening to this fact; new declarations of independence are being made each day. When the pressure becomes great enough, we'll have a nice little revolution and get something else than what we have. What we will get depends a great deal on how enlightened the people become between now and the Day.

—O—

Surplus Value is the Ogre

What is the cause of the depression? At the risk of becoming dogmatic, tiresome, repetitious, I indict what Marx called Surplus Value as the perpetrator of the mess we're in. This theory should be reviewed every now and then—capitalist economists do pull it out into the open once in a while to see if conditions discredit Marx's idea. However, conditions show more and more that Marx was right and likely will be right for as far ahead as we can see now.

Surplus Value is no more or less than the extra amount tacked on in an exchange of commodities, known as "profit." It has no basis whatsoever in logic; it is merely a tribute, exacted by one person without giving something in return. Because of it, a laborer cannot buy back the product of his labor. Because of it, a farmer finds himself trading one hide for the small fraction of a hide used in a pair of shoes, and a bushel of wheat for a still smaller fraction of a bushel of wheat used in the manufacture of breakfast foods.

In a perfect exchange system, a commodity could exchange hands several times and have the same exchange power—no more, no less—until age would depreciate its use-value. There would be no object in its passing through many hands. From producer to consumer would be the usual course. In a capitalist society, we exchange commodities; in a cooperative society, we would be exchanging human services.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

"HAPPY DAYS?"

Many people sang, in all sincerity, "Happy Days Are Here Again," when the 18th Amendment was repealed. Now they are learning to question that statement, as they see the increase in motor accidents during week ends,—which should be "happy days",—or in the late afternoons,—which should be "happy hours",—and realize that in both cases the happiness of too many people is being decreased by accidents due to liquor.

"Increased traffic alone is not the chief cause of week-end accidents. The unmistakable role of alcohol is demonstrated by the tremendous wek-end peak in "alcohol accidents' while the others increased but slightly . . . .

"The imbiber (of alcoholic drinks) reaches a much higher peak (of accidents) between 6 and 7 p. m., which is probably the result of the 'cocktail hour' and another peak at midnight."—From address at the annual convention of the American Medical Association (1934) by Herman A. Heise, M. D., Pathologist, Columbia Hospital, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Reprinted by permission from the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Try to figure out how many accidents due to liquor are not so recognized or reported. Few police forces are equipped to make the tests necessary to determine "intoxication." Yet scientists are demonstrating that the driver who has had only a drink or two—just enough to dull his judgment and control while increasing his self-confidence,— is often more danerous than the one who is obviously "drunk."

TRYING TO MAKE YOU SEE
By J. A. Wayland

(Selected from No. 788—"Appeal to Reason"—Issue of 1911.)

Let me put it to you this way and see if you cannot get the idea: I get an income of several thousands a year. I live in a good home, well furnished, with large grounds, a team, a man to do the work and servants in the house. My income pays for all these things. Where does it come from? From the rent of business properties in several cities. The merchants pay me the income and you pay the merchants in the price of goods. In fact, you pay, indirectly of course, but nevertheless, surely, my expenses. You pay my taxes, my grocery and dry goods bill, my servants, my traveling expenses and all.

That is not all. You working people made every brick, made every plank and every pane of glass, manned the railroads to bring them to the place where you erected every building—and you virtually made me a present of them under the system you support at every election. I did nothing but play the game you call private ownership—a game you do not even know the rules of and consequently lose all the time.

With my income I can build another block every year and you will pay me a greater income. And then think of the tens of thousands who are doing this to you many millions who don't know how to play the game.

This is not a fable or a fairy tale—it is a fact as certainly as you are reading this paragraph. I have obtained all this property legally but not through moral right. It was not right.

What I ask is, why do you support a social system that permits me or any other citizen to do this—to get something for nothing—to get an income without producing it?

If the rich were to give the poor their property this system would remain just at it is, and a few would soon have the wealth again. It would not change anything, except to make society more corrupt, and the many more helpless, waiting for another division. It would be the worst thing that could happen. Socialists are opposed to dividing up the property of the world. It is divided up now and a few get it all.

I want Socialism because I would get better off under it. my children and grandchildren would be better off and safer than under the present system with all that I could ever hope to leave them. And yours would be just as well off as mine. I am not a philanthropist. I am not teaching these things for love of others as much as for the safety of my own blood and brood. Your children are just as dear to you as mine to me. You are entitled to just as good a chance in this world as my children or any other man's children. If you are poor, if you haven't the means, you know you cannot give them as good a chance. You may have a genius in a child, but if it cannot get the conditions to develop that faculty, the child is impaired and the world loses the benefit through that lack of opportunity.

Say, brother, are you so dull that you cannot see this statement of real facts, this confession?

Jim: I've alus noticed th' th' harded 'tis t' git likker the more people drink.

Tim Yeah! Same here. I've always noticed that the more it rains, the dryer the weather!

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

The wealth of the U. S. is not in stocks of bonds, not in good roads and transportation or in skyscrapers, nor in a federal relief chest, but in character.

The one institution that stands for character-creativeness more than any other institution is the Church.

The problem before the world today is not, firstly, the reconstruction of economic prosperity but a re-contacting with the ideals of characters.

We are suffering from a structural collapse and a good part of the whole structure that made possible these United States will have to be rebuilt.

Old Fashioned virtues that would work wonders these days are honor, neighborliness, reverence, justice, mercy, goodwill, unselfishness, cooperation, faith, industry, sharing, initiative, enthusiasm.

The materials out of which the social structure is built are men and women and the strength of these materials is the strength of their character.

Character — building — promotion should be a community's and a nation's great abjectives.

SPEAKIN' O' FRIENDS by Lawrence Hawthorne

Old friends ain't the best? Well, say,
I ain't never felt that way!
Life has taught me that a man
Ain't yer pal unless you can Turn the leaves o' memory
An' recall when you an' he Helped t' bear each other's load
Over rough spots on the road!

Old friends ain't the best? Well now,
I don't get yer point, somehow!
Seems t' me that frien'ship grows
Somethin' like a river flows—
Runnin' deeper mile by mile,
Gettin' stronger all the while;
Seems like, when they travel far,
Friends can prove how good they are!

A BLOW TO REACTIONARIES
Bovey Press

During the appearance before the Legislature last week of Howard Hunter, regional administrator of the FERA, Representative McKinnon undertook to ask a very pertinent question. "Does the present relief administration and set-up in Minnesota meet the approval of the Federal Government?" McKinnon asked. "There might be a few points of disagreement on minor matters, but on the whole, I would say that the Federal Government is well satisfied with the relief administration in this state," Mr. Hunter replied. This should set at rest forever the sniping remarks from politically minded persons on relief administration in Minnesota.

So that the record is made clear for even the blind to see, Representative Mark Nolan inquired of Mr. Hunter if Minnesota in relief administration ranks on a par with other states. "I have been here only a short time," Mr. Hunter answered. "However I do not hesitate to say that Minnesota ranks at least on a par with any of the states."

But conservatives die hard. Not getting the answer he expected from Mr. Hunter, Representative McKinnon is said to have remarked to a newspaper man: "He doesn't understand the situation here." No, the government representative, whose business it is to find out how relief is administered, does not understand but the conservative and reactionary legislators, now engaged in the great political game of throwing dirt, understand perfectly.

AGAINST FASCISM AND WAR
The Cooperative Builder

Our co-operative organizations have been the recipients of various "united front" offers during the past few months. Some of these have been downright frauds. Most have been proposals that the cooperatives join mixed aggregations of organizations in a united drive against fascism and war.

It so happens that the Co-operative Movement with its one hundred and more millions of members in every country is the greatest force against war and fascism in the world today. It is doing the fundamental and RADICAL job of repossessing for the masses of people the economic bases of life by doing away with economic autocracy which alone feeds capitalism and war. It is one great champion of genuine democracy in all human relations, economical, moral, and social. Its internatioal creed is and has ever been founded upon the most insistent defense of peace. By its very nature it is neither a fly-by-night scheme nor a passing expression of protest or petition; it is the driving economic and social movement which already is recognized by millions the world over as the very alternative to fascism that the well-meaning united front proponents should be seeking.

Promoting united fronts against capitalism, fascism and war on incidental and superficial issues is often characteristic of those who themselves are not engaged in a more thoroughgoing or fundamental effort to oppose the profit system and its evils. But fascism and war never have been nor ever will be overcome by such means, and it would be a disservice to the masses of people if co-operators should join in deluding them with any belief that fascism and war can be effectively opposed in that way. On the contrary, our high privilegge and duty is to point out that they must go to the root of the evil by joining the co-operative and organized labor movements to help create the power necessary to end economic exploitation and social injustice through the substitution of democracy and peace for fascism and war.

MINNESOTA'S ROAD PROGRAM

Minnesota's road program can go ahead this year, on a greatly enlarged scadle, provided the automobile license fees are not again reduced by the legislature. Two years ago it was generally conceded that the reduction was wise. Direct Federal grants during these two years, enabled the road building program to go ahead to some extent. Now these Federal grants must be matched by the State receiving them. This can be done in Minnesota without any new burdens being added. Minnesota motorists know they have not been penalized in license fees charged the past several years. Leaving these fees as they are, will mean a lot of new construction, increased employment, more business for the business men and farmers. Surely, no real motorist can object to such a program, especially when he is not asked to pay more than the rate he agreed to pay when the road building program was adopted.—Exchange.

199 NOOSES FOR ST. PAUL
Austin American

In St. Paul, one hundred thirty-three House members and sixty-six (with the death of Senator Sullivan) senators make a total of one hundred ninety-nine representatives of the people who are now convening to make the state laws and determine on legislation for the next few years.

To date, three marches on the Capitol are planned: one by the Farm Holiday members, one by unemployed and one by needy young people. At the risk of being imprisoned for criminal syndicalism, we suggest these three bodies march on the legislature jointly and carry with them one hundred and ninety-nine nooses—each one labled with the name of one of the hundred ninty-nine representatives—and let them dangle over the balconies in the two chambers for the lawmakers to see. They might realize the people of the state mean business then.

So far all they've done is play politics. They've bellowed about communism in the schools, patronage, and other purely political subjects ever since the beginning of the present session. The next campaign is over a year away and legislative time right now is too valuable to be wasted on the 1936 campaign. It might give reactionaries a sardonic delight to tie Governor Olson's hands at every move he attempts to make, but that is not what they were elected for. They were elected to serve Minnesota. If they care to play hide and seek with the Governor, he'll give them a chance to in the next campaign.

We'll go even a bit further than suggesting that a hundred and ninety-nine nooses be exhibited in St. Paul; we'll go so far as to suggest that some of them be used—if necessary.

The political boss in the present state legislature is (republican) Roy Dunn. Two years ago he was the man who defeated the bill which would have prohibited women working over 54 hours a week. Like all other dutiful subjects of the special interests, he will, if he possibly can, defeat any legislation that is in the interest of the laboring man or woman, school teacher, farmer and independent business man. The special interests have strong lobbys at St. Paul, provided with effective ammunition and political old school republicans, like Dunn, to carry their water.—Bovey Press.

GOEBEL TOUR CANCELLED

Chicago—The national tour for George H. Goebel, announced several months ago, has been cancelled because of lack or response according to the Socialist party's national headquarters.

He: "Thousands of Chinese hogs were used last year to make paint brushes."

She: "Isn't it wonderful how they are training animals to make things?"

The drink problem is a problem of morals, and the comfort and happiness of the home. To the government it seems to be wholly a problem of revenue.

MAKING SURVEY OF RED LAKE WILD LIFE REFUGE

An intensive survey of conditions in the Red Lake Wild Life refuge located north of the Red Lakes was made last week by Chas. McFarlane, Deputy Director of the Division of fGame and Fish, in company with representatives of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey.

The Red Lake refuge is important to a wild life program in the State, it was pointed out by Erling Swenson, Division Director, because the only known herd of woodland caribou to be found within the entire United States, is located within its confines.

HUGE PLANTING PROGRAM FOR FEDERAL FORESTS

Production of 150 million seedlings to be used this season for planting in the national forests of the north central region is part of the federal forestry program planned in which Minnesota will share, according to Grover Conzet, State Forester.

Capacity of the Cass Lake Federal nursery is being used to aid in the growing of part of this planting stock which includes spruce, and Norway, white and jack pine. Seedlings will be used largely "in the rehabilitation of idle but potential forest areas recently acquired by the federal government under the present land acquisition program."

Grade A?
Grade B?
Grade C?
PEAS
GOVT. INSPECTOR

Pea Quality

WITH all the present agitation for dividing all canned foods into three fixed grades A, B and C, or making the labels on them so accurately descriptive that there can be no doubt of exactly what each can contains, it is interesting to speculate as to how these two alternative plans would apply to certain products.

Take peas for instance. There are two types of canned peas. One is a smooth skinned variety which is generally called in the trade the Early June or Alaska. The other is a wrinkled skin variety which is often referred to as the Sweet Pea. They are slightly different in flavor, but both are delicious.

The size of the pea is also a factor. Peas are packed according to their size and are numbered from 1 to 6. The No. 1 or Petit Pois are the smallest. No. 1 peas cost more than the other sizes, not because they are superior in flavor but because fewer of them are canned and because it costs more to can them.

A Puzzling Question

How could peas, with these peculiarities of production, be successfully graded A, B and C? As a matter of fact, many think the larger sized peas, for example, the 3, 4 and 5, are so superior in flavor that they use the No. 1 pea chiefly as a dainty garnish for steaks, chops and roasts. Some packers put up a blend of the three most flavorful sizes and call this "run of the pod" or "ungraded." Which of all these products should be labeled A and be the most expensive?

In the present grades—Fancy, Extra Standard and Standard—the difference is the amount of starch in the peas, but there are all those other factors to be considered.*

Canada also repealed, and according to a Toronto paper: "The City of Toronto, with 100,000 people on relief, is said to be spending $12,000,000 a year on alcoholic drink."

Almost Universal

"Should I marry a man who lies to me?"

"Lady, do you want to be an old maid?"—Farm Bureau Monthly.

During the last two weeks the work division of the Minnesota SERA asigned federal and local funds totaling over $2,200,000 to continue current, and initiate new relief employments, for 70,000 persons, it is announced by Walter G. MacGregor, state engineer.

Major projects just authorized at a cost of $76,975 are itemized as follows: Sewer extension in the city of New Ulm, cost $10,000; repairs to schools in Clay county, $8,820; improvements to the Litchfield opera house, 14,000; road grading in Blue Earth county, $26,155; and repairs to the East Grand Forks bridge, $18,000.

The repeal press is tremulously pleading yith the brewers to be good, and obey regulations. These pleas are sandwiched in between stern warnings, in shaky voice, that if they won't be good, prohibition will come back.

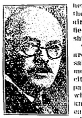
DEFECTIVE PAGE INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

Let Our Motto Be
GOOD HEALTH
BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

YOU CAN PASTEURIZE MILK



A city mother was telling a country mother how lucky she was that she could raise her baby where there was clean air and open fields and sunshine.

"I know these are important," said the country mother, "but you city people have pasteurized milk, while we never know what disease our babies will get in the milk they drink."

The country mother was right. Pasteurization of milk is one of the greatest boons to health that the city offers children. Milk is one of man's best foods, but it is also a good food for germs. Germs grow well in milk. Milk from cattle certified to be free from disease and handled by persons free from disease is good wholesome milk, but unless this certification of health has been made, then a family should not take any chances on milk that is used for drinking or in the preparation of uncooked food. Unpasteurized milk may of course be used safely in cooked or baked dishes.

Milk, as stated above, is a food in which many kinds of germs thrive. Some of these are harmless to man, but, unfortunately, many are decidedly harmful. Among these are the tuberculosis, typhoid fever, septic sore throat and infectious diarrhea germs.

Pasteur discovered that when he heated milk to a certain degree for a certain length of time, these harmful bacteria were destroyed and the milk was safe for drinking. This principle is the one used in the large commercial pasteurizing plants in the large cities.

In a survey made several years ago we learned that 70 per cent of the population in Illinois outside of Chicago was without benefit of pasteurization.

So in the research laboratory of the University of Illinois we worked out a plan that would allow for home pasteurization.

We devised two simple temperature indicators containing chemicals that would "clear" at the desired temperatures. By the first you can easily tell when the right heat point is reached; by the second when the danger point of coolness is reached and the milk is no longer safe for the baby.

The heat-telling indicator is a sausage-shaped glass tube 11 mm. in diameter and 45 mm. long, into which 400 mg. of palmitic acid is placed.

The cooling-point indicator is a glass tube 4½ mm. in diameter, approximately 8 inches in length, with a bulb blown at one end. This bulb is filled with menthol, and the open end of the tube sealed.

With these two tubes, a vacuum bottle of one quart capacity, and a pan of more than one quart capacity with a side lip to facilitate pouring of milk from pan into bottle, you are ready to go into the pasteurization business.

Pasteurization technique:

1. Clean out vacuum bottle with hot soap water several times. Rinse well with water about 160 degrees F., fill bottle with this water and let stand.
2. Wash the stopper well, place in a pan of water and boil for ten minutes. Pour water out of pan, leaving the clean stopper in the pan.
3. Clean the lipped pan well and pour a quart of strained milk into it. Milk should be less than 12 hours from the cows.
4. Drop indicator No. 1 into the milk. Place pan on stove and bring temperature of milk up slowly, stirring constantly with a clean spoon.
5. When the indicator becomes transparent, the temperature of the milk has reached 145. Remove milk from stove immediately and take out indicator with the spoon.
6. Pour the hot water out of the vacuum bottle.
7. Pour the hot milk into the bottle. Seal with stopper.
8. Set the bottle in a warm cupboard in the kitchen.
9. Do not use this milk until it has stood in the vacuum bottle for at least one hour.
10. When ready to use the milk, hold one end of Indicator No. 2 in the hand and put the bulb end down into the milk in the bottle. Hold for two to four minutes. If the milk is above 115, the bulb will clear. If below, it will remain opaque.
11. If the bulb clears, pour out enough milk for a feeding and replace the stopper, and put the bottle back into the cupboard.
12. If the bulb does not clear, the milk is unsafe for the baby. It can then be used in cooking or set aside to sour.

If this technique is followed carefully, the milk usually stays safe for about eight to ten hours so that a pasteurization in the morning and one in the evening will give the baby safe milk all the time.

Better Breakfasts

YES. There is a way to make that first breakfast dish of fruit different, and, oh, the difference it makes! The exclamation: "But this is something new!" is balm to the soul of the solicitous housewife who has to plan three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts a year. She'll hear it if she serves the following breakfast:

Orange Slices with Cranberry Jelly Cubes
Flaked Cereal with Cream
Buckwheat Cakes Syrup
Sausages
Coffee

The ingredients of the first dish consist of oranges and canned cranberry jelly.

Allow one medium orange for each person. Cut off peel, removing all the white fibre. Cut in slices crosswise and lay in an overlapping circle on plates. Cut some chilled cranberry jelly in small cubes, and pile about one heaping teaspoonful in center of each service of orange circles. This not only looks pretty, but the combination tastes mighty good.

Appetizing Coffee

The coffee that you serve at this breakfast should be of the kind you can't wait to taste—the kind the aroma of which is so tempting that you scald yourself with the first sip. It's easy to have coffee like that now that so many popular brands are put up in vacuum packed cans. These cans keep the coffee fresh until they are opened, and freshness is the principal thing—for fragrance, taste and strength—in the making of good coffee.

No oxygen can get to the coffee, you see, if it is enclosed in vacuum packed cans, and oxygen is the chief enemy of coffee. When exposed to it, the coffee gases quickly evaporate, and much of the taste and aroma is soon gone.*

year. He showed that in 1934; the farmers constituted one-third of the nation's population; fed and clothed the nation; was industry's best customer; paid 40 per cent of all taxes collected from all sources; and received only 9 per cent of the national income.

In his address, John Brandt asserted that the great problem befose America is to achieve an adequate and economical distribution which will enable the people of this country to attain and maintain the highest standard of living and continued prosperity. The distribution must be arranged so the producer gets the major part of the price paid by the consumer. Cooperatives like the Land O' Lakes are doing this, he stated. whereever they exist, the farmer is getting a bigger share of the consumer's dollars than where there is no cooperative established. A check-up will prove the truth of the statement, he continued.

Mr. Brandt discussed what has become known nationally as the Brandt Plan of surplus and production control. This includes:

Taking marginal lands out of production.

Fixing a minimum price on the major farm commodities.

Creation of a surplus poll which shall absorb the surplus at this minimum price.

Providing for advancement by the government of a billion dollars as a revolving fund to defray expenses of the surplus pool, the expenses of operation to be paid by an equalization assessed on major farm crops.

Prowlers Maintain Their Standing in Dis. Tourney

Fisher was never considered very strong in this district. The game between East Grand Forks and Plummer should be very close with the East Siders having a slight advantage due to their stronger reserve power. An upset here would not be considered extraordinary by Plummer fans, however.

In the other semi-final game the Prowlers meet the Crookston high cagers, these two teams having defeated Climax and Oslo, respectively. Climax, an admittedly weak team, was defeated 84 to 2 by the locals in the final game last night with the Prowlers scoring almost at will, while Crokston defeated Oslo, a team of unknown power, 67 to 13 and experiencing no difficulty in doing so. The outcome of this game between Crookston and Thief River Falls will decide the championship, according to dopesters who have decided Crookston a shade better than the East Siders and just a trifle weaker than the Prowlers. This dope may be all wrong but it is the way fans would have it, and so it is.

The first game will be played at eight o'clock tonight and the second game will start at about nine p. m. Fans are urged to get their tickets and to be at the Auditorium as early as posible if they expect to get a seat, Mr. Bye stated.

Scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture who have made a careful study of tomato varieties in connection with the identification of the principal commercial varieties, found that the ideal red color of a variety does not, however, always develop to the same extent in different regions. Under abnormally high temperatures, or when the fruits are exposed to the direct rays of the sun without shade from leaves, the characteristic rich red may not develop. Varieties that are of a rich brilliant scarlet in the central and northern regions of the country tend toward a grenadine color under the higher temperatures of the South and Southwest.

Canned Tomatoes Right Color

The rich red of canned tomatoes testifies to the fact that growers who have produced these perfect tomatoes for canners' use, have coddled their crop, allowing them to grow under conditions which are best suited to their complexions. Not only have their flavors developed at their best, under these conditions of proper growing, but their health-giving content has also increased.*

HAMILTON'S

Let Our Motto Be

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

YOU CAN PASTEURIZE MILK

A city mother was telling a country mother how lucky she was that she could raise her baby where there was clean air and open fields and sunshine.

"I know these are important," said the country mother, "but you city people have pasteurized milk, while we never know what disease our babies will get in the milk they drink."

The country mother was right. Pasteurization of milk is one of the greatest boons to health that the city offers children. Milk is one of man's best foods, but it is also a good food for germs. Germs grow well in milk. Milk from cattle certified to be free from disease and handled by persons free from disease is good wholesome milk, but unless this certification of health has been made, then a family should not take any chances on milk that is used for drinking or in the preparation of uncooked food. Unpasteurized milk may of course be used safely in cooked or baked dishes.

Milk, as stated above, is a food in which many kinds of germs thrive. Some of these are harmless to man, but, unfortunately, many are decidedly harmful. Among these are the tuberculosis, typhoid fever, septic sore throat and infectious diarrhea germs.

Pasteur discovered that when he heated milk to a certain degree for a certain length of time, these harmful bacteria were destroyed and the milk was safe for drinking. This principle is the one used in the large commercial pasteurizing plants in the large cities.

In a survey made several years ago we learned that 70 per cent of the population in Illinois outside of Chicago was without benefit of pasteurization.

So in the research laboratory of the University of Illinois we worked out a plan that would allow for home pasteurization.

We devised two simple temperature indicators containing chemicals that would "clear" at the desired temperatures. By the first you can easily tell when the right heat point is reached; by the second when the danger point of coolness is reached and the milk is no longer safe for the baby.

The heat-telling indicator is a sausage-shaped glass tube 11 mm. in diameter and 45 mm. long, into which 400 mg. of palmitic acid is placed.

The cooling-point indicator is a glass tube 4½ mm. in diameter, approximately 8 inches in length, with a bulb blown at one end. This bulb is filled with menthol, and the open end of the tube sealed.

With these two tubes, a vacuum bottle of one quart capacity, and a pan of more than one quart capacity with a side lip to facilitate pouring of milk from pan into bottle, you are ready to go into the pasteurization business.

Pasteurization technique:

1. Clean out vacuum bottle with hot soap water several times. Rinse well with water about 160 degrees F., fill bottle with this water and let stand.
2. Wash the stopper well, place in a pan of water and boil for ten minutes. Pour water out of pan, leaving the clean stopper in the pan.
3. Clean the lipped pan well and pour a quart of strained milk into it. Milk should be less than 12 hours from the cows.
4. Drop indicator No. 1 into the milk. Place pan on stove and bring temperature of milk up slowly, stirring constantly with a clean spoon.
5. When the indicator becomes transparent, the temperature of the milk has reached 145. Remove milk from stove immediately and take out indicator with the spoon.
6. Pour the hot water out of the vacuum bottle.
7. Pour the hot milk into the bottle. Seal with stopper.
8. Set the bottle in a warm cupboard in the kitchen.
9. Do not use this milk until it has stood in the vacuum bottle for at least one hour.
10. When ready to use the milk, hold one end of Indicator No. 2 in the hand and put the bulb end down into the milk in the bottle. Hold for two to four minutes. If the milk is above 115, the bulb will clear. If below, it will remain opaque.
11. If the bulb clears, pour out enough milk for a feeding and replace the stopper, and put the bottle back into the cupboard.
12. If the bulb does not clear, the milk is unsafe for the baby. It can then be used in cooking or set aside to sour.

If this technique is followed carefully, the milk usually stays safe for about eight to ten hours so that a pasteurization in the morning and one in the evening will give the baby safe milk all the time.

Vast Water Control Plan Is Mapped by the State SERA

To counteract the ravages of drainage and drouth in the past and present and prevent their recurrence through restoration of 12 lakes to normal levels by means of dams and diversion channels, a detailed engineering program has been prepared for execution and completion during 1935, announces Walter F. MacGregor, state engineer for the Minnesota SERA.

This specific program is exclusive of other important projects already being undertaken, such as the Whetstone river diversion to Big Stone Lake, and the flood control jobs involving the watersheds of the Lake Traverse-Bois de Sioux and the Lac Qui Parle regions, the state engineer pointed out.

Construction jobs will be done by labor from the SERA relief rolls, while costs of materials and land acquisitions will be borne by the state, and the communities and counties benefitting by the improvements, Mr. MacGregor added.

The following is a synopsis of the most noteworthy new projects, either being realized or in shape for launching.

Work is progressing on the Sibley Memorial Park lake in Blue Earth county at Mankato, where a 200-foot dam across the Blue Earth river will impound its waters at the junction with the Minnesota river. The lake will be 500 feet wide and about three miles long, giving the park a half mile front on the lake, thus affording visitors aquatic pastimes. The city of Mankato contributes $10,000 towards the aggregate cost of $40,000, with the SERA providing the difference in relief wages. About 100 workers are on the job, which should be finished before the end of April.

Actual operations will commence in a few weeks to bring back to its former beauty the Sleepy Eye Lake, now dry, in Brown county. A dam will be built in Brown county drainage ditch No. 5, and a canal will divert the water needed into the lake. The state executive council has appropriated $6,000 to purchase materials and secure rights of way for the channel. Labor to the extent of $15,000 will be furnished by the SERA. Several months will be required to complete the undertaking.

Of particular interest to the inhabitants in the Twin Cities area is a project aimed to save, from extinction, Lake Minnetonka and Minnehaha creek in Hennepin county. A dam will be built in the Crow river, near Mayer, from which a diversion channel will run into Lake Minnetonka, near Halstad Bay. Almost 30 billion gallons of water will be emptied into the lake, to raise the level six feet, back to normal. Controls in the dam will permit the free flow of water down the Crow river, when diversion into Lake Minnetonka is not necessary.

Minnehaha creek, fed by the overflow of Lake Minnetonka, will be running again, as soon as the level of the lake has been raised. Specifications being ready, the job can be started whenever agreement has been reached as to financing. More than 200 men can be kept busy one year on this project whose cost is figured at $840,000.

Great recreational advantages will accrue to the city of Morris, in Stevens county, from an artificial 200-acre lake to be constructed in its vicinity. Water will be made available through an 80-foot dam of the spillway type in the Pomme de Terre river. The SERA, the state, and the city of Morris share the cost.

Lake Emily, in Pope county, will be brought back to normal, by means of a 75-foot dam at a point in the Chippewa river, where the lake formerly overflowed into the river. The lake will be replenished with water to an average eight-foot depth, through a diversion ditch, for the construction of which 172 acres of land must be acquired.

North and South Heron Lakes, in Jackson county, will regain their former splendor, with a total surface area of 6,000 acres, with plans calling for two dams, one at the outlet of the northern body into the Des Moines river, and the other where the southern lake empties into Division creek. The labor of 40 men will be required for several months.

The levels of Wood Lake and Mulligan slough will be raised through the tapping of Watonwan river in the county by the same name. For topographical reasons, an open diversion channel cannot be used so it will be necessary to dam the river and pump water through a three-foot pipe line into the lake. The project necessitates the acquisition of 1,100 acres of land. The pipe line alone will cost $33,60, plus an additional $20,000 for other expenses. One hundred men can be put to work, as soon as arrangements for financing have been concluded.

"Besides these engineering propositions," Mr. MacGregor stated, "surveys and construction details are being completed on five similar undertakings. They are: The restoration of Mound Lake in the recreational area north of Luverne in Rock county, for which project the state has appropriated $17,000; restoration of Lake Okabena near Worthington; damning of the Zumbro river at Wanamingo in Goodhue county to create an artificial lake; immersion of the almost dry beds of the Willmar chain of lakes, and linking them with canals, forming a continuous navigable water course, and restoration of normal water levels to the Chisago chain of lakes, by diversion."

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a logbirling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER III

NOT so in the camp where men and horses toiled to make decks of logs by night out of what at dawn had been standing trees. Nearly half the crew were Finns, stolid, uncommunicative fellows, good enough workmen but difficult to speed up.

"Aren't there any good men left loose around here?" Ben asked Able on his first trip to town.

"Few." The justice shook his head. "Good workers, lots of 'em. But Brandon keeps hold of them. He treats them well; he's nobody's fool. But if a good man crosses him . . . out of the region he goes!

"Old Tim Jeffers is the only man who's stood out against Nick and he's the best logger these woods have ever seen but he doesn't like Brandon, can't work for him and is so disgusted that he's quit the timber and settled down on a farm. He hasn't set foot in a camp for three years and swears he never will again. Neither will he be run out of the country."

Ben thoughtfully watched the snow, which had been falling steadily for three days.

"We ought to have a new boss for camp. That crew needs riding if they're going to produce. Ruppert means well but he doesn't know how." Ruppert was the camp foreman.

"That's part of the hard shell of this nut, Ben; lack of good men who've got the sand to stick here and work for anybody but Brandon."

The next morning—Sunday—Ben sat over a table in his tiny office working with paper and pencil when Bird-Eye Blaine burst in.

"The Bull's here!" the little Irshman exclaimed in a whisper, closing the door behind him hastily. "Th' Bull's here . . . 'nd wearin' his river boots!"

Ben shoved back his chair. "What's this?"

"Ah, it's Brandon thut's sint him! He's Misther Brandon's pet bull 'nd he'll clane this camp av men loike he's done many a time before! He's wearin' river boots 'nd swillin' whisky!"

"Where?" Elliott got to his feet.

"In th' men's camp,"—gesticulating with his thumb. "He's just now come in 'nd they're commencin' to sift out, th' dommed yellow bellies!"

Without stopping even for his cap Ben stepped out and crossed to the men's camp. He did not burst into the place, but opened the door casually and slipped inside.

In the center of the room, close by the heating stove above which socks hung from drying racks, stood Bull Duval. His cap was tilted on his head, he leaned backward from his hips, in his uplifted right hand was a quart whisky bottle nearly full and his voice bellowed the words of a woods classic.

In the far end of the room a half dozen men were huddled. From several upper bunks concerned faces watched the Bull. The men were clearly afraid, certain that this hilarity was only a prelude to a melee in which heads would be broken and bodies bruised.

The swaying of Duval's body, as he moved to the measure of the ballad, brought him facing the doorway.

Ben Elliott stepped forward two or three paces and stood watching him. His gaze was steady, and in his eyes danced a warning flame. The Bull broke short his song.

"Good day, Mister Elliott!" he said heavily, in mock respect. "I heerd you was th' new boss at Hoot Owl and likely you're lookin' fer good men. Here's one, Elliott. Here's th' best man you'll get a chance to hire until th' next blue snow!"

Ben, heedless of the increased tension which showed on the faces of the onlookers, crossed the floor slowly.

"You want to work for me, Duval?" he asked.

"Think I come over to spark you?" the other countered insolently. "Have a drink!"

He extended the bottle, holding it in his great hand, grinning at Ben.

"In the first place, I don't want to hire you," Elliott said. "In the second, there's no hooch allowed in this camp."

He snatched the bottle, swung and sent it crashing against the stove. For a brief moment the hiss of its contents against scorching metal had the place while the Bull's head thrust slowly forward and his small eyes grew red with rage. His lip drew back, exposing yellow teeth.

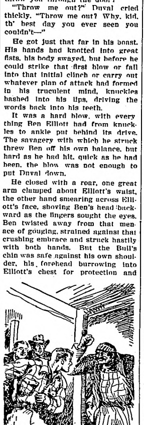
"Will you walk out, Duval?" Ben asked. "Or do you want me to throw you through the door?"

"Throw me out?" Duval cried thickly. "Throw me out? Why, kid, th' best day you ever seen you couldn't—"

He got just that far in his boast. His hands had knotted into great fists, his body swayed, but before he could strike that first blow or fall into that initial clinch or carry out whatever plan of attack had formed in his truculent mind, knuckles bashed into his lips, driving the words back into his teeth.

It was a hard blow, with everything Ben Elliott had from knuckles to ankle put behind its drive. The savagery with which he struck threw Ben off his own balance, but hard as he had hit, quick as he had been, the blow was not enough to put Duval down.

He closed with a roar, one great arm clamped about Elliott's waist, the other hand smearing across Elliott's face, shoving Ben's head backward as the fingers sought the eyes. Ben twisted away from that menace of gouging, strained against that crushing embrace and struck hastily with both hands. But the Bull's chin was safe against his own shoulder, his forehead burrowing into Elliott's chest for protection and not until Ben lifted his knee with a drive like that of a piston did Duval let go.



The Bull Gave Up Trying to Close.

He reeled backward then, cursing inarticulately, panting and heaving forward again from his spiked stance on the rough floor as he struck with all his might. His blow went home, a stinging, crushing impact on Ben's cheek bone and Duval's great weight followed, bearing the other to the floor, flat on his back. The Bull spread arms and legs in a smothering sprawl as he went down but before he could pin Ben close and helpless he was wriggling, threshing over, eluding a hand which clawed for his throat, grasping Duval's leg, lifting, straining, finally throwing him off, lurching to his knees and then got to his feet, pitching forward off balance as he ran, and coming to a halt against the bunks.

He faced about sharply to see Duval standing, blood on his mouth, bent forward, arms hooked and extended, like some great jungle creature stirred to killing fury.

Elliott did not try to elude him. With a grunt he charged, head down, one arm before his face, the other drawn back, and when he struck the sound was like that of a club on a quarter of beef. The blow spun Duval half about and the next rocked him. He grappled for Ben, but Ben sidestepped and struck Duval as he lurched past.

The Bull gave up trying to close. He struck out, now, with renewed savagery as they stood toe-to-toe for a moment. He dodged a brace of drives which, it seemed, would have felled a horse, so great was the effort behind them, and then, feinting, sent in a slashing uppercut.

The great fist landed squarely on the point of Ben's jaw, lifted him from his feet and sent him reeling, clawing the air, over on his back again.

Elliott was dazed by that blow. Bells clanged thunderously in his ears and lights flashed and flickered before his eyes but as he crashed down to the floor, Bird-Eye's voice, shrill and frantic, cut through the fog that had folded over him:

"Th' boots! . . . Th' boots!"

Boots, yes. Bull Duval did not fling himself on his prostrate adversary, this time. Erect, he strode forward two measured paces . . . three, and on the fourth he bent backward from the hips, lifted his right foot and raked it out before him; raked those many spikes in the sole straight at the face of his fallen adversary.

But his river boot only swung across the place where a face had been. One lone spike ripped the skin over the cheek bone; a companion left a bright red trace. Ben had jerked his head sideways, moved it that quarter inch which left his face still a face and not a mass of raw flesh ribbons.

Duval teetered on his left foot, hopping for balance and cursing because he had missed, as Ben, reeling to his feet, shouted:

"Keep out! My fight!" He had seen, as he came erect, Bird-Eye Blaine leap for the wood box and grasp the heavy iron poker. "My fight!" he repeated and his hoarse voice was commanding.

Bird-Eye fell back, clinging to the poker, his lips moving. It was Elliott's fight, indeed. He had seen many men fight before, had Bird-Eye Blaine; born to a rough life, he had lived it fully. He had seen countless battles but never had he witnessed such a fury as Ben Elliott loosed then.

He drove out with both fists, heedless of defense, blind to Duval's counter offensive. He shouted as he struck. He used a knee to break another hold, he bit when Duval tried to throttle him with the grip of both hands. He danced as the Bull sought to trample his feet with his river calks, and all the time he was striking. Again and again his hard knuckles found their mark.

A bench went over as they waltzed into it. Their combined weight, crashing against the bunks as Duval tried desperately to clinch again, smashed an upright and sent men in the upper deck scurrying. Dust rose thickly. The sink was ripped from its place as Ben drove the Bull into it with a body blow, and a chair was wrecked as Duval, caught by another punch, went over it backward with a crash.

Ben stood still, spread legged, breathing hard, hands swinging in a swift rhythm of rage.

"Get up!" he panted. "Get up! I've only started!"

Duval rolled over, his back to Elliott, and shoved himself to his feet. Not until he had risen and faced about did the other move. Then he closed with another of those flying rushes, with one drive pinned Duval against the wall, with another sent his head crashing against the window frame.

The Bull gave a bubbling roar and tried to grapple. His hands were struck down. He swung mightily, slowly, and missed, and as he went by off balance, a chopping stroke on the back of the head floored him.

Again Elliott waited.

"Get up!" he cried thickly. "Get up, Duval, and take the rest!"

The other started to move, looking over his shoulder with one eye that remained open. He saw a tall, supple young man, hair awry, shirt ripped open from neck to belt, cheek bleeding, jaws set, stand there swinging one fist as though the knuckles were wild to strike again. He sank back to the floor, shuddering.

On that Elliott relaxed and moved close.

"Enough?" he asked, sharply, prodding the Bull with a toe of his pac.

Duval moaned and shook his head. He made as if to rise again and Ben stepped back, giving him every chance.

The Bull did not get to his feet. He started to, drew one knee beneath him, heaved and then sank back to a hip. He swore heavily and hung his head, propping his torso by both great hands spread wide on the floor.

"Through, Duval?" Ben asked and it seemed as though his bruised and battered face tried to twist in a grin. The other gave no intimation of having heard. "There's more on tap. Or have you got enough?"

And then, when no reply came Elliott stooped, grasped the Bull's shirt in his hands and half lifted him.

"Let go!" the man blurted. "Let go or I'll—"

He tried to twist away, tried to strike Ben's legs, but his strength was gone, beaten from his great body. He was dragged across the floor, river boots trailing over the boards, straight to the doorway. With one foot Elliott kicked open the portal and with a heave flung Duval, the Tincup terror, into the trampled snow outside.

A half hour later Bull Duval, who had washed his bleeding head and face in the horse trough against the shouted protests of Bird-Eye Blaine that it would be unfit thereafter for his teams to drink from, shoved himself erect and wiped trembling hands on his mackinaw.

The door of the van opened and Elliott emerged. He walked straight to the bully and examined his visible injuries critically.

"Fair job," he said, as though to himself, and grinned. "A fair job, Duval. But remember this: if you ever set one of your feet in this camp again, or on any operation where I'm in charge, I'll give you a licking you'll remember! Now, Duval, why'd you come out here this morning? Who sent you?"

Duval looked away.

"Nobody," he said weakly. "I got drunk. But . . . but if you're needin' a man, I can work for a better man than I am."

Ben shook his head.

"No use, chum. You're going to tell me why you came and who sent you. Was it Brandon?"

"No"—evasively.

"Sure? How much did he give you to come here? Or are you on the payroll to do such chores?"

"H—l, he didn't—"

"You're a worse liar than you are a fighter by a mile or two, Duval. Mine was a good guess, wasn't it? What were his orders?"

"Well, he said if I didn't that he'd—"

"Good! That's all I want to know. There's the road. And you can take this little message with you to Brandon: Tell him that he needs to send more and better men here the next time. And as for you: I hire no men who can be hired to fight another man's battles. Make tracks, Duval!"

"Where?" Elliott got to his feet.

"In th' men's camp,"—gesticulating with his thumb. "He's just now come in 'nd they're commencin' to sift out, th' dommed yellow bellies!"

Without stopping even fer his cap Ben stepped out and crossed to the men's camp. He did not burst into the place, but opened the door casually and slipped inside.

In the center of the room, close by the heating stove above which socks hung from drying racks, stood Bull Duval. His cap was tilted on his head, he leaned backward from his hips, in his uplifted right hand was a quart whisky bottle nearly full and his voice bellowed the words of a woods classic.

In the far end of the room a half dozen men were huddled. From several upper bunks concerned faces watched the Bull. The men were clearly afraid, certain that this hilarity was only a prelude to a melee in which heads would be broken and bodies bruised.

The swaying of Duval's body, as he moved to the measure of the ballad, brought him facing the doorway.

Ben Elliott stepped forward two or three paces and stood watching him. His gaze was steady, and in his eyes danced a warning flame. The Bull broke short his song.

"Good day, Mister Elliott!" he said heavily, in mock respect. "I heerd you was th' new boss at Hoot Owl and likely you're lookin' fer good men. Here's one, Elliott. Here's th' best man you'll get a chanct to hire until th' next blue snow!"

Ben, heedless of the increased tension which showed on the faces of the onlookers, crossed the floor slowly.

"You want to work for me, Duval?" he asked.

"Think I come over to spark you?" the other countered insolently. "Have a drink!"

He extended the bottle, holding it in his great hand, grinning at Ben.

"In the first place, I don't want to hire you," Elliott said. "In the second, there's no hooch allowed in this camp."

He snatched the bottle, swung and sent it crashing against the stove. For a brief moment the hiss of its contents against scorching metal had the place while the Bull's head thrust slowly forward and his small eyes grew red with rage. His lip drew back, exposing yellow teeth.

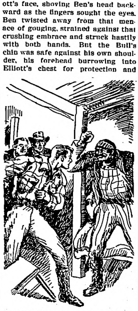
"Will you walk out, Duval?" Ben asked. "Or do you want me to throw you through the door?"

"Throw me out?" Duval cried thickly. "Throw me out? Why, kid, th' best day you ever seen you couldn't—"

He got just that far in his boast. His hands had knotted into great fists, his body swayed, but before he could strike that first blow or fall into that initial clinch or carry out whatever plan of attack had formed in his truculent mind, knuckles bashed into his lips, driving the words back into his teeth.

It was a hard blow, with everything Ben Elliott had from knuckles to ankle put behind its drive. The savagery with which he struck threw Ben off his own balance, but hard as he had hit, quick as he had been, the blow was not enough to put Duval down.

He closed with a roar, one great arm clamped about Elliott's waist, the other hand smearing across Elliott's face, shoving Ben's head backward as the fingers sought the eyes. Ben twisted away from that menace of gouging, strained against that crushing embrace and struck hastily with both hands. But the Bull's chin was safe against his own shoulder, his forehead burrowing into Elliott's chest for protection and not until Ben lifted his knee with a drive like that of a piston did Duval let go.



The Bull Gave Up Trying to Close.

He reeled backward then, cursing inarticulately, panting and heaving forward again from his spiked stance on the rough floor as he struck with all his might. His blow went home, a stinging, crushing impact on Ben's cheek bone and Duval's great weight followed, bearing the other to the floor, flat on his back. The Bull spread arms and legs in a smothering sprawl as he went down but before he could pin Ben close and helpless he was wriggling, threshing over, eluding a hand which clawed for his throat, grasping Duval's leg, lifting, straining, finally throwing him off, lurching to his knees and then got to his feet, pitching forward off balance as he ran, and coming to a halt against the bunks.

He faced about sharply to see Duval standing, blood on his mouth, bent forward, arms hooked and extended, like some great jungle creature stirred to killing fury.

Elliott did not try to elude him. With a grunt he charged, head down, one arm before his face, the other drawn back, and when he struck the sound was like that of a club on a quarter of beef. The blow spun Duval half about and the next rocked him. He grappled for Ben, but Ben sidestepped and struck Duval as he lurched past.

The Bull gave up trying to close. He struck out, now, with renewed savagery as they stood toe-to-toe for a moment. He dodged a brace of drives which, it seemed, would have felled a horse, so great was the effort behind them, and then, feinting, sent in a slashing uppercut.

The great fist landed squarely on the point of Ben's jaw, lifted him from his feet and sent him reeling, clawing the air, over on his back again.

Elliott was dazed by that blow. Bells clanged thunderously in his ears and lights flashed and flickered before his eyes but as he crashed down to the floor, Bird-Eye's voice, shrill and frantic, cut through the fog that had folded over him:

"Th' boots! . . . Th' boots!"

Boots, yes. Bull Duval did not fling himself on his prostrate adversary, this time. Erect, he strode forward two measured paces . . . three, and on the fourth he bent backward from the hips, lifted his right foot and raked it out before him; raked those many spikes in the sole straight at the face of his fallen adversary.

But his river boot only swung across the place where a face had been. One lone spike ripped the skin over the cheek bone; a companion left a bright red trace. Ben had jerked his head sideways, moved it that quarter inch which left his face still a face and not a mass of raw flesh ribbons.

Duval teetered on his left foot, hopping for balance and cursing because he had missed, as Ben, reeling to his feet, shouted:

"Keep out! My fight!" He had seen, as he came erect, Bird-Eye Blaine leap for the wood box and grasp the heavy iron poker. "My fight!" he repeated and his hoarse voice was commanding.

Bird-Eye fell back, clinging to the poker, his lips moving. It was Elliott's fight, indeed. He had seen many men fight before, had Bird-Eye Blaine; born to a rough life, he had lived it fully. He had seen countless battles but never had he witnessed such a fury as Ben Elliott loosed then.

He drove out with both fists, heedless of defense, blind to Duval's counter offensive. He shouted as he struck. He used a knee to break another hold, he bit when Duval tried to throttle him with the grip of both hands. He danced as the Bull sought to trample his feet with his river calks, and all the time he was striking. Again and again his hard knuckles found their mark.

A bench went over as they waltzed into it. Their combined weight, crashing against the bunks as Duval tried desperately to clinch again, smashed an upright and sent men in the upper deck scurrying. Dust rose thickly. The sink was ripped from its place as Ben drove the Bull into it with a body blow, and a chair was wrecked as Duval, caught by another punch, went over it backward with a crash.

Ben stood still, spread legged, breathing hard, hands swinging in a swift rhythm of rage.

"Get up!" he panted. "Get up! I've only started!"

Duval rolled over, his back to Elliott, and shoved himself to his feet. Not until he had risen and faced about did the other move. Then he closed with another of those flying rushes, with one drive pinned Duval against the wall, with another sent his head crashing against the window frame.

The Bull gave a bubbling roar and tried to grapple. His hands were struck down. He swung mightily, slowly, and missed, and as he went by off balance, a chopping stroke on the back of the head floored him.

Again Elliott waited.

"Get up!" he cried thickly. "Get up, Duval, and take the rest!"

The other started to move, looking over his shoulder with one eye that remained open. He saw a tall, supple young man, hair awry, shirt ripped open from neck to belt, cheek bleeding, jaws set, stand there swinging one fist as though the knuckles were wild to strike again. He sank back to the floor, shuddering.

On that Elliott relaxed and moved close.

"Enough?" he asked, sharply, prodding the Bull with a toe of his pac.

Duval moaned and shook his head. He made as if to rise again and Ben stepped back, giving him every chance.

The Bull did not get to his feet. He started to, drew one knee beneath him, heaved and then sank back to a hip. He swore heavily and hung his head, propping his torso by both great hands spread wide on the floor.

"Through, Duval?" Ben asked and it seemed as though his bruised and battered face tried to twist in a grin. The other gave no intimation of having heard. "There's more on tap. Or have you got enough?"

And then, when no reply came Elliott stooped, grasped the Bull's shirt in his hands and half lifted him.

"Let go!" the man blurted. "Let go or I'll—"

He tried to twist away, tried to strike Ben's legs, but his strength was gone, beaten from his great body. He was dragged across the floor, river boots trailing over the boards, straight to the doorway. With one foot Elliott kicked open the portal and with a heave flung Duval, the Tincup terror, into the trampled snow outside.

A half hour later Bull Duval, who had washed his bleeding head and face in the horse trough against the shouted protests of Bird-Eye Blaine that it would be unfit thereafter for his teams to drink from, shoved himself erect and wiped trembling hands on his mackinaw.

The door of the van opened and Elliott emerged. He walked straight to the bully and examined his visible injuries critically.

"Fair job," he said, as though to himself, and grinned. "A fair job, Duval. But remember this: if you ever set one of your feet in this camp again, or on any operation where I'm in charge, I'll give you a licking you'll remember! Now, Duval, why'd you come out here this morning? Who sent you?"

Duval looked away.

"Nobody," he said weakly. "I got drunk. But . . . but if you're needin' a man, I can work for a better man than I am."

Ben shook his head.

"No use, chum. You're going to tell me why you came and who sent you. Was it Brandon?"

"No"—evasively.

"Sure? How much did he give you to come here? Or are you on the payroll to do such chores?"

"H—l, he didn't—"

"You're a worse liar than you are a fighter by a mile or two, Duval. Mine was a good guess, wasn't it? What were his orders?"

"Well, he said if I didn't that he'd—"

"Good! That's all I want to know. There's the road. And you can take this little message with you to Brandon: Tell him that he needs to send more and better men here the next time. And as for you: I hire no men who can be hired to fight another man's battles. Make tracks, Duval!"

Slaughter lambs lost 25c on today's trade, good grades selling at $8.00-8.25, while best kinds bid $8.50 were held higher, unsold late. Medium to good lambs turned at $7.50-8.00, 98 lb. yearlings at $7.25, slaughter ewes $3.50-5.00, and feeding lambs at $5.00-6.50.

WHETSTONE RIVER DIVERSION PROGRESSES

Excavation work is more than one-fifth completed for the Whetstone river diversion and water control project, undertaken jointly by the State of South Dakota and the Minnesota SERA. A total of 450,000 cubic yards of earth must be moved to complete the various phases of the job.

By means of an altered channel for the Whetstone, diverting it from the Minnesota river, and a dyke across the southern end of Big Stone Lake, damage from the spring floods in this locality will be minimized. The dyke will run from Big Stone City, in South Dakota, to Big Stone Lake, at Ortonville. The flow of the Whetstone river into Big Stone lake will raise the surface of the latter considerably.

The two cities mentioned will be joined through the inter-state highway No. 12, to be routed in agreement between officials of the two states.

Cost of the project has been estimated at $500,000.

STATE'S THIRD RE-LOCATION ENTERPRISE IS LAUNCHED

Twelve farm families in Albert Lea will be aided back to a normal, self-supporting mode of living in to them familiar environments, through an allocation of $15,000 by the Minnesota SERA according to an announcement by Dr. R. W. Murchie, director of the division of rural rehabilitation.

A local benefit association of business me n was formed to establish a "rural-industrial" community, which will provide individual farmsites on small tracts in the rural vicinity. The association selected families best equipped to crown their efforts with success, because of industrial craftsmanship and previous experience as farmers.

Smuggling of liquor has greatly increased under repeal. Revenue losses to the United States, thru this source, are reported by the news press to total $50,000,000 per year.

FARMERS BUY IMITATION BUTTER, FEED IT TO FIRE

Mahnomen, Minn.—Buying all the oleomargarine they could locate at local stores, a number of dairy farmers made a bonfire at Four Corners, the towns most prominent corner and where it was burned amid spectacular expostulations. Dealers were warned to refrain from sale of the product, in lieu of losing the dairymen's trade.

Tomatoes Give Timely Tip

BACKLESS bathing beauties might take a tip, at this season, from no less an authority than the popular love-apple. Tomatoes, scientists tell us, blush redder if the sun is not too hot.

If you get hot and bothered about the sun on the beach, it is nice to know that there are sun oils and sweet-smelling ungents for every sort of skin. But if you are content to "ripen" slowly, like the lovely tomato, you will choose some spot where the sun is not at its hottest and there develop that rich rosy sun-tan that you covet.

I agree (hic) with Braintruster Tugwell, that "one of the oldest (hic) and quietest roads to contentment lies through the (hic) conventional trinity of wine (hic) women and song."

Review of the Legislature

COMMITTEE DISPLAYS HOSTILITY TO TRUTH; PROTECTS FALSITIES

By A. I. Harris

Having established a stool-pigeon system not only in the various state departments but even in the United States government service the Carley sleuth committee has taken steps to protect false testimony offered before it and has adopted new rules designed to keep from the records testimony of witnesses who will successfully refute untruthful charges.

Prompted by the fact that false testimony was being presented to the committee by its specially selected witnesses Governor Olson, who served as federal public relief administrator, in a communication to Senator Carley, asked that he be subpoenaed. "I trust that you will summon me," the Governor said, "so that the falsities of your handpicked witnesses may be exposed before the public has forgoten the details of their testimony."

Included in the false testimony which was presented to the committee was the charge that certain pertinent records pertaining to purchases are missing from the files of the SERA. L. P. Zimmerman, acting relief administrator, spiked the lie when he was called to the stand. Later he disclosed that the only records missing from the government files are those which save been stolen by stool pigeons in the employ of the committee. Information on these thefts, he indicated, will be forwarded to Washington.

In his reply to Governor Olson, Senator Carley disclosed that he is astoundingly naive for a politician when he denied the Governor's claim that this is a political investigation—either naive or something worse. However, in justice to Senator Carley, it might be recorded that he was not one of the group which, before the last elections results were made known, had carefully laid the plans for this investigation as part of the 1936 Republican campaign. these gentlemen deducted that if a lot of smoke could be created, the people would believe that there must be some fire. Virtually every, political writer in the Twin Cities knew of these plans. and if the committee now is desirous of finding out something about them for their record the field for inquiry should be very fruitful. Senator Carley was brought in on the scene at a later date and has been made the goat of the Republican strategists. It can be said to his discredit, however, that he is carrying out his assignment with a singular singleness of purpose, and has adopted himself to his dishonest job most remarkably.

Taking a page from the history of old Spain, the committee has changed its rules and has become to all intents and purposes a court of inquisition. While the liberal members of the committee never were taken into confidence in committee deliberations, they now have been shorn of every vestige of privilege. Those directing the affairs of the committee have decreed that the individual members shall have no power to subpoena; that if they have a witness they wish to call the name of that witness must be given to Inquisitor Carley, who, in turn, gives the name over to Frank Mauer, the politcial attorney paid to conduct the questioning. Mauer determines, after an examination of the witness, whether his or her testimony is pertinent to the aims and purposes of the committee.

But Senators Rockne and Carly have gone to even greater lengths to make receipt of the kind of evidence the committee desires possible. A bill introduced by them in the Senate puts a preium on perjury. It reads in part: "no testimony or evidence so given before the committee or produced shall be received against him in any criminal proceedings for the imposition of a penalty or forfeiture." If this bill becomes a law, a witness can appear before the committee and submit perjured testimony with perfect immunity. The directors of the investigation are thus inviting perjured evidence, probably in the knowledge that only with this type of evidence will they be able to make out a case against the SERA and the departments of state which they are "investigating."

The two principle witnesses last week produced to smear relief administration were A. L. Sanford an engineer only two months in the service of the SERA, and Verne Martin, an SERA employe who had been discharged from the Northwest Jobbers Credit Bureau because he "talked too much" and always got his firm into controversies. Mr Zimmerman showed that the testimony of the former was made out of wholecloth while a cross examination of the latter undertaken by Senator Patrick Farnand. liberal, much to the disgust and at times open hostility of Senator Carley and Attorney Mauer, punctured this choice bit of scandal evidence.

A touch of the dramatic was added to the proceedings when Mr Max Sloane, vice-president of Sloane-Pettibone Co., Inc., St. Paul concern, whose firm, according to Martin's testimony, was "on the inside" in SERA clothing purchases, appeared before the committee and demanded that he be examined. He claimed to be able to offer proof that Martin's testimony was a tissue of lies. But he was spurned; the committee obviously did not care for testimony which would refute their pet Martin. Mr. Sloane pleaded and begged, but his entreaties fell on deaf ears. He demanded his rights as a taxpayer and as an American citizen, but this failed to impress Carley and Mauer, who were running the show. The only thing Sloane got was an admonition from Carley to "sit down, or the sergeant-at-arms will put you down." Sloane discovered that his American citizenship was of no value to him in such a contingency.

After a severe public rebuke for delay by Governor Olson, the Senate voted to extend the mortgage moratorium to March 1, 1937.

The reactionary judiciary committee brought the bill to the floor with a provision that those persons "could apply only when the court finds from the evidence that the mortgagor has a substantial equity in the property involved." This would mean that under present depreciated real estate values with the current values in most cases hardly exceeding the amount of the mortgage the great majority of farm and home owners would have no relief whatever from mortgage foreclosure, which would be much to the liking of the large insurance companies and bankers who hold the bulk of real estate mortgages.

Sensing the "nigger in the woodpile," inserted in the bill by reactionaries Senator Pederson, Farmer-Laborite of Milan, moved to strike out the "substantial equity" provision. Immediately Senator Rockne, reactionary spokesman, leaped to his feet with a pathetic plea in behalf of the widow who invests her fortune in mortgages, opposing Senator Pederson's amendment. Hiding behind the skirts of widows is a favorite practice for those who advance the interests of the insurance companies and the banks, holders of most of real estate securities. In effect, Senator Ronkne was arguing that in this depresion the home and farm owner shall take his 100 per cent loss, and that the large insurance companies and banks shall have their investments protected 100 per cent.

The Peterson, amendment was adopted, Senators Rockne, Miller, Lightner, and Adams, all reactionary stalwarts, voting against it.

The House last week passed the much debated resolution memorializing Congress to pass legislation empowering the states to tax sales and gross incomes arising from transactions of interstate commerce. Representative Stockwell, leading the fight against the resolution, told members of the House that they must have "an awful appetite for disaster" to pass such an measure. He pointed out that thousands of our children are now growing up in the chronic state of undernourishment and that the imposition of sales taxes will simply add to the circumstances now making them unfit for a productive life.

The resolution is an attempt to make more "effective" the sales tax bill, which was also introduced. It is fortunate for the people of Minnesota that the Farmer-Labor minority will in all probability be strong enough to prevent the bill from being passed over Governor Olson's veto.

LEGAL NOTICES

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State land purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

E. V. WILLARD,
Commissioner of Conservation.

Governor Olson Writes for The Daily News

THE GOVERNOR SPEAKS

TO many Minnesotans, Gov. Floyd B. Olson's program leading to a "complete reorganization of our social structure into a co-operative commonwealth" is a radical and dangerous experiment.

To many others, it is a rational movement—a natural development following the breakdown of conventional and conservative government—and a sane solution to the problems growing out of depression and near-desperation.

While the entire question is highly controversial, there is one point on which all fair-minded citizens must agree.

Gov. Olson is entitled at least to a hearing. As the state's chief executive he deserves the right to explain every point of his platform to the people.

With this in mind, The Daily News has tendered Gov. Olson the use of its columns for an uncensored and unrestricted exposition of the reforms he advocates. Gov. Olson has accepted the offer and consented to write a daily article in which he will reveal his hopes and objectives.

Supporters and opponents of the governor alike concede his intelligence, his forcefulness and his ability to speak and write. The Daily News has chosen a time for the appearance of the articles when minds are not distorted by the heat of a political campaign.

This paper believes the governors' column will give rise to serious consideration and calm debate on matters of grave importance to the commonwealth. It believes that legislators—who constitute the court of last report in the matter—will benefit from the discussions by learning of the reactions of their constituents to Mr Olson's pronouncements.

It is in the hope of aiding in the cause of good government and incidentally providing an interesting feature for its readers that The Daily News introduces next Monday its new column—"The Governor Speaks."

He will choose his own subjects.
He will write what he pleases.
He can "lean as far to the left" as he desires.

But Senators Rockne and Carly have gone to even greater lengths to make receipt of the kind of evidence the committee desires possible. A bill introduced by them in the Senate puts a preium on perjury. It reads in part: "no testimony or evidence so given before the committee or produced shall be received against him in any criminal proceedings for the imposition of a penalty or forfeiture." If this bill becomes a law, a witness can appear before the committee and submit perjured testimony with perfect immunity. The directors of the investigation are thus inviting perjured evidence, probably in the knowledge that only with this type of evidence will they be able to make out a case against the SERA and the departments of state which they are "investigating."

The two principle witnesses last week produced to smear relief administration were A. L. Sanford an engineer only two months in the service of the SERA, and Verne Martin, an SERA employe who had been discharged from the Northwest Jobbers Credit Bureau because he "talked too much" and always got his firm into controversies. Mr. Zimmerman showed that the testimony of the former was made out of wholecloth while a cross examination of the latter undertaken by Senator Patrick Farnand. liberal, much to the disgust and at times open hostility of Senator Carley and Attorney Mauer, punctured this choice bit of scandal evidence.

A touch of the dramatic was added to the proceedings when Mr Max Sloane, vice-president of Sloane-Pettibone Co., Inc., St. Paul concern, whose firm, according to Martin's testimony, was "on the inside" in SERA clothing purchases, appeared before the committee and demanded that he be examined. He claimed to be able to offer proof that Martin's testimony was a tissue of lies. But he was spurned; the committee obviously did not care for testimony which would refute their pet Martin. Mr. Sloane pleaded and begged, but his entreaties fell on deaf ears. He demanded his rights as a taxpayer and as an American citizen, but this failed to impress Carley and Mauer, who were running the show. The only thing Sloane got was an admonition from Carley to "sit down, or the sergeant-at-arms will put you down." Sloane discovered that his American citizenship was of no value to him in such a contingency.

After a severe public rebuke for delay by Governor Olson, the Senate voted to extend the mortgage moratorium to March 1. 1937.

The reactionary judiciary committee brought the bill to the floor with a provision that those persons "could apply only when the court finds from the evidence that the mortgagor has a substantial equity in the property involved." This would mean that under present depreciated real estate values with the current values in most cases hardly exceeding the amount of the mortgage the great majority of farm and home owners would have no relief whatever from mortgage foreclosure, which would be much to the liking of the large insurance companies and bankers who hold the bulk of real estate mortgages.

Sensing the "nigger in the woodpile," inserted in the bill by reactionaries Senator Pederson, Farmer-Laborite of Milan, moved to strike out the "substantial equity" provision. Immediately Senator Rockne, reactionary spokesman, leaped to his feet with a pathetic plea in behalf of the widow who invests her fortune in mortgages, opposing Senator Pederson's amendment. Hiding behind the skirts of widows is a favorite practice for those who advance the interests of the insurance companies and the banks, holders of most of real estate securities. In effect, Senator Ronkne was arguing that in this depresion the home and farm owner shall take his 100 per cent loss, and that the large insurance companies and banks shall have their investments protected 100 per cent.

The Peterson amendment was adopted, Senators Rockne, Miller, Lightner, and Adams, all reactionary stalwarts, voting against it.

The House last week passed the much debated resolution memorializing Congress to pass legislation empowering the states to tax sales and gross incomes arising from transactions of interstate commerce. Representative Stockwell, leading the fight against the resolution, told members of the House that they must have "an awful appetite for disaster" to pass such an measure. He pointed out that thousands of our children are now growing up in the chronic state of undernourishment and that the imposition of sales taxes will simply add to the circumstances now making them unfit for a productive life.

The resolution is an attempt to make more "effective" the sales tax bill, which was also introduced. It is fortunate for the people of Minnesota that the Farmer-Labor minority will in all probability be strong enough to prevent the bill from being passed over Governor Olson's veto.

LEGAL NOTICES

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale. interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State land purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

THE GOVERNOR SPEAKS

TO many Minnesotans, Gov. Floyd B. Olson's program leading to a "complete reorganization of our social structure into a co-operative commonwealth" is a radical and dangerous experiment.

To many others, it is a rational movement—a natural development following the breakdown of conventional and conservative government—and a sane solution to the problems growing out of depression and near-desperation.

While the entire question is highly controversial, there is one point on which all fair-minded citizens must agree. Gov. Olson is entitled at least to a hearing. As the state's chief executive he deserves the right to explain every point of his platform to the people.

With this in mind, The Daily News has tendered Gov. Olson the use of its columns for an uncensored and unrestricted exposition of the reforms he advocates. Gov. Olson has accepted the offer and consented to write a daily article in which he will reveal his hopes and objectives.

Supporters and opponents of the governor alike concede his intelligence, his forcefulness and his ability to speak and write. The Daily News has chosen a time for the appearance of the articles when minds are not distorted by the heat of a political campaign.

This paper believes the governors' column will give rise to serious consideration and calm debate on matters of grave importance to the commonwealth. It believes that legislators—who constitute the court of last resort in the matter—will benefit from the discussions by learning of the reactions of their constituents to Mr Olson's pronouncements.

It is in the hope of aiding in the cause of good government and incidentally providing an interesting feature for its readers that The Daily News introduces next Monday its new column—"The Governor Speaks."

MELBEY PULLS SURPRISE WIN TUESDAY NITE

Throws Radniecki Two Falls Straight on Bang-Up Card March 12

OLSON THROWS CHRISTIE

Better Condition Tells After Seventeen Minutes of Tough Going

A well rounded wrestling card was presented to the local wrestling fans Tuesday night with the main go featuring Ernest Melbey and Stanley Radniecki. A surprise was pulled when young Melby of Viking threw Radniecki of Oklee for two straight falls, the first in seven minutes and the second in 12 minutes. The two boys weighed in at 180 and 166 respectively. Melbey proved to be a real threat in the heavyweight rank of wrestlers in the N. W. by his surprise win Tuesday evening.

Mark Olson, a local boy, won from Bob Christie of Angus in a rough and tumble match which was won by the former due mainly to his better physical condition. At the close of this match Casimer Radniecki challenged Olson to a match on the next card which will be presented about Mar. 26.

Ted Bergren threw Dale Johnson in 12 minutes, the former having too much experience for the local boy. H. Stroble, Angus, proved to be a classy performer in the 140 pound class as he threw Norman Christofferson in five minutes; Christofferson substituted for Sailor Canfield in this match.

Casimer Radniecki, Oklee, won from Martin Wedul in eleven minutes while Iverson proved too stout for Virgil Vautman. Vautman weighed in at 120 pounds while Iverson weighed 114 pounds; Iverson announces that he is now ready to meet all comers weighing around 115 pounds.

Some very good matches are promised the fans by Bill LaFave, for the next event which will take place March 26th, one week from Tuesday.

W.C.T.U. Will Meet at the Municipal Auditorium Fr

The local unit of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold its March meeting on Friday afternoon, at three o'clock in the Civic and Commerce room of the Municipal Auditorium.

The program will include a reading "Christian Citizenship," written by Mrs. Grant M. Hudson, National W. C. T. U. Director of the Department of Christian Citizenship, and presented by Mrs. H. A Pratt.

Mrs. E. A. Cooke will conduct the devotionals and musical selections and readings will be presented by high school pupils.

The hostesses are Miss Minnie Leavitt, Mrs. G. H. Mayer-Oakes, Mrs. Racine Olsen and Mrs. J. A. Erickson.

President Asks for End to Holding Cos.

Washington, March 12.—Smashing of the existing public utility holding company system was demanded by President Roosevelt today as "utterly essential to avoid government socialism."

In one of the most forthright messages he has sent to Congress this session, Mr. Roosevelt supported fully the stringent regulation of holding companies and denounced the campaign of propaganda against it.

Holding companies, he said, "have given tyrannical power and exclusive opportunity to a favored few."

He said it was time to reverse the process of concentration of power, and restore the control of operating companies to the localities where they operate.

"I am against private socialism of concentrated power as thoroughly as I am against governmental socialism," Mr. Roosevelt declared. "The one is equally as dangerous as the other; and destruction of private socialism is utterly essential to avoid governmental socialism."

Swanson Elected Snpervisor At Highlanding Election Tue.

Report of the Highlanding Township election made late last night reported the following results: Town supervisor, John Swanson; Assessor, Geo. Johnson; Treasurer, Palmer Wold; Constable, Anton Horachek; Justice of Peace, Clifford Vad. All but the later two offices were certain and the two not certain of are virtually assured as being correct.

Bogus Checks Being Passed in Vicinity

Three bogus checks have been reported passed in the city during the past week by a man about forty years old and about five feet nine inches tall. These checks were made on the Hawley Produce Co., of Hawley, Minnesota, and were printed by the Norman Printing Co., of Crookston. Two names appear on the checks, those of A. O. Ness and of H. O. Anderson and are signed by A. O. Ness, made payable to Sam Moe.

The Thief River Pharmacy cashed one check for $6.42, Lambert's Drug store cashed one for some over $8.00 and Oscar Cerny cashed another for $8.72. Other phony checks have also appeared in Red Lake Falls, Winger, Erskine, and McIntosh and store operators in this vicinity are warned to be on the lookout for checks of this description by O. Rambeck, Pennington county sheriff.

March Apportionment For Schools Received

The March apportionment for the general school fund for Pennington county schools was received Tuesday by the County Treasurer, J. Gullingsrud. The population of the schools is 2768 pupils and the apportionment amounts to $2.75 per pupil for a total of $7,612.00 allowed to the schools.

HOG SLAUGHTER RECORD SHOULD BE KEPT IN '35

Hog Products Sold or Traded Directly to Consumer to Be Taxed

Every farmer who sells or exchanges hog products should keep a written record of such sales or erchanges.

This point is emphasized by County Agent R. M. Douglass and local corn-hog committeemen in their efforts to acquaint farmers and commercial handlers of meat products with the facts about the liability and collection of the hog procesing taxes.

Though producers and feeders are not required to pay the tax with respect to hog products from hogs they slaughter and sell to commercial handlers, they are liable for this tax with respect to hog products they sell to or exchange directly with consumers—except for certain exemptions allowed to producers only.

The producer is not only exempt from the tax with respect to hogs slaughtered for the use of his own family, employees or household, but he is allowed a 300-pound exemption on all sales or exchanges made directly with consumers when such sales or exchanges total not more than 1,000 pounds during the marketing year beginning November 5, 1934. On more than 300 pounds but less than 1,000 pounds sold to consumers, the producer is liable for the tax and must file a processing tax return. If he sells more than 1,000 pounds of hog products, either to commercial handlers or consumers, he loses his exemption and is liable for the tax upon the entire amount of hog products he sells to or exchanges with consumers.

Minnesota persons liable for the tax are required to file a return with the United States Collector of Internal Revenue, St. Paul, Minnesota, on or before the last day of the month immediately following the month in which the slaughtering took place. The tax rate is $2.25 per hundredweight of live hogs slaughtered. A table for converting carcasses to liveweight can be obtained from Mr. Douglass.

Arnie Solem, on Tour of Inspection, Stops Here

Arnie Solem, assistant director of the Minnesota NRS, spent a few days in Thief River Falls during the past week, visiting with friends and relatives while he was here. Mr. Solem, with his wife, was making a tour of the district offices throughout the state, coming to Thief River from the office at Bemidji. After leaving here Monday he will inspect the office at Moorhead and from there will return to St. Paul. He reported the local office to be doing very good work and stated that he was well satisfied with the way things were handled here. Mr. Solem is a former local man, being director of the local office before being promoted to his present position, and, at one time being the editor of the Forum.

E. GRAND FORKS WINS DISTRICT CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeats Crookston in Finals; Goes to Regional Tournament Today

T.R.F. WINS THIRD PLACE

Plummer and Prowlers Fight For Third Place; Final Score is 40-33

After the air had cleared around the Auditorium East Grand Forks emerged with the trophy and the championship of district 31 firmly clenched in the hands of the co-captains, the Raymond brothers. Upsetting all the dope and ideas of the fans, E. G. F. defeated the Crookston High team by three points, 16 to 13.

East Grand Forks started the scoring and at no time did Crookston gain a lead over them; individual scoring in the final game was as follows: For Crookston: B. Hovde, one free throw; R. Jenkins, one field goal; E. Panzer, one field goal; E. Wentzel, one free throw and one field goal; R. Vordale, two field goals; F. Barnes one free throw. For E. G. F.: Ger. Raymond, one field goal; Geo. Raymond, one field goal and two free throws; K. Sundin, one field goal and two free throws; R. Peterson, one field goal; R. Kimblin, two field goals.

On Thursday night, the second night of the tournament, E. G. F. defeated Plummer and Crookston won from Thief River Falls 28 to 24, thus leaving the Plummer quint and the Prowler quint to play for third position in the tournament which was won by the latter in a very close and exciting game; the final score was T. R. F. 40 and Plummer 33.

By winning the championship last Friday night East Grand Forks won the right to represent this district at the regional tournament to be held in Crookston today and tomorrow in the high school gymnasium. Winner of the Regional Tournament will go to state tournament representing Region 8 at the Municipal Auditorium in Minneapolis March 21, 22 and 23.

County Auditors to Meet In St. Paul Fri. and Sat.

A meeting of the County Auditor's association of Minnesota has been called for Friday and Saturday of this week, according to an announcement made today by H. A. Fowler, president of the group. A report on the relief activities in the various counties will be heard at this meeting; Mr. Fowler stated that the new state set-up for relief may be ready at this time and a discussion of this matter will also be had.

Land O' Lakes Doubles Capacity of Egg Hatching Department in Local Plant

One of the latest additions to the local Land O' Lakes plant is another unit of the Smith incubator. This addition doubles the capacity of the plant as it was last year, which was found to be insufficient to handle the orders received for chicks, according to B. O. Norby, manager of the local plant.

Last year a 52,000-egg Smith incubator was installed which was kept so busy an additional unit was necessary, Mr. Norby said. Instruments control the entire mechanism automatically, regulating temperature and humidity at all times during the hatch. The eggs are turned automatically and the air in the units is purified and the unit is fumigated by special attachments.

Information on poultry management, feeding, housing, culling and sanitation programs are available through the practical poultry service men in charge of this department. Every day is visitor's day and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to visit and take advantage of this service offered at all times, Mr. Norby stated.

Former T.R.F. Residents To Hold Social Mar. 16

Former residents of Thief River Falls now residing in Minneapolis or St. Paul and those who are in the cities on March 16th are invited to attend the Mid-Winter Social which is held annually. The announcement states that this year's social will be held at the Curtis Hotel starting at eight o'clock. A program has been arranged according to Dr. H. W. Froehlich, president, after which there will be dancing and refreshments. All residents and former residents of Thief River Falls are cordially invited Dr. Froehlich stated.

W.P.A. Favors H. F. 120 Object to State Police

The W. P. A. next regular meeting will be held Monday, March 18th, in the Commercial Club rooms of the Auditorium at eight p. m., according to Wm. Douville, president.

At the meeting held Tuesday evening the group passed two resolutions, one recommending the Un-employment Insurance and Old-Age Pension bill, H. F. 120 to the legislature for passage and the other to the same body recommending the defeat of the bill giving the highway patrolmen full police powers.

F-L Club Meets Fri. ToElectNewOfficers

The Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor club will hold its regular March meeting Friday night at which time the annual election of officers will take place. It is important that all members attend this weeting which will be held in the court room of the county court house at eight p. m.

Speakers invited to be at this meeting are Fred C. Proehl, former bank examiner for the Citizens State Bank and Walter E. Day, whose seat in the legislature was "stolen" by Rep. Marius Waldal of Plummer. Following the regular business session lunch will be served by the Women's F-L club.

County Bonds Getting Good Play From Local People

The $80,000 worth of county bonds which are to be sold March 20th to local people are getting a good play from the residents of this county, according to the county auditor, H. A. Fowler. Mr. Fowler stated that reservations can still be made by anyone wishing to invest their money in these bonds and that it is advisable to see him as soon as possible regarding this matter.

B & B STYLE SHOP OPENS MARCH 16 IN 1st NAT'L BLDG

Detroit Lakes Women to Open Store Handling Ready-to-Wear Clothing

The B. & B. Style Shop, new ready-to-wear store for women, will hold its formal opening Saturday. March 16 in its quarters on the ground floor of the First National Bank Building. The store will occupy the space formerly Leiberman's Haberdashery.

Proprietors of the new shop are Detroit Lakes' women, one of them still operating a store in that city. Mrs. Burgess, who will be in charge of the local store, was formerly employed by the L. F. Norby ready-to-wear store of Detroit Lakes where she had been employed for the past sixteen years. Mrs. Bakke will continue to operate her store in Detroit Lakes.

LATIMER CHOSEN F.-F. MILL CITY CANDIDATE

Thomas E. Latimer was elected Sunday as Farmer-Labor candidate for Mayor of Minneapolis. Two years ago Mr. Latimer was the party's standard bearer and finished third in a field of 14 seeking the nomination. Mr. Latimer was nominated from the floor Sunday and had withdrawn when William J. McGaughren, another nominee withdrew in favor of Mr. Latimer Latimer be made unanimous choice of the party. Others who withdrew in favorof Mr. Latimer included A. G. Cooper and Fred A. Ossana.

FARMER PAYS TAX ON INCOME AND IT'S NEWS

A farmer in Minnesota has paid a state income tax. The first farmer to pay such a tax, this Red River Valley soil tiller produced $7 for the state coffers, the income tax department disclosed today. Last year not a single farmer—that is a farmer who has no other business sidelines—paid an income tax.

Large Supplies of Canned Beef at St. Cloud Plant

The next assignment of canned beef to the commissaries of the Minnesota SERA will be made from the stock accumulated in the warehouses of the SERA plant at St. Cloud, it is announced by F. A. Gilbert, state director of commodity distribution. There are approximately 1,500,000 pounds of this product held in storage for distribution to relief clients thruout Minnesota.

TAX EXEMPTION ASKED FOR ST. LUKES HOSPITAL

Prichard and Nelson Ask For Favorable Attitude in Report

FIRE DEPT. GETS MASKS

Schuster Says that Efficiency Can be Increased with Smoke Masks

W. W. Prichard and H. E. Nelson appeared before the city council Tuesday evening in behalf of the St. Luke's Hospital association asking for exemption from the tax lists. It was stated that the hospital was organized under laws and conducted its business under these laws which makes it a tax exempt institution. It was further brought out that Judge M. A. Brattland ruled in their favor when the case came before him in regards to personal property taxes and that they were fairly sure that he would rule the same regarding real estate taxes. They asked the council to go on record as favoring tax exemption, stating that they were going to present the case to the Minnesota Tax Commission. No action was taken at this meeting but a special meeting was called for Thursday night at eight o'clock to decide this matter.

H. O. Chommie, attorney for the owners of the lots which were condemned by the city last spring, the lots that lie between the Auditorium and Fiterman's building, stated to the council that his clients wished the city to make them an offer for the lots before the case came up in district court to which the cases were appealed. The appraiser set the value of the lots at $1680 for the four lots and it was thought that a setlement might be affected before the case comes before the court. It was decided to make an offer of $500 per lot if the case sould be settled.

Other business transacted by the council was the granting of permits to Mrs. J. Caldis to remodel the Caldis building which was partially destroyed by fire early last week and the granting of a dance permit to the Thief River Falls Athletic club. While the permit for rebuilding the Caldis building was being discussed Harry Schuster, member of the local fire department, appeared in behalf of the department and asked that smoke masks be purchased. Mr. Schuster stated that if they had had smoke masks at the time of the last fire that it would never have gotten out of the basement. He stated that the smoke was so thick that it was imposible to get anywhere near the source of the fire. The council voted to buy three smoke masks at an approximate cost of $55. The local fire department was also given free rein to compel the building of a fire escape on the Dudley building in view of the fact that the building as it is now equipped constitutes a fire hazard, in the words of Mr. Schuster.

Condensers for motors causing radio static must be bought or warrants will be sworn against the offenders of the ordinance, according to the latest action taken by the council.

The first reading of an amendment to the ordinance stating the frequency of council meeting was heard; the amendment changes the number of meetings from two a month to one a month with adjourned meetings called as often as seen fit. After the third reading the city council will meet once a month only and that is set for the second Tuesday of each month at eight p. m., in the council chambers of the city auditorium.

Former St. Hilaire Man Buys Fertile Newspaper

Melvin Sherva, former resident of St. Hilaire who has been employed for several years in a job printing plant at Wahpeton, has bought the Journal at Fertile. He recently arranged to enter a partnership to operate a job plant at Fargo, but gave that up in preference to the newspaper field at Fertile.

APRIL 1 IS FINAL DATE FOR CORN-HOG SIGN-UP

April 1st has been set as the final date on which county allotment committees may accept applications for 1935 corn-hog contracts in all states, Andrew Boss, state director of production, University Farm, St. Paul, has been informed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Mr. Boss urges all eligible farmers who have not yet signed up applications for contracts to do so at once.

Professor Beck Speaks At PTA Monday Night

Professor E. W. Beck of the Bemidji State Teachers College will address the March meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association which will be held Monday night, March 18, in the high school auditorium. The title of the discussion of Prof. Beck will be "Little Man, What Now?"

Singing of several selections and other music will furnish the remainder of the program. Following the regular program lunch will be served by a group of fathers with O. C. Paulson in charge of the arrangements.

Payment of Auto Tax Set Back to April 15

Announcement was made today by Alex Campbell, deputy registrar of motor vehicles, that the time for the payment of auto license fees has been extended to April 15th. This action was made necessary by the inability of the legislature to get together on a plan for license fees for the coming two years. A bill of some sort is expected to be passed at an early date, Mr. Campbell stated.

SMALL CROWD ATTEND BAND CONCERT SUN.

Concordia Band Present Fine Program of Selected Compositions

One of the finest concerts ever presented in Thief River Falls was played by the Concordia College band at the auditorium last Sunday afternoon. The attendance was deplorably small, only a few seats in the center tier of seats being occupied. Those who came were amply rewarded, however, by hearing in concert a masterly presentation of masterly compositions. Director J. A. Holvik has trained his youthful musicians with infinite care and his work was very evident in the precision and technique with which his band went thru their paces.

Outstanding in a program of classics was Largo, from the New World Symphony by Anton Dvorak. The English Horn solo by Ellsworth Haugseth was well played and was much appreciated by the audience.

Donald Berglund, flutist, presented a flute solo, "The Wind Among the Trees," with Herman Iverson acocmpanying at the piano. His number was rewarded with a burst of applause which demanded and received an encore number.

Other numbers presented were: Raymond overture by Amb. Thomas, Dance of the Hours, ballet from La Gioccnda by A Ponchielli; Rhapsodie Norviegienne, in two parts; Pastotale and Halling and Mazurka by Eduard Lalo; Die Lorelei, a paraphrase by Joseph Nervadba and the Nutcracker Suite by P. Tschaikowsky. The Marche Slave also by P. Tschaikowsky completed the program.

Co-op Creamery Bowling Team Leads Tournament

Another change in the standings of the teams in the local bowling tournament took place during the past week with the result that the Thief River Cooperative Creamery is now in the lead with 31 victories and 17 defeats for a percentage of 645. Second place is held by Glueks with 29 wins and 19 losses; third by Elofson's Jewelry with 28 wins and 20 defeats and fourth place by the Live Powers who have won 27 and lost 21. With these teams grouped as closely as they are it is very probable that any one of them may finish in first place when the season ends. The remaining four teams entered are grouped much lower but are not necessarily out of the running for this season with the possible exception of the Times team which is in the cellar with only 14 wins and 31 defeats.

McFarland to Arrive Sat. From Kissimmee, Florida

Word was received today that M. T. McFarland was planning on returning Saturday to Thief River Falls from Kissimmee, Florida where he has been resting for the past few weeks. It was stated that he would take a plane from Florida to Fargo, N. D., and from there he would take a car to the city. Business of importance to the city has been held up due to his absence but it is expected that his return will soon clear up many difficulties which have arisen during the past few weeks.

ED. HOLMGREN ACQUITED OF THEFT CHARGE

Jury out Twelve hours Before Returning Verdict to The Court

RUSH McALLISTER FREED

Charged with Assault, Jury Finds Defendent Not Guilty

A jury which was selected by the County attorney, H. O. Berve, and the attorney for the defense, H. O. Chomime, early last week for the case of Ed. J. Holmgren, charged with second degree grand larceny, found E. J. Holmgren not guilty of the charge after having listened to examinations for four days by the two attorneys. Mr. Holmgren was charged with taking an Essex automobile from in front of the Borchert-Hill Motor company garage early last spring which charge was disproved to the satisfaction of the jury by the defense attorney.

The case went to the jury about ten o'clock Friday morning and after nearly fourten hours deliberation a decision was finally reached which acquitted the defendant.

While the jury was deliberating the case of Ed. Holmgren, another jury was being selected to try the case of Rush McAllister, charged with second degree assault in connection with the death of his wife early last spring. The jury was chosen before a verdict was reached by the preceeding jury and it was not until Saturday morning that the evidence was presented to the court. After three days of examining witnesses the case was given to the jurors to decide about six-thirty o'clock on Tuesday evening and at ten-thirty a not guilty verdict was tendered.

The civil case of Gertrude Holstein, who has appealed in the condemnation proceedings of her property adjoining the approach to the new bridge, was heard Wednesday by the court with H. O. Chommie representing the plaintiff. The verdict returned by the jury was to allow her $750.00 for the total damages. The case now being heard by the court is that of Gunnuf Gunsteinson vs. S. L. Holm.

Minn. SERA Head Corrects Inquisitor

Mr. L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator, Minnesota SERA, has been prompted to publicly refute an implication, attributed to Senator James A. Carley in press comments, that prosecution by the SERA of relief officials and others charged with misappropriation of funds was started as a result of the legislative inquiry, headed by the Senator.

In a letter to the legislator, Mr. Zimmerman stated: "You imply that the Investigation committee of the Legislature deserves the credit for these prosecutions where, as a matter of fact, SERA started in October 1934 to gather evidence for criminal prosecutions which have culminated in the recent grand jury actions. This was before most of the present members of the Leigslature were elected.

The State Emergency Relief administration is continually investigating criminal charges and has several prosecutions to its credit. I do not believe that it is fair or proper that the Committee should take any credit, implied or otherwise, for the criminal actions instituted by the SERA but should give full and complete credit where it belongs."

J. Provencher Is Elected Senior Counselor of UCT

At the regular monthly meeting of the Minnesota Council No. 521 of the United Commercial Travelers of America, the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: J. Provencher, Senior Counselor; Anton Hall, Junior Counselor; C. Herb Jung, Past Counselor; F. C. Johnson, Conductor; J. L. Winklesky, Page; Gordon L. Storholm, Sentinel; A. G. Gabrielson, Chaplain; E. M. Bennes, Secretary-Treasurer; Carl B. Larson, and L. G. Larson, Executive Committee members for a two year term.

A. C. Gabrielson was selected as a delegate to the Grand Council Session to be held at Albert Lea, Minnesota, in June 1935; and Herb Jung was selected as alternate delegate.

C. G. Matson of Crookston, Senior Counselor for the past year, was present and acted in his official capacity.

Slashing Wet Waves

Hypocritical Leaders Responsible
Berton Braley in Christian Herald

Beer didn't re-employ a mililon men. It never had employed a tenth that number, but you couldn't tell a Wet that. Wine failed to add its million. For the same reason. And unless you include the almshouses, and the alcoholic wards and the jails and the street-cleaning departments, which took care of by-products of booze in pauperism and alcoholism and disorder, or swept them out of the gutters, the hooch industry never put a mililon men to work. As a matter of fact, the total number of employees in all the beer, wine, and liquor "industry"—if you like to call it that—was about 250,000 in 1919. Include the bartenders, and the truckmen and it might have reached half a million.

Those are the cold facts, and even if we assume that booze put a million men to work, how about the soda-makers, and the soft drink mixers and the candymakers that it put OUT of work:

And up to now, where are those enormous revenues we were to get from liquor? Oh, yes, they've increased. But not in such measure that we haven't had to boost the income taxes another notch.

While the nasty old saloon that never, never was to come back, is here, it's no surprise to me.

Along with the saloon we also have back the liquor lobby, which already has knocked any noble experiments in real control into a number of cocked hats. It seems incredible that every abuse that John Barleycorn practiced before Prohibition could re-flower so rankly in less than a year after repeal, but unless you're a Wet—and a particularly and obstinately blind Wet at that—you'll know that this noxious growth is flourishing in the same old muck.

If I've seemed only mildly satirical about this situation, it's only the habit of trying to control my temper in controversy. Inside I'm furious.

Furious that the lies and the propaganda of the same lawless interests that ruled before Prohibition have gulled millions of well-meaning people into abandoning it. Furious that we'll have to wallow in the gob of booze again for several years before the old voters who have forgotten what they learned before 1920, and the new voters will have to find out, will give us a chance to climb out of the booze. And most furious because the leaders who got us into this Repeal mess were the people who refused to enforce prohibition, whose lawlessness, ineptitude or venality caused the abuses that admittedly hampered Prohibition's effectiveness—the fanatic, bigoted, intolerant hypocrites who damned a law as a failure because they had done their best to make it a failure.

The Wets give me a pain in the neck—and in addition to that, they give me a consuming, furious, seething and incandescent rage in my veins!

Pedigreed Seed Stock Low at N. W. Station

Shipments of pure seed grain to Soviet Russia, Mexico and to twelve Western states, in addition to scores of orders from pure seed growers scattered throughout the Red River Valley, have practically exhausted the supply of pedigreed seed at the Northwest Station, according to E. R. Clark, pure seed specialist. This brings to a close the largest distribution of pure seed made by the station in recent years, over three thousand bushels having been shipped in small lots prior to March 1.

Thatcher and Mindim wheat, Anthony and Gopher oats, Velvet and Wisconsin 38 barley, Redwing flax, and Crookston strain Northwestern Dent corn were the chief varieties included in the distribution. There has been an especially strong demand for Thatcher wheat, the rust resistant variety of hard red spring wheat first distributed last season. The Hindimi is a pure strain of Amber durum carefully selected on the station farm to insure freedom of admixtures from spring wheat and barley. Velvet and Wisconsin 38 are smooth awned varieties, both being recommended for malting. Wisconsin 38 yields somewhat more than Velvet at the Northwest station, matures a few days earlier, but has weaker straw.

TRANSIENT LABOR WILL SAVE BIG PELICAN LAKE

A transient camp is rapidly nearing completion at Halvorson's Bay on Big Pelican lake in Crow Wing county, according to Oscar W. Behrens, director, transient division, Minnesota SERA. About 160 men placed at this camp will construct a channel to divertPelican brook into Big Pelican lake as a restoration measure. The site for the camp was provided through the initiative of civic clubs of Brainerd, anxious to conserve the natural beauty of this renowned lake region of central Minnesota.

BIG ROCK CRUSHING JOB FOR WABASHA COUNTY

A $30,000 work relief project to provide crushed rock for Wabasha county road improvements has been approved by the Minnseota SERA, according to Walter F. MacGregor, state engineer for the organization. The county has agreed to contribute $20,000 towards the total cost. Approximately 50 relief clients will be employed on the project.

Northwest School Plans Summer School Projects

Northwest School students are now registering for special home project work to be carried on at home during the summer months.

Boys' projects include dairy herd management, pork production, sheep raising, baby beef production, livestock judging, potato production, garden and truck crops, windbreak planting, plant identification, weed eradication, beekeeping, pure seed production, farm accounts, poultry production, building construction, tractor operation, and community service. Home projects available for girls include fruit, vegetable, and meat canning, preserving, baking, meal preparation, room furnishing and dressmaking.

These projects are outlined by heads of the various departments of the school and carried on by the students under the direct supervision of Home Project leaders, E. R. Clark, R. J. Christgau, and Retta Bede. The projects are so organized that the students put into practice the information they have gained during the six months school year. This work, therefore, results in the establishment of miniature demonstration and experimental farms throughout this region. At the close of the season each student is required to make a careful report including production methods and financial returns.

MISERY AND TERROR STALK IN ARKANSAS

By Naomi Mitchison
Prominent British Trade Unionist; Author of
"The Vienna Diary"

I have traveled over most of Europe and part of Africa, but I have never seen such terrible sights as I saw among the sharecroppers of Arkansas.

Here are people of good stock, potential members of a great community, and they are being treated worse than animals, worse than farming implements and stock. They are not shiftless, they want to work. They want to live decently as workers; but even the right to work is denied them. They seem to be denied of all their rights. They are dressed in rags; they have barely enough food to keep them alive; their children get no education; they are a prey to diseases which the scientific resources of modern civilization could easily eliminate. I saw houses, if one can call them that, in which whole families lived in conditions of indescribable misery.

Children Marred for Life

Here was a log cabin half sunk in flood water and in it some eight people, one of them a mother yellow and boney with malaria, her new born child in her ams. The only furniture in the house was a table, a bench and a stove, and two beds for all eight of them.

In another home was a bed, made this time out of old bits of rusty iron, patched with rags. The youngest child was two years old, but his mother was still nursing him; she could at least be sure he got some milk that way. She herself was grey haired with a face of such misery that it seemed scarcely possible she could go on living. She earned enough to feed her children on corn bread and perhaps gravy by picking wood out of the river and selling it. Her two sons helped her do this; she could not send them to school. But even if they had not been working for her, how could they have gone, wearing nothing but rags, and full of pellagra?

Everywhere the children are rotten with deficiency diseases; they are marked for life. Everywhere they were three or four years undersized; they will never grow up into the strong men and women they should be.

Union the Only Hope

There is only one hopeful thing about the situation adn that is the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union. Here one may see the truest human values, brotherhood loyalty and immense courage in the face of danger, and here something has happened which of terrific historical importance. For the first time in the history of the United States, perhaps in the history of the world, white people and colored people are working together in a common cause with complete trust and friendship.

They are working together for what is supposed to be everyone's birthright, a decent standard of living, education, hope for the future. At present they have none of these things; their only chance of getting them is through their union. The central government has failed them, not through its own fault, but through the deliberate obstruction of the planters and their social system. It is quite clear that the planters want to keep the sharecroppers in a state of slavery. Up to now they have managed to do this.

But the eyes of the world are on them. For the sake of all we value in civilization, the present state of affairs has got to end. The sharecroppers have got to be treated as decent people. the fine men and women whom they are. It will be better if this is done constitutionally and peacefully. But if such means fail, other means must be used. Justice carries the scales of peace, but it also carries a sword.

DEERWOOD CITY HALL PROJECT APPROVED

A new $44,000 city hall and auditorium is assured the city of Deerwood through ratification of the project by the work division of the Minnesota SERA, it is announced by Walter F. MacGregor, state engineer for the administration. Of the total cost, the city will contribute about $14,000, part of which sum will be expended for the site. About 125 relief clients will be employed on this construction job, which will require nine months to complete.

U. S. EXPERTS URGE $22,000,000 YEARLY STATE ROAD BUDGET

If Minesota is to provide "resonably adequate" highway service for the public on the expanded state system, an annual expenditure of approximately $22,000,000 should be made on trunk highways.

This is the conclusion of experts of the United States Bureau of Public Roads who spent the past year in making an exhaustive study of Minnesota's highway problems at the request of the Citizens' Interim Highway committee authorized by the 1933 Legislature.

A summary of the study has been presented to the Interim committee and N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, by Dr. Henry Trumbower and H. R. Briggs, who supervised the work. Dr. Trumbower is economist for the Bureau of Public Roads and head of the economics department of the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Briggs is statistician for the Bureau of Public Roads at Washington.

The $22,000,000 annual expenditure which is recommended by Dr. Trumbower and Mr. Briggs for the present 11,300 mile trunk system is about the amount which was spent yearly on the old 6,700 mile system. If expenditures on the enlarged system were made on the same scale as on the old system, the yearly amount would be more than $36,000,000, their report states.

On the basis of state revenues existing in 1933 and 1934, without federal aid, the highway department would have only slightly more than $13,000,000 a year income for the trunk system, Commissioner Elsberg estimates. If the Legislature provides sufficient additional revenues to match federal aid, this amount will be brought up to about $20,000,000 a year, including the aid allowance of $3,400,000.

Regarding the general costs of the Minnesota highway system, the report says: "Judging by similar states where studies have been made, the Minnesota highway expenditures are not abnormal, and those made by the local units of government—especially the towns—seem low. The imposts against motor vehicles in Minnesota are less than those in adjoining states and in the country as a whole."

As to the division of trunk highway costs between the large cities and the rural districts, the report states that in 1932, rural residents paid 33 per cent of the motor vehicle license fees and gas tax while they accounted for 30 per cent of the traffic on the trunk system. The report includes that the city areas contribute slightly less in trunk highway revenue than their travel would call for.

Hoan Backs Prevailing Wage on Relief Work

Milwaukee.— Daniel W. Hoan, Socialist mayor of Milwaukee, has issued a statement supporting the McCarran amendment to the $4,880,000,000 public works bill.

This amendment would pay the prevailing rate of wages to relief workers.

Hoan's attitude is in marked contrast to that taken by the White House which insists that a pauper wage of $50 per month is sufficient for the unemployed.

The mayor's stand coincides with that taken invariably by Socialists in the city and county who have obtained minimum wage stipulations by force of city and county ordinances in all contracts for local public jobs.

In his statement the mayor dispels misapprehensions concerning the attitude taken by the United States Conference of Mayor of which the mayor is president

"The program of the United States Conference of Mayors as submitted to President Roosevelt for a huge program of public works did not indorse the $50 a month wage," Hoan stated.

WORKERS' RESISTANCE SHATTERS FACIST ILLUSIONS

Vienna. (TIS).—All hopes on the part of the Austro-Fascist rulers that the workers have become reconciled to the new state and the destruction of their organizations have been shattered by the mass protests on the anniversary of the ill-fated February civil war. The propaganda activities were so well-timed and so well prepared by the underground Socialist movement that all government precautions and the concentration of police and troops in Vienna proved in vain. Hundreds of thousands of leaflets were distributed throughout the city. Some of the streets were actually snowed under by anti-government leaflets. Other actions such as the order to keep the workers' apartments dark, etc., were also successful. The government retaliated by arresting about 500 Socialists who will be sentenced to severe prison terms.

EXPANSION PLANNED FOR TRANSIENT RELIFF SYSTEM

In a move to lessen overcrowding and promote sanitary conditions in Minnesota's transient camps, the Federal Emergency Relief administration has given preliminary approval to a $320,000 improvement, it is announced by Oscar W. Behrens, Minnesota SERA transient relief director.

The plan contemplates the establishment of six or seven camps, to absorb the overflow from the 30 already in operation or in various stages of construction. In selecting the campsites, due consideration is given proximity to work projects. Transient labor will be employed in the construction, and equipment and supplies will be purchased in Minnesota. All activities of the camps are financed by the federal government.

SHERMAN TO CONDUCT ANNUAL GUN AUCTION

Everett S. Sherman, Minneapolis, wil lact as auctioneer, at the public sale of confiscated guns and other equipment which will be held by the Division of Game and Fish Saturday, March 16, at the Deutches House, 444 Rice Street, St. Paul. The sale will start promptly at 10 a. m. The building in which the sale will be conducted is located to the rear of the State Office Building.

About 300 guns, including both rifles and shotguns, will be placed on sale to the highest bidder. Fishing tackle and other hunting and fishing paraphernalia will be sold.

FORESTRY PATROLMEN IN SCHOOL AT GRAND RAPIDS

Patrolmen in the Minnesota State Forest Service are going to school this week. The occasion is the annual school for patrolmen which started last week at Grand Rapids.

R. V. Billington, of the United State Department of the Interior, is in charge, with round table discussion taking the place of formal classes. Administrative problems peculiar to the forest service are receiving major attention, according to Grover Conzet, state forester.

PLUMMER HIGH BASKETBALL TEAM TO BANQUET AND ELECT

The Plummer High School team has finished its season and now all that remains are the memories. the banquet, and the election of next year's captain. The team finished fourth in the district, for a new high for the local lads and brought home a ball as emblematic of the accomplishment. The high school and the town are pleased with the showing made during the past year and hope that the success will be continued in the coming year.

Including the district tournament, the P. H. S. team accounted fofr 10 victories in 18 starts against the most difficult competition ever attempted by the local team. Leland LaVoy, Arnie Karlstad and Joe Fallon are the graduating lettermen, leaving a strong nucleus for next year's team.

Mrs. Langlie and Mrs. LaVoy will entertain the ooys at the basketball banquet during the first part of next week, at which time the captain for the 1936 team will be elected. Letters will also be awarded at that time.

GAME FEEDING MAJOR ACTIVITY OF WARDENS

A major activity of state game wardens during February, according to a report by Erling Swenson, game and fish director, was the feeding of upland game birds and deer. Through these efforts, "thousands of game birds and animals were saved," he said.

"We have had wonderful cooperation from sportsmen's organization and interested individuals throughout the state in our effort to provide feed and cover for our wild life," Director Swenson stated.

A total of 120 arrests were made by wardens during the month with $1,435 assessed as fines because of game and fish law infractions.

Madrid (TIS).—Victorious Fascism is beginning to repay its debts to the Spanish industrialists. The 44 hour week, won by the Spanish metal workers after years of hard struggle, has been abolished by government decree. In its place the 48-hour week has been introduced. All efforts of the workers' spokesmen to maintain the 44-hour week in the interest of combatting unemployment have proven unavailing.

PLUMMER P. T. A. TO MEET

The Plummer P. T. A. will hold its regular monthly meeting on Thursday, March 21. A special program including a one-act play and a speaker have been engaged for the evening. A large turnout is expected.

MILLIONS OF TROUT FRY AT STATE HATCHERIES

Trout fisherman who are anxiously awaiting the opening of the season in many counties of the state on May 1, will rejoice to learn that at the present time there are located in the state's trout hatcheries something like 7,245,000 trout fry. According to a report by Dr. Thaddeus Surber, superintendent of fish propagation for the game and fish division, only a few rainbow trout eggs were being taken at the close of February at the St. Paul hatchery.

Many of the trout fry will advance rapidly to the fingerling stage now as earliest hatches took place in December, Dr. Surber said.

Theological Students Increase In Austria Under Fascism

Following the victory of Fascism in Austria, the number of theological students has increased 132 per cent. The number of religious orders in Austria has risen from 82 to 98. During 1934, 23 new or rebuilt churches have been opened in Vienna alone. Some of the public rooms in the famous workers' apartment buildings in Vienna, formerly used for the cultural activities of the workers, have now been turned over for religious services, despite the lack of response of the workers.

Austrian Poilce Terror Continues

Police terror throughout Austria still rages unchecked. According to official reports the total number of arrests from March, 1934 to January, 1935 was 38,132. About 20,000 of these were Socialists and the rest Nazis. 106,317 apartments in Vienna were searched by the police, which means that every one of the 45,000 houses in Vienna was submitted to at least two or three police visits. Approximately 27,000 searches were successful, and yielded anti-government material to the police.

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1897."

Politicians believe in democracy as long as it assists them to get what they want. But once having achieved their selfish ambitions, they are quick to forsake democracy and embrace anything that will attain other ends a real democracy would outlaw.—Ayefell.

YES, THIS IS STILL AMERICA

In Pensylvania the relief office personnel locked themselves in and played cards while hungry clients battered at the door. "Go home and behave yourselves and you will get some relief," they said. To which the people replied that they had starved long enough, they would not stand it any longer without a protest.

In Kentucky, coal miners, locked out of their work, freeze and starve in caves and hovels, infants nursed by animals.

All through the "Solid South" the share croppers, evicted from their humble homes, deprived of an opportunity to provide for themselves by the AAA cotton curtailment of production program, live in the jungles like beasts. Not just a few, but by the thousands.

All thru the east, jobless and penniless people have moved to the dumpgrounds and live in sheet-iron shacks so that they can be nearer to their source of food.

In the drouth counties of Minnesota, cattle have died of hunger. The horses are 99 per cent of them unfit to enter the fields this spring. Women and children have been on subsistence rations for moths.

In Pennington county, the garden spot of the Northwest, this year, over 1200 people are on relief. In Thief River Falls three hundred workers are on relief or on part relief and part-time work, or on part-time subsistence pay.

And yet, this is still America. The land of the free and the home of the brave. The land where every man has the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The land of equality. The land of plenty for all. But, something has slipped. These things that were decreed by the Founding Fathers and gained with the blood of martyrs has been lost to us. We have to choose now between two things! Shall we fight to regain those things; or shall we sink still farther into the morass of poverty, peonage, slavery to Mammon?

The Thirteen Colonies were faced with a similar choice. To fight for their liberty or to grovel under the heel of despots. They choose a fight for liberty. They organized their forces for battle and traitors were not tolerated. A man had to be with the people or with the English king. He couldn't be both.

Lincoln was faced with the choice of perpetuating the Union or allowing it to be broken asunder. He choose to perpetuate the union, altho it meant that which grieved him more than anything else could; civil war. Traitors were not tolerated. A man had to be either Unionist or Secessionist; he couldn't be both.

The Farmer-Labor association is an organization of men and women dedicated to the principles of the American Declaration of Independence. Organized for a war of the ballots for political power to wrest control from the Oligarchy of Gold and Greed which has seized government and use it to their own ends. A war of Independence; a war to perpetuate the Union; a war against slavery for the masses. To save homes and firesides and American Institutions in the "Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

Only thru the loyalty of its members to their organization can such a war be fought to a successful conclusion. Traitors can not be toletrated. Men who are placed in office whether elective or appointive thru the efforts of this organization, must answer to the organization. Men placed in office must be loyal to the organization or get out of office. Insofar as it is posible to reward good soldiers, they must be rewarded and inasfar as it is possible to discipline the traitors they must be disciplined or the organization disintegrates and dies.

No man can ride two or more horses in this fight. Either he is for the people and against the special interests or he is for the special interests and against the people. He can't be both.

When any man because of personal jealousies or ungratified political ambitions, or both or because of any other reason begins to hamper the progress of his own organization; aiding the opposition and its ticket, or refuses to support fully his own organization ticket and its platform, he is boring from within and that has always, in every organization, been considered disloyalty and treason. It merits expulsion from the organization and withdrawal by the organization of any prestige, position of trust, power or influence that he may be enjoying as a result of affiliations with the organization in the past.

The rule is inexorable. It is age-old and has been invoked by every political party ever organized in America or anywhere else. There are no Farmer-Laborites holding positions in the departments of state government controlled by Mike Holm, Julius Schmahl or Stafford King. If any man working in their departments should suddenly change his political views and be foolish enough to voice them he would immediately lose his job. If any of them had supported Governor Olson or Paul A. Harris in the last campaign he would have lost his job. If he had refrained from supporting the Republican ticket from top to bottom he would have lost his job. And efficiency or ability would not have saved him.

Those who now weep because the Farmer-Labor asociation in this county are invoking the rule seem to forget that a few insiders consisting of a Republican editor and one or two Republican attorneys "dictated" patronage in this county as long as Republicans held power in the state. And the rank and file of Republican voters in the county were never consulted. If a department of state government under Republican control was to appoint a representative in this county today, it is likely that only two men would be consulted. Their recommendations would suffice. They would constitute quite an effective "super-government."

The Farmer-Laborites of this county in convention, elected seven men to serve as the County Central Committee. That committee is composed of representative Farmer-Laborites from all parts of the county. Five of them are farmers, one is a laborer and one is a railroad engineer. They are far more representative of the Farmer-Laborites in this county than any Republican county committee that ever existed has been representative of the Republican voters of the county. They have the confidence of the rank and file of the Farmer-Labor voters of Pennington county and have been entrusted by the association members to act for them in all matters of party policies, patronage and discipline.

The Farmer-Labor association is not primarily concerned with electing men to office nor with keeping them there after they are elected. Political power and control of offices thru elected officials are only desired in order to further the aims of the association as expressed in its platform. When the association makes endorsements and campaigns for its endorsed candidates it is in the belief that if they are elected they will be responsive to the association and its wishes. It follows therefore that if and when they fail to cooperate with the association they cease to be of any value as fighters in the front line trenches for a return of the government to the hands of the people. Their withdrawal should follow as a matter of course.

It would be well for all Farmer-Labor officials, both elected and appointed, to bear these things in mind when they are tempted by back-slapping and hail-fellow-well-met stuff from the opposition. When election time comes along or when there are recommendations for jobs to be made they invariably support their own crowd and the sap who was a "good Fellow" over the coffee cups will find that he is neither fish nor fowl; deserted by his own crowd and ignored by his new friends.

THE AAA PROGRAM
(Northern Minnesota Leader)

The AAA program for agriculture will go down in history as one of the greatest follies ever attempted in this country. Analyze the entire program and see if you are able to discern anything of a fundamental nature in it.

There is nothing in the plan that will be of a permanent nature. There is nothing that will really benefit agriculture in the end. The benefit payments will not solve the farmers' problems and make for permanent security for agriculture.

It creates false hopes and when the farmers are disillusioned there will be a day of reckoning for those who advised the "Triple A" program.

Is the President to blame for the AAA program? We would not say that he is. The Farm Bureau Federation took credit for this plan and they naturally will have to take the blame when it becomes plain what a gigantic hoax it really is.

The AAA program deals with effect and not with cause. A program of permanent benefit to agriculture would deal with the cause and not with effect. The cause of the farmers' predicament is not the fault of production. It is the fault of distribution. The products of the farmers are distributed though the marketing machinery of the other fellow to consumers whose buying power is limited by unemployment or limited wages.

And coming to this we note that the Farm Bureau's president, O'Neil, has gone on record for the subsistence wage proposal of President Roosevelt, while the U. S. Senate stands pat for the prevailing wage. In view of the fact that Labor is the farmers' biggest customer, it seems rather peculiar to have Mr. O'Neil go on record for decreasing the income of the best customer the farmer has.

We have nothing against the Farm Bureau Federation, but we would think that they should be on the lookout for a program for agriculture that will be of a permanent nature. Then too, there are several other peculiar stands that the national president, O'Neil, has taken.

Many of the State organizations of the Farm Bureau Federation do not desire to follow the reactionary stand of the National organization. Perhaps the most outstanding of these is the Indiana Farm Bureau. If all he state organizations would take the stand of Indiana, there is no question but what the program of the national organization would be of a different nature.

JUST DIGGING DIRT?
(St. Paul Daily News)

More than a week ago the senate investigating committee heard the unsupported story of a disappointed bidder for a contract on the state office building.

He furnished a sensation by charging that the state purchasing agent and the general contractor insisted that the price of a successful subcontract was a $10,000 contribution "to the party."

There was an immediate denial from the state official, the general contractor and the governor—all of whom demanded an oportunity to clear themselves from the allegation. That opportunity has not yet been given by the committee though the damage of the original charge is still being done.

This is just another instance of the kind of one-sided investigating which is being done by the senatorial sleuths.

Why the committee does not pursue its inquiry into important matters such as allegations of loaded overhead, fancy salaries paid for needless jobs and the like is more a mystery than ever—unless, of course, none such exists.

If that is the case, the hearing might better be brought to a close. Even as a show it is beginning to flop. The only purpose served so far has been to manufacture some cheap political ammunition. But perhaps the purpose was to dig dirt?

TAKING THE PROFIT OUT OF WAR
(Minnesota Leader)

Only adequate perparedness can take the profit out of war, Major J. L. Lewis of the national guard told members of a St. Paul luncheon club recently. "War profiteering begins," he said, "when vast quantities of supplies must be gathered at once regardless of cost to meet a war crisis."

If what he says is true it would merely take the profit out of war and put it into preparedness for war. And the same gang of profiteers would benefit. Nor would it stop war. On the contrary. Expensive preparedness for war is an incentive to armed conflict and all history proves it.

The way to take the profit out of war is to put an end to war. The quickest way to put an end to war would be to allow the people themselves to vote upon whether or not the nation should be plunged into war.

HOW WOULD YOU VOTE?
(Minnesota Leader)

"Farmer-Laborites want to soak the rich," declare the Twin City dailies. That, of course, is untrue. But suppose it were true. Contrast it with the present program of Special Privilege and private monopoly which, undeniably, is "soak the poor." If it came right down to your having to choose between the two, how would you decide?

Pronouncing F. D.'s Name

Those who think they know, tell me that Franklin Delano Roosevelt's name is pronounced Franklin DELL-a-no ROSE-e-velt. This name has been mispronounced perhaps more than any other in public life,—and this is the name that some think will go down in history along with that of Geo. Washington, Abe Lincoln, and others. Some, again, pronounce the name as though it were spelt with an M, a U, and a D.

"Presidents Must Gaurd Their Words"

When the shouting and the tumult died after Russian recognition, it was found that, instead of a better understanding between this country and Russia, a deeper misunderstanding had been built up. The whole trouble seems to lie in what Roosevelt promised Litvinoff and what Litvinoff promised Roosevelt, or what they both thought they promised each other, in the unofficial conferences they had befor the treaty of recognition was signed. A commentator of this fiasco says, "Presidents must guard their words." He goes on to say that diplomats are hired to say things in such a way that they cannot be misconstrued.

It seems to me that diplomacy, as practiced between nations, has come to mean merely a skillful battle of words with no meaning, —a furore of lies and evasions dressed in the semblance of truth.

In the Litvinoff affair, there were certainly misunderstandings on both sides. After Russian recognition, it was supposed that Russo-American trade would increase by leaps and bounds; as a matter of fact, it almost disappeared. Perhaps the President promised something he had no power over. Trade and commerce are still in the hands of the enemies of the Soviet Union.

Furthermore, the supposition that with recognition, Soviet Russia would assume all debts made by the Kerensky regime, is as fallacious as to believe that the U. S. A. would assume all debts made by the Confederate states of America.

Thus has diplomacy arrived at a stalemate. When will governments deal openly and honestly with one another, without recourse to cloudy language?

"Banking is Dead"

James Paul Warburg, international banker and financial advisor as well as spokesman for the New Dealers, says that banking, as a business, is dead, and that the banker of the future must take up the work as a profession, as a doctor lawyer, clergyman, or educator does, with an ideal of public service, and a willingness to live on a mere salary.

Although he is the inveterate foe of all those who want to change the essentials of the capitalist system, and is one of the ablest spokesmen of the old order, yet he believes in old-age and unemployment insurance and adapting business to what he calls "modern needs."

It is such ready adaptability of the money lords to the current situation that is most dangerous to those who want to change the system for the better. They make seeming concessions when it is to their advantage to do so and are able to fool the people that much longer. Warburg, personally, is charming, a born salesman, fluent speaker, a fine scholar, a poet, and a musician. All those in contact with him perhaps thing that he is a "man of destiny" on account of his personality. However, that does not change the fact that he is for J. P. Warburg and all the rest of the "J. P.'s" of the financial world, actual and potential.

Typewriting Exercise

In order to bring every key into play, we used to write "The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog." Now there's a new one for typewriter students: "Pack my bag with five dozen liquor jugs." This contains them all but "x"; and you see plenty of them after emptying five dozen liquor jugs.

PHUNONYMS—

And now, children, we shall examine four words that sound much the same, but have very different meanings:

skulldiggery .— the process of scratching one's head for ideas.
skulldruggery—that tired feeling that comes from lack of inspiration.
scrawldoggery—but the man keeps on, scrawling doggedly, and finds that all practices indulged in by Republicans, Democrats, and Communists are skullduggery.

Pat—What does it mean in the Bible when it says "the quick the dead"?

Mat—Sure, Pat, it means th' pedistrians.

Pat—An' how's that?

Mat—Some of 'em is quick, an' the rest is dead.

The Farmers' Union at Washington

A bill has been introduced in Congress which provides for the correction of the method of determining parity.

1. By providing for the increased expense for taxes and interest now paid out by farmers as compared to such costs prevailing during the base period 1909-1914.
2. By excluding premiums paid for wheat in determining the average farm price.
3. By providing a method for recovering losses now sustained by refunding of processing taxes on wheat used by federal, state and Charitable institutions.

This amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act will effect a valuable correction to the present method of determining parity, and will increase the wheat producers' income about $47,000,000 per year. If that should be passed on to the consumer it would only increase the cost of a one pound loaf of bread about one-sixth of a cent.

This $47,000,000 increase in wheat producers' income is accounted for as follows:

From recouped tax exemptions, ...	$19,000,000
From the exclusion of Wheat Premiums	8,000,000
From increased index figure	20,000,000
Total	$47,000,000

This increase would favorably affect North Dakota about $6,000,000 and Kansas about $9,000,000. it creates a much larger crop insurance because of the character of benefit payments provided under the Wheat program.

This method of computing parity would increase the benefit payment by more than eleven cents per bushel.

Mr. Thatcher, Washington representative of Farmers National Grain Corporation testified before the House Agricultural Committee today in support of this amendment.

The Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee expects to testify tomorrow before the House Agricultural Committee in support of this and other amendments especially the amendment providing for the licensing of dealers in farm products. This amendment proposes the licensing of dealers handling specialty crops and provides for reports covering their activities for the purpose of eliminating excess profits etc. This amendment is being strenuously opposed by the processors and dealers who are not in favor of having the public know what becomes of the difference between what the consumer pays and what the producer receives. One processor went so far as to say it is none of the farmers' business what the processor receives or what he does with the product after it leaves the farmers' hands.

The Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee attended a dinner given by the Monetary Conference. The National Monetary Conference group is sponsoring a Money Reform Bill known as the Nye-Sweeney Bill. This bill embodies the Money program sponsored for many years by the Farmers Union. It is a bill to restore to Congress its constitutional power to issue money and regulate the value thereof. Among speakers on the evening's program were Senator Smith of South Carolina, who acted as toastmaster, Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, Senator Nye of North Dakota, ExSenator Owens of Oklahoma, Irving Fisher, Economist of Yale university; and Dr. Biglowe, of Cincinnati. Representing the Farmers Union at the speakers table were Messrs. Everson, Kennedy and C. C. Talbott. Lewis Ward, Father Coughlin's Washington representative, spoke briefly on the Union for Social Justice and also read the Resolutions adopted by the National Monetary Conference on March 6, 1935.

ECONOMIC SLAVERY
By
Robert H. Hemphill
Financial Authority

(From Detroit Times

In 1818 the Legislative Committee of the State of New York in their report, said:

Of all aristocracies none more completely enslave a people than that of money; and, in the opinion of your committee, no system was ever better devised so perfectly to enslave a community as that of the present mode of conducting banking establishments. Like the siren of the fable, they entice to destroy. They hold the pursestrings of society, and by monopolizing the whole of the circulating medium of the country, they form a precarious standard by which all the property in the country—homes, lands, debts and credits, personal and real estate of all description are valued, thus rendering the whole community dependent upon them; proscribing every man who dares to expose their unlawful practises."

In the history of the country there have been periodical crises —struggles by the forces of democracy to recover the control of the nation's money by issuing full legal tender money, against which this group of international bankers have fought desperately, using every available weapon.

In the Autumn of 1862 a "confidential circular" was issued by an agent of European capitalists to American bankers, known as "the Hazard Circular." It reads as follows:

"Slavery is likely to be abolished by the war power, and chattel slavery destroyed. This I and my European friends are in favor of, for slavery is but the owning of labor, and carries with it the care of the laborer; while the European Plan led on by England is capital's control of labor by controlling wages. This can be done by controlling the money. The great debt that capitalists will see to it is made out of the war, must be used as a measure to control the volume of money. To accomplish this the bond must be used as a banking basis. We are now waiting to get the Secretary of the Treasury to make this recommendation to Congress."

During the interim between these crises, these international banking houses have continued to preserve and strengthen their hold upon public sentiment by acquiring an increasing grip upon the banking system of the country and upon the leading newspapers and publications; by dictating the personnel of the treasury and financial departments of the government and by constantly endeavoring to include within their group of sympathizers every person who had sufficient prominence to materially affect the legislative sentiment of the country.

At the same time they have increased their hold upon the government itself by directing legislation in such channels that the government would constantly increase its interest bearing obligations, and by a continuous barrage of propaganda sought to fasten in the minds of the people that the government must BORROW money —that to issue money is some vague sort of suicide.

The issuance of government bonds, interest and principal of which must be raised by taxation, is, in the final analysis, a system of levying tribute on the whole country, to be paid to this monied aristocracy in control of the central banks, in return for credit which they create at no cost to themselves—a mere bookkeping entry, which is put into circulation as a substitute for money.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

He may think he is drinking beer, wine, gin, whisky, or what you will, of alcoholic beverages.

But the lens of common sense reveals the fact that the drinker is consuming, not merely alcoholic intoxicants, but health, wealth, character, reputation, prospects and ultimately life itself. If so, anything which can reduce the consumption of beverage alcohol must benefit both society and the state.

Before the days of National Prohibition, the consumption of alcoholic beverages for the people of the United States averaged as high as 22.50 gallons, or the equivalent of 4.85 gallons of absolute alcohol, per year. United States Government estimate of all possible consumption of alcoholic liquors under prohibition in 1930 revealed the fact that there was an annual per capita consumption of not over one gallon of absolute alcohol per year.

The first year since repeal of the 18th Amendment shows a per capita consumption of liquor, legal and illegal, already more than twice as great as that under National Prohibition. Whatever else may be said about them, dry laws do lessen drinking and decrease per capita consumption of alcoholic poison.

Therefore they safeguard health, wealth, character and life itself, to the extent they are enforced and fairly administered.

THE READER'S ROSTRUM

To the Editor:

As an entirely disinterested outsider, may I submit a few remarks regarding the discord that seems to seriously threaten the very existence of your cooperative creamery organization here.

I might explain, that up to two years ago, I have always been a farmer and have taken an active part in their struggles, to better their economic conditions. I have seen both successes and failure in the efforts to, by cooperation, better their condition.

In every case in my experience, where a cooperative has failed, there was always the element of discord introduced, sometimes by individual private jealousies, and sometimes fostered by rival business interests.

I can quite understand how the rival interests would gloat over the discord among cooperatives, fully justified in their hope that the cooperatives would be destroyed or weakened by their petty jealousies and thus give them an opportunity for larger profits.

I do not feel that I have any right to judge, in the controversy you have before you here at Thief River Falls, but let me offer a few suggestions that I hope you will receive in the friendly spirit they are offered. It seems that L. O. L. has been blamed (whether justly or not, is not for me to say) for not paying as much for butterfat here as some others have paid elsewhere.

Is it not just possible, that there are certain reasons for this? That they are not to be blamed for? For instance, your very heavy overhead, from various causes, that could be remedied, and last but not least the very low average of sweet cream delivered to your creamery, thereby causing a loss of several thousand dollars according to the report submitted by your District Field Manager.

Do not destroy your cooperative by trying to grind your personal axes, but meet each other in a friendly spirit, get together to make your cooperative an outstanding success. This you can do, if you bury the hatchet, and all work for the success of your cooperative. But do not forget, that the basis of all success in business is efficiency, and honest effort, and in unity is strength.

yours,
FRED FORSBERG.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

Lent leads us to think of a Man who was different. Jesus of Nazareth, dared. He carried a torch and blazed a Way. Opposite to flaming youth he was a youth aflame.

Jesus found the going tough. His back was to the wall and powerful opposing institutions and influences in front of Him.

He disturbed the general run of things. He was irritating to the powers that be. They got Him, broke His heart, murdered Him, but they could not down him, nor even bury Him for no tomb could hold Him.

The fanatical carpenter of Nazareth is honored during these days of Lent, above the honor bestowed to any other being. The Lord on the Cross is the great immortal; the greatest of all.

Madmen of yesterday are today's heroes; heretics of the last century are the orthodox of today; the radical Socialist of a decade ago is today's mild progressive.

Calvary was considered a fool's way; today we realize it was and is the only Way.

SPRING AND WINTER IN WASHINGTON

(From "Washington Revisited" by Bruce Blivens in New Republic)

When I was in Washington a few days ago, the city was experiencing one of those unseasonable spells of warmth that come so often in late February and make the unwary believe that spring is here. The parks suddenly burgeoned with government clerks at lunch time; under a friendly blue sky, automobilists opened their windows and their tires began to sing along the dry pavement. But a few hours later, a small blizzard came down on the wings of a biting northwest wind. The parks were white, the streets were black and wet again and the hotel doorman thumped his numb fingers against his sides. Spring was suddenly as far away as in December. Perhaps it was only a shivery imagination that made me compare the weather with the false dawn of hope in the minds of so many people regarding Mr. Roosevelt's ultimate intention, a hope that has been rudely frostbitten of late. But in any case the liberals in Washington are now a sad lot, shivering in the wintry wind. However unjust their feeling may be, they do believe that the President has let them down badly. I do not think that anything he might now do could restore their confidence in him; and, I must add in honesty, I can discover no important signs that he wishes such a restoration.

TO A DEAR LITTLE CHILD
by Lawrence Hawthorne

Oh, little child, may you fill this day
To the very end with the joy of play!

In the kindly glow of the morning light,
May your heart be happy and warm and bright;

Through the hours of gladness the whole day long,
May you romp with laughter and cheer and song;

In whatever way you choose to go,
May the flowers of beauty and kindness grow;

And when shadows tell that the day is done—
When you weary of pleasure and play and fun—

Then may gentle arms and a loving breast
Hold you tenderly, and bring blissful rest.

A $1.00 Dinner for 4

YOU can serve an inexpensive dinner and also have a heart if you will carry out the suggestions in the following menu, for your family will heartily enjoy the baked stuffed calves' hearts and other dishes it contains. Here is the menu for four, with approximate prices, which make the dinner cost only one dollar.

Fruit Cocktail 15¢
Baked Stuffed Calves' Hearts 35¢
Mashed Turnips 10¢
Bread and Butter 8¢
Carrot, Pea and Celery Salad, 17¢
Dessert Apples 10¢ Coffee 5¢

Carrot, Pea and Celery Salad: Chill the contents of an 8-ounce can of peas, one-fourth cup diced celery and one-fourth cup chopped, grated or ground carrots. Then combine the peas, celery and raw carrots, and moisten with three tablespoons mayonnaise. Season with salt and pepper and serve on firm lettuce leaves.

Dessert Apples: Bring one cup brown sugar and one cup water to boiling. Peel and core two apples and cut them into eighths. Add to syrup and cook gently until tender but pieces still whole. Remove apple sections and add the hot syrup slowly to the contents of a 6-ounce can of evaporated milk. Add two tablespoons butter, and cook one minute. Cool, flavor with a few drops of maple flavoring, and pour over apples.*

GOOD HEALTH
BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

TOO MANY GIRLS DIE OF TUBERCULOSIS

Girls in their teen age have been erally high average of health. In fact, statistics for Illinois show that the ten-twenty age period has the highest health average for any age period, both for boys and girls.

But too many girls die of tuberculosis in this age group. Their death rate is twice as high as for boys with tuberculosis in the same age period.

Many moralists will undoubtedly wag their heads and say that this is because the modern girl wears too few clothes and stays up too late.

But then how explain that in her grandmother's day, when girls wore loads of clothes and the wildest party was over before twelve, the same proportion of girls died of tuberculosis then as now?

In a study which we have been making in the medical research department of the University of Illinois, we have learned that since 1870, when the first vital statistics in this country were collected, the peak age for deaths from tuberculosis among girls was in the ten-fourteen-year group. That peak has held for every decade. In 1870, 208 girls died to each 100 boys in the ten-fourteen-year group; in 1880, 230 girls; in 1890, 250 girls; in 1900, 257 girls; in 1910, 262 girls, in 1920, 255 girls.

The jump from 208 girls in 1870 to 262 girls in 1910 is explained by the fact that the general death rate for girls in the 1870, 1880 and 1890 decades was much higher than it has been so far in this century. This means that in the earlier years not so many girls reached the ten-fourteen-year age as now, with our lowered death rate. They had more typhoid, diphtheria and other infectious diseases in those days

Moreover we learned that this condition held true in twenty-five other countries besides our own where statistics were available.

That set us thinking. Modern flapper foolishness certainly couldn't be held responsible for a condition that has held for decades all over the world. The cause is physiological. This ten-fourteen-year period is the same time when a girl passes through the stage from girlhood to womanhood. It is in this time that she starts her regular stimulation periods, when the metabolism of the body is increased. In tuberculosis the cure is largely rest, but with this monthly increased metabolism rate the body can't rest. Nothing that medical science can do can lower this high stimulation of the body at this time. It is a basic law of nature that there must be these rhythmic periods of stimulated bodily functions. Boys, on the other hand, do not have regular periods of increased metabolism.

What, then, can be done about decreasing this high death rate among girls? The common sense thing is: don't let the girls get tuberculosis.

You may say that is easier said than done. But young girls can be kept away from active cases of tuberculosis. This is easier to do now than it was in the past because active cases of tuberculosis are now usually brought to sanatoriums where they can be given the proper care. But if a girl should contract tuberculosis, then take care of it in the early stages. Tuberculosis can be cured easily if it is taken at the beginning. It is when it has been allowed to make progress that its cure is difficult.

Parents of young girls should be on the watch always to note signs of listless or finicky appetite, lack of desire to play or do active exercise, irritability. The cause may be some other reason entirely, but suspect tuberculosis and take her to the doctor for an examination.

One of the great landmarks of medical science was the discovery of the tuberculin test by Von Pirquet in 1907. By means of the tuberculin test it is possible to find out whether a person has ever been infected by the germ of tuberculosis. The test is made by placing a small amount of a substance called tuberculin between the layers of the skin. If the person has ever been infected, a small red swollen spot will appear within two days. A positive tuberculin test does not mean that the individual has active tuberculosis. It means only that the germ of the disease has located somewhere in the body. In most cases the cells of the body have built a wall around the germs so they cannot get out, unless the body loses its healthy state.

There is not much occasion for alarm when the disease is treated at the beginning. As we said befor, tuberculosis can be cured easily when recognized in its early stages. It should never be allowed to go further.

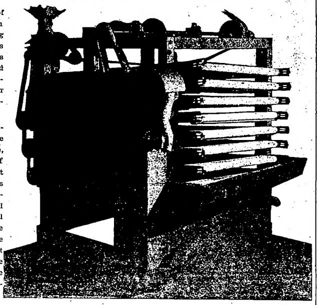
Local Seed Man Perfects Machine Which Eliminates Mustard Seed From Clover



Fred Forsberg and Sons of this city, who have been in charge of the seed cleaning for the local Land O' Lakes plant for the past years, has perfected a new Mustard Seed Eliminator which removes mustard seed from clover with almost unbelievable efficiency.

The machine, which occupies but twenty-five square feet of floor space, is driven by a one and a half norsepower motor, has eight decks of traveling endless belts hung on a double incline and rolls the mustard seed out to the ends and sides by agitation of the decks. The machine can be seen in daily operation at the cleaning plant in the Wool Pool building at the Soo tracks on North Atlantic avenue.

ROUGH FISH REMOVAL TO IMPROVE LAKES

Removal of 900,000 pounds of rough fish to improve lake condition for game fishes was reported for the month of February by Erling Swenson, director of Game and Fish. Twenty-five fishing agreements with professional fishermen were in effect during the month. Revenue received for the month to March 2 amounted to $3,557.49.

Fish markets are glutted with rough fish taken not only from Minnesota lakes but from lakes in the neighboring states of Iowa, Wisconsin, South Dakota and others located closer to markets. As a consequence fish prices are down and considerable difficulty has been encountered in disposing of rough fish, Director Swenson said.

WILD RICE PLANTING TO BENEFIT WATERFOWL

Planting of wild rice in Gunflint lakes in northeastern Minnesota will benefit wild magratory waterfowl under plans of the Civilian Conservation Corps. Northern Light lake will receive a large portion of the 900 pounds to be planted in these lakes this spring.

Last fall 2,800 pounds of wild rice were collected from Nine Mile, Royal and North Fowl lakes in the Superior National Forest. On the Chippewa National forest, 1,200 pounds of wild rice were gathered.

A total of 500 pounds of wild celery collected from near Walker will be used to improve lakes in the Chippewa.

CONDITIONS THAT WILL BRING COMMUNISM
By A. L. Harris

The following, taken from last issue of Time Magazine, is food for some sober thought. This vivid word picture is not a scene in in starving China but in "well-fed" America, the land of over-production, where it was found necessary to reduce acreage to reduce the neither a year old, sucking the dry production of food stuffs:

"Near Keysville a two-room house is occupied by three families, each consisting of man and wife and from one to four children each . . . .

"In one of the two rooms a six-year-old boy licked the paper bag the meat had been brought in. His legs were scarcely any larger than a medium-sized dog's leg, and his belly was as large as that of a 130-pound woman's. Suffering from rickets and anemia, his legs were unable to carry him for more than a dozen steps at a time; suffering from malnutrition, his belly was swollen several times its normal size. His face was bony and white. He was starving to death.

"In the other room of the house, without chairs, beds or tables, a woman lay rolled up in some quilts trying to sleep. On the floor before an open fire lay two babies, teats of a mongrel bitch. A young girl, somewhere between fifteen and twenty, squatted on the corner of the hearth trying to keep warm.

The dog got up and crawled to the hearth. She sat on her haunches before the blazing pine-knots. shivering and whining. After a while the girl spoke to the dog and the animal slunk away from the warmth of the fire and lay down again beside the two babies. The infants cuddled against the warmth of the dogs' flanks, searching tearfully for the dry teats."

Comfortable Corn

A FELLOW likes corn—it's a comfortable food, and when there's a corn dish for dinner there's no danger of getting anything slipped over on you—strange foods that you don't like. It makes for comfort, too, for growing youngsters who need plenty of vitality to track through the woods, to sail boats, play tennis, and do all those things which summers were made for.

Corn bread in its various forms—corn fingers, corn muffins, etc.—are good noonday breads for people who need energy. For the evening meal, if you wish to serve corn in a lighter form, try it as a meat substitute with nuts for your main dish, or serve a delectable corn salad that looks tempting and colorful. Whole grain corn in cans is most adaptable for salads while cream style corn is better for corn fritters, corn bread, etc.

Strength for Hot Weather

Here are some tested recipes that are particularly appealing for these summer days:

Corn and Walnut Loaf: Drain the contents of a No. 2 can of whole grain corn and run the corn through a food chopper. Add one-half cup of chopped walnuts, two beaten eggs, one-half cup milk and one-half cup crumbs. Season with salt and pepper. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake for forty-five minutes in a moderate oven—375 degrees. Serve with tomato sauce. This serves four persons.

Corn and Pepper Salad: Drain thoroughly the contents of one No. 2 can of whole grain corn. Add one-third cup of diced green pepper and one-fourth cup of diced pimientos. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add French dressing to moisten, and let marinate in the refrigerator for at least an hour. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves. This serves six.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

It was a week later.

Old Don Stuart, propped on pillows in the narrow, cell-like room of Joe Piette's hotel, listened to the colorful account that Bird-Eye Blaine, with many gestures and considerable profanity, rendered for him of what had transpired at Hoot Owl since Ben Elliott had taken charge of the operation.

". . . 'nd so he's got th' mill crew a-wurrkin' their blessid heads off fer him 'nd 's got thut ragged-pants gang av beet-weeders 'nd hay pitchers thut passes fer a loggin' crew doin' more'n they've evir done in their lazy loives before!"

"Good," gasped Stuart feebly and tried to smile. "Good boy. But . . . he's young and . . . alone against Brandon. It'll be . . . that hard nut he . . . was lookin' for."

"Harrd?" Bird-Eye glared at him. "Harrd! Th' harrder they come, th' better pleased he is! Sure 'nd he's a glutten fer work, Donny! 'Nd th' saints, they have a finger into ut, too, him a-comin' just whin they'd got pore owld Able licked. It'll be a tough foight or I'm a bad guesser, but d—n me eyes, whut a foighter th' lad is!"

A restless light appeared in Don's eyes and his thin old hands fidgeted nervously with the blankets.

"A tough fight. . . . Oh, he don't know . . . Bird-Eye, what he's up against." He struggled to sit erect and his eyes shone brightly with an odd sort of desperation. "If Brandon can't . . . drive him out . . . one way or another . . . he'll kill him." He gasped and swallowed, evidently making a great effort to talk rapidly. "I'm a coward, Bird-Eye. . . . Been a d—n coward . . . for years. I've been . . . afraid to tell . . . while I lived. Now . . . I'm afraid to die with it . . . on my soul!"

"Get . . . Paper."

He panted and Blaine looked in alarm at his friend as these last words took on significance for him.

"Lay back, Donny. Dawn't git yerself excited, b'y. . . . Coward? Naw, ye're no coward!"

He grasped the sick man by the shoulders and tried gently to force him back on the pillows but the old fellow resisted.

"Can't die. . . . Can't . . . with it on . . . my soul!" he gasped and lifted a face stamped with strange appeal to the little man.

Bird-Eye stood back, solemn and worried, scratching his head.

The other made a feeble gesture with one hand.

"A man's got . . . to fight fire with . . . fire. Brandon'll get him . . . unless he . . . unless . . ." He put a hand to his throat and moved his uplifted chin from side to side as though strangling. "Want to write . . . a letter, Bird-Eye. Get . . . paper. Fight . . . fire with fire!"

This was obviously no whim of a sick man. His necessity was not clear to Blaine but the other knew old Don was gripped by a burning conviction.

He hurried down the stairs, secured writing materials and, from the table in the little office picked up a mail-order-house catalogue. With these he ascended to the sick room again, taking the steps two at a time.

"Here ye are! Book to wroite on, paper, envilope, pencil. . . . I'll sit by ye, Donny."

Stuart did not start to write at once.

He sat staring straight before him in quandary, and then lifted his gaze to the little man who stood at his bedside.

"I'd like to be . . . alone, Bird-Eye," he said in a faint whisper. "I've been alone . . . with it so long . . . I think better alone."

The other shrugged.

"Ave course, Donny," he acquiesced. "Ave course. Ol'll come back when ye're finished."

He went downstairs, rubbers thumping on the treads, but he stood at the bottom a long interval, shaking his head in misgiving and muttering to himself. Then he turned about and crept back as softly as a cat. On the upper landing he seated himself leaning against the thin partition of matched boards which separated him from the sick man.

A half hour, perhaps, Bird-Eye sat there growing cramped and chilly in the draughty hallway. Then he leaped to his feet with a little cry. From within had come a long, retching gasp, a sharp creak of bed springs, a thud on the floor. Blaine burst into the room. The catalogue was beside the bed. Old Don lay half doubled forward, face in the blankets, one limp hand swaying slightly as it dangled over the edge.

"Donny! Donny, b'y, what's up?"

He raised the limp figure, laid it back, stared hard at the face which now seemed so peaceful and then ran excitedly down the stairway in frenzied search of Joe Piette.

In the room was confusion after Doctor Sweet answered the hasty summons. The doctor felt vainly for a pulse, touched the shrunken breast of the old cruiser and then turned away with a significant shake of his head.

The usual things were said and then Bird-Eye and the physician were alone in the room. The little Irishman's eyes brimmed with tears but behind these was an intent look as of one who impatiently awaits opportunity to pursue a specific purpose, and when the others trooped down the stairway he closed the door and returned hastily to the bedside.

"Sure 'nd where is ut?" he asked beneath his breath, riffling the leaves of the bulky catalogue, shaking folds out of the rumpled blankets.

"What are you after, Bird-Eye?" the doctor asked.

"Ah! Here ut be!"

On his hands and knees, peering beneath the bed, he uttered that ejaculation and, reaching far under, rose to his knees with a sealed envelope in his hands.

Across the face was a scrawl, written with an indelible pencil. Blaine scowled as he tried to make out the words, got to his feet, and moved across the room to hold the envelope closer to the light. Doctor Sweet bent over it beside him.

"Ben Elliott," the latter read aloud. "Open this when the nut gets too hard to crack."

The doctor scratched his mustache. He turned his face to meet Bird-Eye's startled gaze.

"It's somethin', Doctor, thut he didn't dare die with on his soul! Somethin' he was fearful to tell if he lived, as well. . . . Somethin' . . ." His hand holding the letter trembled sharply.

"Brandon for sure!" Bird-Eye whispered hoarsely. "'Twas Brandon kept Donny out av Tincup fer years, wa'n't it? 'Twas Brandon tuk him when he was hittin' th' booze years back 'nd made a slave av him, he did! It's Brandon who's be'n comin' here ivery night, not loike you or I'd come, but loike a masther 'd come to watch a slave . . . a slave he was a-scared to have around. . . .

"Why was a rich man loike Nick Brandon afraid av 'n owld bum like Donny?" he demanded, shaking the letter almost accusingly close in the other's face. "Who was 't with Faxson when he died? Who was 't put Faxson's murder on McManus?" He gesticulated gravely toward the bed. "Him. . . . Him, Nick Brandon's slave, who wance was a man, who wint to hell with booze, who's truckled to Brandon evir since until his pore owld heart broke!"

"By George, Bird-Eye, it does look as though it might—" The doctor did not finish what he had started to say. Instead he remarked intently: "I'd give a good deal to know just what's in that letter!"

"Ol'll be takin' it myself to Ben Elliott this night. Aw, 'nd won't Misther Brandon squirm whin th' b'y starts in crackin' th' tough nut! 'Nd it's th' justice av the' saints, no less, that Brandon brings Elliott to Able's attintion in a foight over owld Donny."

They went down the stairway together after closing the door softly behind them, Bird-Eye muttering imprecations on the head of Nicholas Brandon.

And even as Doctor Sweet emerged from the dark mouth of the narrow stairway, the front door opened and Brandon himself entered the hotel, stamping new snow from his feet. Others were there, Piette, the drummer, the mill hands; two or three more. But Brandon's attention centered only on the physician.

"Well, Doctor?" he began, and it seemed as though his lungs were too filled with air to speak comfortably. "How's our patient this evening?"

Emory Sweet looked grimly into the other's face.

"Old Don has taken the long trail," he said.

"Dead? . . . Dead!" Brandon's voice on the query pinched up a bit. And on the repetition of the word it fell hollowly, with a finality which might have indicated sorrow, dismay or amazement.

But none of these three were reflected in his face. In his dark eyes was just one expression: Relief. Relief! Relief from suspense, from worry; relief from dark and haunting fear!

"You don't say! So the old fellow's gone!" His voice was even now, colorless, assured, as was normal. "Well, it was to be expected, I suppose. Were you with him, Doctor?"

"No; he died alone."

Brandon drew in a breath as one will who has asked an important question and received a pleasing or reassuring answer.

"Talking couldn't have helped a man in his condition. He . . . He didn't visit with anyone did he?"

A queer hesitancy crept into his manner on this as though he shrank from knowing the reply and Doctor Sweet turned to Bird-Eye Blaine inquiringly. But Bird-Eye did not look at the doctor. He was staring at Brandon and as that individual's gaze, following the doctor's, encountered his, the Irishman's lips twitched into a bitter smile.

"So you're after wonderin' whut pore owld Donny said on his deathbed, are ye?" he demanded, and with that challenge stepped down from the stairway and crossed the floor slowly toward Brandon. "So ye're worryin', now, over whut he moight 've said, eh?"

"Worrying?" Brandon countered steadily. "You're either drunk or crazy, Blaine!"

"Mebby!"—with a sharp nod. "Mebbe both. But old Donny wa'n't. . . . He didn't do talkin', Misther Brandon. Rid yer moind av that worry. Sure, 'nd he didn't talk to a soul av what was on his moind whin he knowed he lay dyin'. . . . No talk! No talk fer somebody to repate 'nd git twisted up 'nd lave out things thut shuld 've be'n told. . . . He wrote ut! That's whut he done, Brandon!"—voice mounting. "He wrote ut! 'Nd he wrote ut fer one who'll make ut so hot that ye'll wish ye was sizzlin' in hell!"

With a sweeping gesture he thrust the envelope close to Brandon's face, so close that the man jerked his head backward sharply.

"He wrote ut!" Bird-Eye cried triumphantly. "'Nd may th' saints speed th' day whin Misther Elliott puts to use th' thing owld Donny had to tell!"

Grimly he poised an instant before the larger man. Then he thrust the letter into his shirt pocket, buttoned his jacket tightly across it, slapped his chest decisively, almost boastfully, and without another word strode to the door and let himself out into the street.

It was late when Bird-Eye stepped into the darkness of the tiny office where Ben Elliott slept at Hoot Owl, struck a match, lifted it high above his head and spoke:

"Hi! Misther Elliott!" Ben roused himself and squinted at the flickering match. "Get up! Rouse up! I got big news for ye!"

They lighted a lantern, and by its glow Ben read the inscription on the letter which Don Stuart had left him as Bird-Eye hastily and excitedly explained.

"There's somethin' in ut Donny'd carried secrut fer long!" he whispered hoarsely. "Ut's to do with Brandon, with fightin' fire with fire, or I'm th' worst guesser in th' woods!"

"Poor old beggar" Ben said gently. "Tough to die that way. And I never got in to see him again!"

Bird-Eye nodded. "Yes. But mebby he's done ye as great a favor as anny man evir done! The's somethin' in ut about Sam Faxson 'nd McManus. I'd bet me last shirt!"

Ben shrugged and turned the envelope over. Then he rose, yawned and slipped it into the drawer of the plain table that did service for an office desk.

"Ain't ye goin' to read ut, even?" Bird-Eye demanded in extreme amazement.

Elliott smiled. "Maybe it's only a sick man's dream, Bird-Eye. And again maybe it's an . . . an ace in the hole. I've never yet looked at my hole card until I'm beaten on the board. I'm not beaten yet, by a long walk."

Bird-Eye scratched his head.

"No, not yet. 'Nd may th' saints kape ye evir as far from a lickin' as ye are now, Ben Elliott! But . . . I'd loike to bet my noble tourin' car thut owld Donny wrote somethin' to do with th' killin' av Sam Faxson, I would!"

"Well, you can't get any takers here, Bird-Eye. Not tonight. Into the hay, now, and let me sleep."

And about the time Ben Elliott burrowed into his pillow and shed responsibility and perplexing problems, Nicholas Brandon turned in the pacing of his cold and otherwise deserted office and cocked his head alertly. It was not unusual for him to be late in his office. But those drawn shades and this quick, restless, harried march to and fro, around and about, and that perspiration which beaded his forehead, and the sudden stoppings and listenings at the slightest sound . . . Those were not usual for a man so thoroughly established in his community that he dictated every phase of its life and activity.

SLEUTH COMMITTE FLOUNDERING ABOUT; GREENER PASTURES SOUGHT BY CARLEY

By A. I. Harris

The necessity front page headlines to bolster up the fast-ebbing "investigation" last week again caused the Carley sleuth committee to perform one of its well-known Jumping Jack acts. Interrupting their inquiry into relief administration in Minnesota, they undertook a mass attack on the Highway Department. Result: Not even front page material.

The committee undertook their "investigation" of relief administration with much hullabaloo, but like the fable of the man who grabbed the tail of the grizzly bear and could not let go, the committee has been strenuously seeking a good reason to drop the SERA undertaking. Not even with the use of stool pigeons and witnesses who obliged with untruthful testimony has the committee been able to build up a case which would reflect discredit on the SERA.

Frank Mauer, political attorney who has been hired to guide this dirt-seeking expedition, thought he scored a bull's eye when he brought out information that Casper Fredrickson, head of the SERA Finance Division, on a trip charged both the SERA and the Navy Department for mileage to Washington. However, it later developed that Mr. Fredrickson's resignation had been asked by L. P. Zimmerman, Acting Administrator, a month ago. Farmer-Laborites assert that Mr. Fredrickson's alleged Pro-Republican inclinations and alleged anti-Farmer-Laborite antipathies have resulted in the virtual establishment of a Republican organization in the SERA. They assert that Mr. Fredrickson caused the discharge of certain persons in his department because of their expresesd friendliness for Governor Olson.

The committee, however, did make front page scare headlines when it discovered among the tons of literature in the transient camps a booklet entitled "For Revolution," proceeding on the theory that one red herring is worth a carload of facts. The red scare was rejuvenated. The booklet in question is one of the John Day company's series of pamphlets intended to give readers inexpensive and scholarly reviews on contemporary American political and economic philosophies. The acocmpanying booklet entitled "Against Revolution" by Gilbert Seldes was not mentioned.

Mr. Mauer also produced as evidence the amateur journalistic efforts of the transients in these camps, to bring out the fact that these amateur journalists sometimes indulged in the composition of rather spicy and suggestive literature. Although the newspapermen sitting in at the ring-side and watching the committee's strange antics chuckled to themselves and commented on the fact that the "investigation" had reached a new low, double zero, they nevertheless pounced on the story because it was front page stuff.

The sleuth committee, in the meantime, received a jolt when underhanded methods employed in this "investigation" were exposed on the floor of the Senate by Senator Charles Hausler. Senator Hausler read a letter written on Feb. 25 by former senator Harold J. Peck to Philip Williams of Nashwauk in which he stated that he could arrange with Senator Carley to make it financially attractive to Williams if he could furnish certain testimony.

"Do you want to get a chance to testify before the Senate investigation committee on any of those things?" the letter said, "If you do, I could arrange with Senator Carley to have you called, and you could make a little dough out of it."

"I move that former senator Peck be called before the committee and compelled to explain," Senator Hausler moved.

Senator Carley waxed indignant and disclaimed any knowledge of the proposition, asserting that no such methods had been indulged in by his committee, which nobody who has followed the course of this inquisition, undertaken for political purposes, will believe. Senator Hausler has some other letters along the same lines which Carley also undoubtedly will disclaim.

In the Highway investigation, N. W. Elsberg, commissioner, was called to the stand and questioned about specifications for certain highway jobs. Mauer thought there was something wrong in the specifications, but nobody, including Mauer, had any such thoughts when the highway commissioner presented the committee with some ABA engineering and road-building facts.

Mauer, however, spent the greater part of the evening in an attempt to establish that there was something shady about some purchases on land on the North Shore drive from one A. V. Johnson, realtor. Johnson, it appears divided a tract of land he sold into four parcels and conveyed title of the land to the highway department through persons who did not own it in order to finance the deal thru the bank. The bank, he explained, was limited by law in the amount of money it could loan to one person. Although this is a common real estate practice, Mauer went at great length to cast reflection on Johnson's methods by the continued use of the term, "straw men." Probably if Mauer had known at the time that Johnson was the local "spark plug" for Martin Nelson for governor in the last campaign he would not have been as keen in casting reflections on Johnson's integrity

Nevertheless, the fact remains that at a cost of $17,000 the state highway department acquired gravel worth $24,000 in the land purchase which fact the committee is not interested in.

"In 1934 the Highway Department was seeking to acquire right-of-way and gravel supplies along U. S. Highway No. 61, the famous North Shore Drive," said Commissioner Elsberg.

The owner of that part of the land asked more than we were willing to pay. About that time, A. V. Johnson approached us with the statement that he held options on the property we desired. We appraised the portions the Department needed, and offered him $17,000 for it if he could show clear title.

"He did obtain clear titles for the department and the deal was closed. The department obtained 227 acres of right-of-way and 313 acres of gravel deposits. Our engineers estimate the gravel in these deposits at 240,000 cubic yards, worth $24,000, or nearly 50 per cent more than we paid for all the property combined.

"How many of the so-called 'straw men' Johnson made use of in arranging the transfers is no concern of the Highway department.

"Another great advantage gained by the state in this deal was the ownership of two miles of Lake Superior shore line as right-of-way at the mouth of the beautiful Cascade river. The highway runs close to the lake here, and now the public will have access to the shore forever. This is the only place for miles where the shoreline is public. Nearly all of it has passed into private hands."

To the tune of a great amount of grumbling at the "high-handed tactics" of Harry Hopkins federal relief administrator, the conservative die-hards in the Senate finally voted out the $10,000,000 relief bill. The vote was 59 to 2, Senators D. D. Murphy of Blue Earth and P. W. Morrison of Norwood voting against it. Senator Rockne decided shortly before the bill was passed that he wanted no "fight with Washington," yet it was Rockne more than anyone else who was responsible for the criminal dlay of the past weeks. Another leading opponent of relief was Senator Milton Lightner, who represents the St. Paul banking interests. Lightner tried to have the Senate accept an amendment cuttin the relief bill to a $5,000,000 appropriation, but his motion was defeated by a vote of 54 to 9.

When the relief bill finally reached Governor Olson he was forced to send it back because it was unconstitutional. In the form in which it was drafted by Senator Rockne even millionaires would have been entitled to relief. Senator Rockne asserted that the mistakes had been made because Governor Olson demanded that the bill be drafted with all possible speed. As a matter of fact Rockne kept the bill in a desk drawer for over three weeks. It was thus necessary to redraft the bill.

CARD OF THANKS

Work is Being Speeded on Little Falls' Relief Projects

Construction work is progressing rapidly on Little Falls' two-story high school addition and the city hall alteration, both projects of the Minnesota SERA. They are being carried out at a cost of $180,000.

Color is added to the business district by the soft-toned red brick front for the city hall, whose lower floor will house the police station and the fire department.

The two undertakings were financed through a $30,000 bond issue and relief funds.

A recent wid-west convention of hotel men bemoaned the fact that repeal is a flop from the hotel men's viewpoint.

A Topsy Turvy Tidbit

A GOOD thing is a good thing no matter how you look at it, as the artist said to the woman who had hung his picture with the bottom where the top should have been. A good cake is a good cake even when it is standing on its head. A better one, some people think. That's why upside-down cake was invented.

Head First

For that matter there are other desserts that are made in reverse that is, with the ingredients going into the pan in the opposite order of their appearance at serving time. Many fancy molded puddings are made in this way. Spanish Cream, up-ended in the refrigerator, obligingly separates itself into custard and jelly. In the case of the up-side-down cake the fruit you use contributes its flavor from the bottom during baking. But in the end, it comes out on top.

Peach Up-Side-Down Cake

Many cook books tell you how to make pineapple up-side-down cake. But here's a tested recipe for lovers of the peach. It's quick and simple, and "luscious" is the only word to describe the result. Peaches are peaches no matter how you look at them.

Peach Up-Side-Down Cake: Melt a quarter of a cup butter in a deep cake pan or large heavy skillet, add a quarter of a cup sugar, and stir over a low fire until sugar is melted but not burned. Pat out evenly in the bottom of the pan and cover with the well-drained contents of one No. 2½ can of peach halves, round side up. Beat two egg yolks well, add one cup sugar and beat creamy. Sift a cup and a half pastry flour, two teaspoons baking powder, and half a teaspoon salt. Add them to the first mixture alternately with half a cup milk. Add a quarter of a cup melted butter, and fold in the two stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour this batter over the peaches, and bake in a moderate- 375 degree— oven for about thirty minutes or until cake is done. Turn out at once upside down. Serve warm with whipped or plain cream. This serves eight to ten persons.

LEGAL NOTICES

Citation for Hearing on Petition for Administration

State of Minnesota,
County of Pennington, ss.
In the matter of the Estate of
May B. Hazen, Decedent.
In Probate Court

The State of Minnesota, to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, Maude E. Hazen has filed in this Court her petition stating, among other things, that she is the sister and only heir at law of the above named decedent; that said decedent died intestate, a resident of the County of Cook, State of Illinois, left property in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, and was a citizen of United States; and praying that administration of her estate be granted to Maud E. Hazen.

Therefore, You are hereby cited to be and appear before said Court on the 6th day of April, 1935, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., in the Court House in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State and show cause, if any you have, why said petition should not be granted.

Dated March 13, 1935.

ANDREW BOTTELSON,
Judge of Probate Court.
(Court Seal)
H. O. BERVE,
Attorney for Petitioner,
Thief River Falls, Minn.
(Mar. 14-21-28)

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State lands purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

E. V. WILLARD,
Commissioner of Conservation.

THE GOVERNOR SPEAKS

TO many Minnesotans, Gov. Floyd B. Olson's program leading to a "complete reorganization of our social structure into a co-operative commonwealth" is a radical and dangerous experiment.

To many others, it is a rational movement—a natural development following the breakdown of conventional and conservative government—and a sane solution to the problems growing out of depression and near-desperation.

While the entire question is highly controversial, there is one point on which all fair-minded citizens must agree.

Gov. Olson is entitled at least to a hearing. As the state's chief executive he deserves the right to explain every point of his platform to the people.

With this in mind, The Daily News has tendered Gov. Olson the use of its columns for an uncensored and unrestricted exposition of the reforms he advocates. Gov. Olson has accepted the offer and consented to write a daily article in which he will reveal his hopes and objectives.

Supporters and opponents of the governor alike concede his intelligence, his forcefulness and his ability to speak and write. The Daily News has chosen a time for the appearance of the articles when minds are not distorted by the heat of a political campaign.

This paper believes the governors' column will give rise to serious consideration and calm debate on matters of grave importance to the commonwealth. It believes that legislators—who constitute the court of last resort in the matter—will benefit from the discussions by learning of the reactions of their constituents to Mr Olson's pronouncements.

It is in the hope of aiding in the cause of good government and incidentally providing an interesting feature for its readers that The Daily News introduces next Monday its new column—"The Governor Speaks."

SLEUTH COMMITTE FLOUNDERING ABOUT; GREENER PASTURES SOUGHT BY CARLEY

By A. I. Harris

The necessity front page headlines to bolster up the fast-ebbing "investigation" last week again caused the Carley sleuth committee to perform one of its well-known Jumping Jack acts. Interrupting their inquiry into relief administration in Minnesota, they undertook a mass attack on the Highway Department. Result: Not even front page material.

The committee undertook their "investigation" of relief administration with much hullabaloo, but like the fable of the man who grabbed the tail of the grizzly bear and could not let go, the committee has been strenuously seeking a good reason to drop the SERA undertaking. Not even with the use of stool pigeons and witnesses who obliged with untruthful testimony has the committee been able to build up a case which would reflect discredit on the SERA.

Frank Mauer, political attorney who has been hired to guide this dirt-seeking expedition, thought he scored a bull's eye when he brought out information that Casper Fredrickson, head of the SERA Finance Division, on a trip charged both the SERA and the Navy Department for mileage to Washington. However, it later developed that Mr. Fredrickson's resignation had been asked by L. P. Zimmerman, Acting Administrator, a month ago. Farmer-Laborites assert that Mr. Fredrickson's alleged Pro-Republican inclinations and alleged anti-Farmer-Laborite antipathies have resulted in the virtual establishment of a Republican organization in the SERA. They assert that Mr. Fredrickson caused the discharge of certain persons in his department because of their expresesd friendliness for Governor Olson.

The committee, however, did make front page scare headlines when it discovered among the tons of literature in the transient camps a booklet entitled "For Revolution," proceeding on the theory that one red herring is worth a carload of facts. The red scare was rejuvenated. The booklet in question is one of the John Day company's series of pamphlets intended to give readers inexpensive and scholarly reviews on contemporary American political and economic philosophies. The accompanying booklet entitled "Against Revolution" by Gilbert Seldes was not mentioned.

Mr. Mauer also produced as evidence the amateur journalistic efforts of the transients in these camps, to bring out the fact that these amateur journalists sometimes indulged in the composition of rather spicy and suggestive literature. Although the newspapermen sitting in at the ring-side and watching the committee's strange antics chuckled to themselves and commented on the fact that the "investigation" had reached a new low, double zero, they nevertheless pounced on the story because it was front page stuff.

The sleuth committee, in the meantime, received a jolt when underhanded methods employed in this "investigation" were exposed on the floor of the Senate by Senator Charles Hausler. Senator Hausler read a letter written on Feb. 25 by former senator Harold J. Peck to Philip Williams of Nashwauk in which he stated that he could arrange with Senator Carley to make it financially attractive to Williams if he could furnish certain testimony.

"Do you want to get a chance to testify before the Senate investigation committee on any of those things?" the letter said, "If you do, I could arrange with Senator Carley to have you called, and you could make a little dough out of it."

"I move that former senator Peck be called before the committee and compelled to explain," Senator Hausler moved.

Senator Carley waxed indignant and disclaimed any knowledge of the proposition, asserting that no such methods had been indulged in by his committee, which nobody who has followed the course of this inquisition, undertaken for political purposes, will believe. Senator Hausler has some other letters along the same lines which Carley also undoubtedly will disclaim.

In the Highway investigation, N. W. Elsberg, commissioner, was called to the stand and questioned about specifications for certain highway jobs. Mauer thought there was something wrong in the specifications, but nobody, including Mauer, had any such thoughts when the highway commissioner presented the committee with some ABA engineering and road-building facts.

Mauer, however, spent the greater part of the evening in an attempt to establish that there was something shady about some purchases on land on the North Shore drive from one A. V. Johnson, realtor. Johnson, it appears divided a tract of land he sold into four parcels and conveyed title of the land to the highway department through persons who did not own it in order to finance the deal thru the bank. The bank, he explained, was limited by law in the amount of money it could loan to one person. Although this is a common real estate practice, Mauer went at great length to cast reflection on Johnson's methods by the continued use of the term, "straw men." Probably if Mauer had known at the time that Johnson was the local "spark plug" for Martin Nelson for governor in the last campaign he would not have been as keen in casting reflections on Johnson's integrity

Nevertheless, the fact remains that at a cost of $17,000 the state highway department acquired gravel worth $24,000 in the land purchase which fact the committee is not interested in.

"In 1934 the Highway Department was seeking to acquire right-of-way and gravel supplies along U. S. Highway No. 61, the famous North Shore Drive," said Commissioner Elsberg.

The owner of that part of the land asked more than we were willing to pay. About that time, A. V. Johnson approached us with the statement that he held options on the property we desired. We appraised the portions the Department needed, and offered him $17,000 for it if he could show clear title.

"He did obtain clear titles for the department and the deal was closed. The department obtained 227 acres of right-of-way and 313 acres of gravel deposits. Our engineers estimate the gravel in these deposits at 240,000 cubic yards, worth $24,000, or nearly 50 per cent more than we paid for all the property combined.

"How many of the so-called 'straw men' Johnson made use of in arranging the transfers is no concern of the Highway department.

"Another great advantage gained by the state in this deal was the ownership of two miles of Lake Superior shore line as right-of-way at the mouth of the beautiful Cascade river. The highway runs close to the lake here, and now the public will have access to the shore forever. This is the only place for miles where the shoreline is public. Nearly all of it has passed into private hands."

To the tune of a great amount of grumbling at the "high-handed tactics" of Harry Hopkins federal relief administrator, the conservative die-hards in the Senate finally voted out the $10,000,000 relief bill. The vote was 59 to 2, Senators D. D. Murphy of Blue Earth and P. W. Morrison of fNorwood voting against it. Senator Rockne decided shortly before the bill was passed that he wanted no "fight with Washington," yet it was Rockne more than anyone else who was responsible for the criminal dlay of the past weeks. Another leading opponent of relief was Senator Milton Lightner, who represents the St. Paul banking interests. Lightner tried to have the Senate accept an amendment cuttin the relief bill to a $5,000,000 appropriation, but his motion was defeated by a vote of 54 to 9.

When the relief bill finally reached Governor Olson ,he was forced to send it back because it was unconstitutional. In the form in which it was drafted by Senator Rockne even millionaires would have been entitled to relief. Senator Rockne asserted that the mistakes had been made because Governor Olson demanded that the bill be drafted with all possible speed. As a matter of fact Rockne kept the bill in a desk drawer for over three weeks. It was thus necessary to redraft the bill.

Work is Being Speeded on Little Falls' Relief Projects

Construction work is progressing rapidly on Little Falls' two-story high school addition and the city hall alteration, both projects of the Minnesota SERA. They are being carried out at a cost of $180,000.

Color is added to the business district by the soft-toned red brick front for the city hall, whose lower floor will house the police station and the fire department.

The two undertakings were financed through a $30,000 bond issue and relief funds.

A recent wid-west convention of hotel men bemoaned the fact that repeal is a flop from the hotel men's viewpoint.

A Topsy Turvy Tidbit

A GOOD thing is a good thing no matter how you look at it, as the artist said to the woman who had hung his picture with the bottom where the top should have been. A good cake is a good cake even when it is standing on its head. A better one, some people think. That's why upside-down cake was invented.

Head First

For that matter there are other desserts that are made in reverse, that is, with the ingredients going into the pan in the opposite order of their appearance at serving time. Many fancy molded puddings are made this way. Spanish Cream, up-ended in the refrigerator, obligingly separates itself into custard and jelly. In the case of the up-side-down cake the fruit you use contributes its flavor from the bottom during baking. But in the end, it comes out on top.

Peach Up-Side-Down Cake

Many cook books tell you how to make pineapple up-side-down cake. But here's a tested recipe for lovers of the peach. It's quick and simple, and "luscious" is the only word to describe the result. Peaches are peaches no matter how you look at them.

Peach Up-Side-Down Cake: Melt a quarter of a cup butter in a deep cake pan or large heavy skillet, add a quarter of a cup sugar, and stir over a low fire until sugar is melted but not burned. Pat out evenly in the bottom of the pan and cover with the well-drained contents of one No. 2½ can of peach halves, round side up. Beat two egg yolks well, add one cup sugar and beat creamy. Sift a cup and a half pastry flour, two teaspoons baking powder, and half a teaspoon salt. Add them to the first mixture alternately with half a cup milk. Add a quarter of a cup melted butter, and fold in the two stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour this batter over the peaches, and bake in a moderate- 375 degrees— oven for about thirty minutes or until cake is done. Turn out at once upside down. Serve warm with whipped or plain cream. This serves eight to ten persons.*

LEGAL NOTICES

Citation for Hearing on Petition for Administration

State of Minnesota,
County of Pennington, ss.
In the matter of the Estate of
May B. Hazen, Decedent.
In Probate Court

The State of Minnesota, to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, Maude E. Hazen has filed in this Court her petition stating, among other things, that she is the sister and only heir at law of the above named decedent; that, said decedent died intestate, a resident of the County of Cook, State of Illinois, left property in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, and was a citizen of United States; and praying that administration of her estate be granted to Maud E. Hazen.

Therefore, You are hereby cited to be and appear before said Court on the 6th day of April, 1935, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., in the Court House in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State and show cause, if any you have, why said petition should not be granted.

Dated March 13, 1935.

ANDREW BOTTELSON,
Judge of Probate Court.
(Court Seal)
H. O. BERVE,
Attorney for Petitioner,
Thief River Falls, Minn.
(Mar. 14-21-28)

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No persons can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State lands purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

E. V. WILLARD,
Commissioner of Conservation.

THE GOVERNOR SPEAKS

TO many Minnesotans, Gov. Floyd B. Olson's program leading to a "complete reorganization of our social structure into a co-operative commonwealth" is a radical and dangerous experiment.

To many others, it is a rational movement—a natural development following the breakdown of conventional and conservative government—and a sane solution to the problems growing out of depression and near-desperation.

While the entire question is highly controversial; there is one point on which all fair-minded citizens must agree.

Gov. Olson is entitled at least to a hearing. As the state's chief executive he deserves the right to explain every point of his platform to the people.

With this in mind, The Daily News has tendered Gov. Olson the use of its columns for an uncensored and unrestricted exposition of the reforms he advocates. Gov. Olson has accepted the offer and consented to write a daily article in which he will reveal his hopes and objectives.

Supporters and opponents of the governor alike concede his intelligence, his forcefulness and his ability to speak and write. The Daily News has chosen a time for the appearance of the articles when minds are not distorted by the heat of a political campaign.

This paper believes the governors' column will give rise to serious consideration and calm debate on matters of grave importance to the commonwealth. It believes that legislators—who constitute the court of last resort in the matter—will benefit from the discussions by learning of the reactions of their constituents to Mr Olson's pronouncements.

It is in the hope of aiding in the cause of good government and incidentally providing an interesting feature for its readers that The Daily News introduces next Monday its new column—"The Governor Speaks."

LAND O' LAKES HAS BIG GAIN OVER LAST YR.

Governor F. Olson Addresses Gathering of 5,000 at Mill City

McLEOD RE-ELECTED TO VICE PRESIDENCY

Government is Urged to Keep Import Tariff on Dairy Products

Homeward bound Saturday were the more than 5,000 delegates to the Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., annual meeting in Minneapolis after adopting at their closing session Friday resolutions for legislation to improve the dairy industry.

Most important of the resolutions adopted is one calling upon the federal government to continue its present import tariffs on dairy products and substitutes from other countries. The tariff structure, established in 1930. now is threatened by contemplated trade agreements with some nations. it was pointed out.

Despite the seriousness of the drouth in certain parts of the state from which the co-operative receives much of its business, Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., made substantial gains in 1934 over 1933, members were told.

Making his annual report, Emil G. Johnson. treasurer and assistant general manager, declared declared that the company handled over $4,300,000 pounds of butter in 1934; 25,300,000 pounds of cheese. 484,630 gallons of 30, 40 and 80 per cent sweet cream, 4,400,000 dozens of eggs. 5,400,000 pounds of milk powder, 8,700,000 pounds of dressed poultry and many other products.

Lively Discussion Features WPA Meet

The Workman's Protective association held a lively discussion at their meeting on Monday evening at the Civic and Commerce association room in the city auditorium. The meeting was addressed by W. E. Dahlquist editor of the Thief River Falls Times, H Van Pelt and R. M. Aalbu, all speaking impromptu, having made no preparation to address the assembly. The meeting also went on record requesting the city council. county board and the civic and the Civic and Commerce association to lend their support to the workmen's group in pressing for enactment of the so-called Bennett Social Insurance Bill, now pending before the state legislature.

Mr. Dahlquist cited the recurrence of depressions and how they had in a way cured themselves naturally when prices hit bottom. He cited the need for new homes in this city if costs could be brought down and stated that dimension timber costs about $15 per thousand feet in freight alone to lay down in this city from the west coast. He feared that the fact that the wage scale for master painters is set at $1.25 per hour in the specifications for the new postoffice may tend to keep home building and painting down in the city because of the high high wage scale this will establish. He pointed out that federal funds handed out to various sub-divisions of government would have to be paid for out of the pockets of all the people.

Mr. Van Pelt stressed the importance of legislation looking towards social security for the people and urged the association to get behind the Bennett Bill and also to use its influence to secure additional support for the bill from the city council and the county board.

Mr. Aalbu stated that he would suggest that the organization memorialize the railroad men to haul timber from the west coast free for a while and that the unemployed go out and offer their services free for the purpose of biulding homes. Thus with the costs brought down to the level of nothing at all, we could all ride to wealth on a wave of prosperity, he said.

Oen Sponsors John Deere Day Tuesday, Mar. 26

On March 26, Tuesday the Oen Mercantile company will feature a John Deere Day at which time the various kinds of John Deere machinery will be displayed. Demonstrations will be made and enlightening talks will be given explaining the use of the machines. A motion picture: "Partners," will be presented free to all who attend on the second floor of the Oen building.

Bank Examiner Reports Brisk Land Sales Here

The Citizens State Bank of this city has sold over thirty farms in this territory since last October, J. F. Iverson, assistant special deputy examiner in charge of the liquidation, stated this week.

Many inquiries are being received daily, Mr. Iverson said, indicating that demand for farm land is especially strong in this section this year. If a satisfactory method of financing at a low rate of interest, could be devised, any number of farms could be sold this spring, Mr. Iverson believes.

Schoolmasters' Club to Hold Meeting in City

The Schoolmasters' Club of the Agassiz Educational Association will hold a dinner meeting at the Evelyn Hotel in this city Tuesday evening, March 26. ONE-ACT PLAYS TO BE GIVEN AT AUD. SAT. 30TH

Six Dramatic Groups to Give Acts in Competition for Region Title

The Recreational and Leisure Time One-Act Play contest will be held in the City Auditorium Saturday evening, March 30th. The American Legion Auxiliary is sponsoring these plays with the St. Hilaire band and the Thief River Falls Band furnishing the music for the programs.

Six one-act plays will be given at this contest, according to Mrs. Purcell, who is in charge of the activity. Judges for the contest are J. H. Hughes, superintendent of schools from Red Lake Falls; E. J. Kilan, principal of schools from Red Lake Falls; and Arnold Carlson, instructor in the local high school.

Plays will be presented by the following groups of people: Goodridge Community Club will give "Sophie from Sandyville"; Smiley Com. Club to present "Polishing Henry"; St. Hilaire Women's Club with "Squaring it With the Boys"; Middle River Women's Club presents "Corn-fed Babies"; Wyandotte Com. Club, "Teacher, Kin I Go Home?"; and the T. R. F. Epworth League will present "The Lost Church." The plays will start promptly at eight o'clock.

JR. CLASS PLAY WILL BE GIVEN FRI. MARCH 29

Nineteen People in Cast of 'Growing Pains'; 'Tragic' Comedy

WAS A BROADWAY HIT

Hailed by Critics When Presented on the New York Stage

The Junior class of Lincoln high school will present "Growing Pains" at the Municipal Auditorium Friday evening at eight o'clock. The play is centered around a family of a professor whose children are in their 'teens and are at the age when love begins to creep into their lives. It is a light and humorous play which was enjoyed tremendously when it was produced in New York.

The play starts at the home of Professor McIntyre, portrayed by Malcolm Magnusson, at whose home a birthday party is being given in honor of a son, George, the principal character, played by Jack Booren. At this party a beautiful girl, a stranger in town, Prudence, catches the fancy of all the young men. Prudence turns out to be quite a problem for the boys and George finds considerable difficulty connected with her. Prudence is portrayed by Vivian Ward. Terry, a daughter of Prof. McIntyre, is Jean Gustafson, who discovers a way to attract the attention of the young men who catches her fancy without being unconventional. The "man of the hour," Brian. is played by James Nesse.

The play becomes a tragedy when Prudence breaks George's heart in a cruel way and announces her love for another person who is not a "mere child."

Other characters in the play are: Mrs. McIntyre, Annette Simonson; Hal, Alfred Nelson; Pete, Adrian Lorentson; Omar, Henry Arros; Hattie, Lois Nelson; Miriam, Helen Granum; Sally Mona Wosleth; Elsie Audry Anderson Vivian, Celeste Crown; a traffic cop, Oscar Bickley; Jane, Lois Engen; Mrs. Patterson, Helen Rice and "Dutch," Phil Prichard.

Music between scenes and befor the play will be furnished by the high school orchestra with S P. Orwell directing. Miss Edberg is the director of the play and members of the junior class are the producers.

Aggressive Part Played by Former High School Principal in Fight on Propaganda

Many a late home-goer in 1929 and 30 passed Lincoln high school in the dark hours of the nite and wondered why anyone would be working at that hour in the lighted principal's office on the second floor. His wonderment might be partly answered by the news that Harold C. Hand, former principal is playing an aggressive part in national educational affairs.

It is a rare ednucator these days who dares think for himself and it is a treat, indeed, to read that at a convention of the National Educational Association at Atlantic City. N. J., "Harold Hand of Leland Stanford university proposed that educators go so far as to introduce in schools a study of newspapers so that children may be taught how to analyze and evaluate news." So states the March ninth issue of "The Progressive," a weekly at Madison, Wisc. It also goes on to state that a "group of 'left wing' educators will make an investigation of how propaganda is spread through the radio, motion picture and press so as to influence the public in behalf of special interests."

Mr. Hand, after acquiring his Master's degree in 1931, rolled out of Thief River Falls in a battered Model T Ford, bound for Columbia university and a Doctor's degree in education. From there he continued on to Leland Stanford at Palo Alto, California, but it is evident that he has not patterned his thinking along the crazy quilt lines of Herbert Hoover, the "wonder boy" of Palo Alto.

World Traveler to Speak at Aud. Mon.

Gerald Giving, world traveler and hunter, will speak at the municipal auditorium next Monday afternoon at three p. m. He is being sponsored by the Lincoln high school.

Mr. Giving will take his audience on a trip around the world, to every point of interest on the face of the earth and describe modes of living in various countries. Mr. Giving has spent two years in Arabia living with the Arabs as the Arabs live, and has, during his life, visited and lived in twenty-seven different countries.

Talks on travel and adventure have proven to be of great interest in the past and a large crowd is expected to attend this lecture.

County Bonds Find Ready Market in Penn. County

All but $2,000 of the $80,000 worth of county bonds which are to be sold Friday, March 22, had been subscribed to Tuesday. All subscribers for these bonds were, acocrding to the stipulation, local people. Bonds will be sold tomorrow and the proceeds will be used to take up outstanding county warrants. Mr. Fowler said.

Local Men to Address Plummer Study Club

G. G. Denning of Plummer, federal Adult Study director for Red Lake and Pennington counties, announces that he has organized adult study clubs in Oklee, Plumme rand other places during the past several weeks.

These meetings take the form of a public forum where questions of public intrest are discussed under the leadership of the instructor. Whenever possible guest speakers are invited to lecture, Mr. Denning stated. and discussion of the subject of the lecture is indulged in after the lecture and while the lecturer is present so that he may be questioned in order to shed additional light on the subject.

Two speakers are to address the club at Plummer on Tuesday evening, March 26th, at the Plummer high school, Mr. Denning announces, they being R. M. Douglass, county agent for Pennington county, who will speak on rural problems, and Leon Kehlier, of the Union State Bank of this city who will discuss problems of local credit and finance.

Mr. Denning desires to open more of these study clubs, he stated, and anyone interested in getting one started in Thief River Falls should communicate with him.

WARNING!

Readers of the Forum are advised that a dishonest field man has sold subscriptions and renewals to the Forum and has failed to report them to the office. The practice has been followed for several months of turning in only a part of the subscriptions he solicited.

We realize that it is difficult to reach those new subscribers who do not get their paper with a notice in these columns, unless they should borrow or otherwise secure a copy, and we therefore ask our readers to spread the news to those who may complain about having subscribed and fail to be put on the list. PROF. E. W. BECK SPEAKS TO PTA ON CURRICULA

Bemidji Educator Gives View On Modern High School Courses

Professor E. W. Beck of the Bemidji State Teachers' College spoke to the March meeting of the Parent-Teachers association last Monday night on the adaption of the schools to fit the child and pointed out that the schools should try to shape their curricula to most benefit the child. His subject of "Little Man, What Now?" was brought out as a question the schools should have in mind when forming its curricula. Prof. Beck attended Cambridge University, England. where he majored in education, after graduating from United Brethern College.

Miss Florence Parsons, school nurse, presented a plan for a preschool clinic to be held in May which was approved by the association and will be sponsored by the group.

It was decided by the group to buy a trophy for the school that won the skating contest held between the local schools and supervised by Harriet Helquist. The trophy will be bought by the association and presented to the Northrop school who won first honors in the event. A Girl's Hobby club will also be sponsored by the group with Miss Helquist and Mrs. Korstad in charge of the group.

The program was completed with singing by a male quartet composed of R. J. Lund, S. P. Orwold, J. Larson, and Dr. A. E. Jacobson and another male quartet of Clarence Sande, Douglass Booren, Clarence Vevea and Mr. Brahs. A violin duet by J. Larson and G. Overland, acocmpanied by Mrs. Aug. Holmberg was greatly enjoyed by the members of the group. Lunch was served by the men with O. C. Paulson in charge of arrangements following the program. The date for the next meeting was set for May 6th.

C. M. Bouen Will Sell Meadows Washing Machines

Spring Is Ushered In With Heavy Snowfall

A heavy snowfall was winter's last gesture of friendship to residents of this vicinity as he embarked on his last few hours of existence. With only about twelve hours to go winter was bound to leave an impression on the northwest which he did with approximately six inches of heavy damp snow. All surrounding territory reported heavy snow or rain Wednesday afternoon and evening and roads once again became unsafe for fast travel.

Leonard Ness spent Sunday at his home in Clearbrook.

RED LAKE RIVER GROUPS DISCUSS WATER PROJECT

Hear Frisbie's Report on the Cleaning of the River Channel

REQUEST PLANNING B'D AID IN NEW PLAN

May Request $5,500,000 for Diversion Project From Federal Body

A meeting of representatives from Grand Forks, East Grand Forks, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, and this city was held at the council chambers on Tuesday evening to discuss the water conservation problems confronting this territory.

Mr. Frisbie, third district ERA engineer, rendered a report of the work done on the Red Lake River last fall to assure adequate water supply for domestic consumption for the cities along the river for the winter and discussed plans now being made for permanent solution of the water problem.

Coming in for major discussion was a plan for diverting water from the Big Fork and Little Fork rivers which flow into Rainy River north of the Red Lakes. It was divulged that there are federal surveys being made there at this time and completion of these surveys should establish whether or not this diversion is practical. The divide between the Rainy river water shed and the Red Lake water shed it somewhat under 40 feet at its highest point, Mr. Frisbie stated, and the Red Lakes are sufficiently lower to insure a good flow if the diversion canals are made. This project would cost in the neighborhood of five and one-half million dollars, Mr. Frisbie estimates. The group decided to gather all available data on the proposition and submit it to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress which convenes at Washington in the early part of May. Mr. Frisbie is working on plans which will make the project practically self-liquidating thru the sale of electrical power and water for domestic consumption. It is believed that this diversion would restore the Red Lakes to their original levels and would supply enough water in the river to as-

Mark Olson Heads The Card Against Radniecki Tuesday

A ten bout card is being prepared for the next wrestling show to be put on by the Thief River Falls Athletic club next Tuesday evening in the old Elk's Hall above the postoffice building. The main event of the evening will be between Mark Olson of Thief River Falls and Stanley Radniecki of Oklee, at 145 and 165 pounds respectively. This bout was carded because of the insistence of Olson. the lighter of the two.

Semi-windups will be G. Radniecki vs. R .Christie of Oklee and Angus at 150 pounds; T. Bergren vs. S. Ide of T. R. Falls and Newfolden at 150 pounds; H. Egness vs. H. Stroble of T. R. F. and Angus at 140 pounds; G. Saunders vs. D. Johnson of Frazee and T. R. F. at 160 pounds; N. Christopherson vs. M. Wedul of T. R. F. and Hazel; and in addition four other bouts are in the making.

It is hoped to find a match for Red Melby of Viking before the bouts come off and it is likely that they will succeed, according to Bill LaFave, manager of the local club.

Barrows' Golden Eye, Rare Duck, Found To be in DuChamp's Possession 10 Years

A rare specimen of duck was found to be in possession of W. DuChamp, who had no idea that it was of great historical value to the Museum of Natural History at the University of Minensota until Conrad Hovie, a local taxidermist, became interested in the mounted bird which was kept in the DuChamp place of business. After hunting through his books on bird lore, Mr. Hovie finally found the description of the bird and discovered that it was a Barows' Golden Eye.

After finding the species of the duck Mr. Hovie wrote to the Museum of Natural History and they replied, stating that the State of Minnesota had no record or mounted specimen of the bird and that it was of great historic value to the state. Arrangements were made to send the duck to the museum where it could be taken care of and catalogued properly.

covered that it was a Barrow's is very similar to the American Golden Eye, the only distinction being a white crescent between the eye and the bill. Other distinguishing features of the bird are its purplish-black head, white breast, black tail and black and white wings. It is about the same size as a Blue Bill duck.

This particular bird was shot by Leonard DuChamp in 1925 while he was on a hunting trip with Julian Provencher near Neptune, at which time two of these birds were shot but only one of them being mounted. The men had as their guide on this trip an Indian living in that vicinity, Ben Red Eagle.

This particular duck is valuable to the state because its natural habitat is along the Rocky Mountains and no bird of this kind was thought to ever visit Minnesota, according to Dr. Kilgore of the University Museum. The men who shot this bird were unaware of its value and it has been kept at the bowling alleys since Sept. 17, 1925. The bird will be sent to the University where it will be mounted in the fine collection of birds, Mr. Hovie states.

Council Postpones Meet To Discuss Tax Problem

The meeting of the city council which was called for last Thursday evening to discuss the case of the St. Luke's Hospital Association on tax exemption, was postponed indefinitely because there was not a quorum present. Action by the city council would have no effect on the case, according to the city attorney, T. Quale.

The St. Luke's Hospital Association, represented by H. E. Nelson and W. W. Prichard Jr., asked the city council to approve their statements which they will present to the State Tax Commission. They are seeking to become exempt from the real estate tax list as well as the personal property tax list.

A. G. ANDERSON ELECTED PRES. CITY F-L CLUB

Club Goes on Record Urging The Passage of Social Insurance Bill

A fine turnout of members and visitors attended the meeting of the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor association club at its meeting in the court rooms Friday evening. Election of officers for the ensuing year took place and H. VanPelt, a delegate to the Farmers and Workers congress held at St. Paul last week gave a talk on the work of the congress and urged the club to give its whole hearted support to H. F. 120, the so-called Bennett Social Insurance Bill. This bill is the state adaptation of the social insurance bill introduced in Congress by Congressman Ernest Lundeen. He also asked the club to cooperate in securing endorsement of the bill by other organizations in the community. A motion declaring the support of the bill by the club and requesting the representatives and senator from the 65th district support and vote for the bill, was unanimously passed.

A motion was made and passed providing that in balloting on officers for the coming year, where there were more than two candidates and any one failed to secure a majority of the votes cast, a second ballot should be taken to decide between the two who were highest on the first ballot. Close results featured the election and a third ballot was required to decide the vice-presidency when Herman A. Kjos and W. W. Long were tied on the second ballot. Results of the election are as follows:

President, A. G. Anderson, (succeeding Paul A. Harris); vice-president, W. W. Long, (succeeding Roy Ericson, deceased); secretary, Herman A. Kjos, (succeeding H. Halland); treasurer, Hec-

Local Auto Dealers Prepare To Enter New Models In Spring Event

HIGH CLASS MUSIC IS ENGAGED

'Spring Revue' With Cast of 28 to be Presented two Evenings

The eighth annual automobile show and spring exposition sponsored by the Elmer J. Eklund post of the American Legion will be held April 3, 4, 5 and 6, according to an announcement by O. C. Paulson, general chairman. Mr. Paulson also announced the various committees in charge of details.

On the committees appointed are: Finance, P. G. Pederson, chairman; C. A. Bloomquist, Geo. Werstlein, Dr. A. E. Jacobson, and B. I. Froiland. Tickets: Ward Long, chairman; Ray Kiland, Earl Effinger, S. C. Olson, F. McCrum and Haakon Grendahl. Dance: Harold Eide, chairman; L. Fossum, A. R. Holzknecht, Dr. L. V. Johnson and J. G. Messenger. Advertising: G. Reiersgaard chairman; W. E. Dahlquist and August Holmberg. Stage and Property men: Dr. C. M. Hauge, chairman; C. Hovie and R. Lund. The auto display committee consists of Alex Cloutier, chairman; T. Lonson, F. E. Tunberg, H. O. Melby, Carl Melby, and Roy Brown. Industrial exhibits: H. M. Olson, chairman; A. B. McLaughlin. Palmer Tommerdahl, L. Hanson, A. M. Senstad, and Otto Mellander. Vaudeville committee personnel: S. O. Orwell, chairman; Dr. C. W. Froats, G. Bakken and R. J. Lund.

All local dealers will display models at the show and it is estimated that there will be ten or twelve 1935 cars on the floor in addition to the industrial display which will also be on the main floor of the auditorium this year instead of the basement as it has been in the past. according to the chairman, O. C. Paulson.

Abbie Andrews and his orchestra has been engaged for the dances which will be held the last two nights of the show following the vaudeville acts, Mr Eide announced.

The "Sprintime Revue" will be presented Friday and Saturday, April 5th and 6th as the vaudeville numbers, with a cast of 28 people. This show also includes three specialty acts in which the Erhart brothers, Lester. Raymond, and Johnson and Dean are featured. These acts are from the Orpheum circuit and are hailed as being some of the best of their kind on the road.

Following the procedure of the past few years, a free automobile will be given away the last night of the show following the vaudeville acts. A 1935 standard Chevrolet is the car to be awarded this year to the holder of the ticket bearing the lucky number. Dances will be held the last two nights only, according to Harold Eide, chairman of the dance committee.

$600 DAMAGE BY FIRE TO TWETE GARAGE SAT. EVE

Local Fire Fighters are Called Out Fou Times Over the Past Week-End

March winds caused quite a few calls for the local fire department over the week-end, according to reports of firemen on duty. Friday evening a call was put in from 307 Duluth Ave. So., where Mrs. Catherine Schalz reported a chimney fire was in progress at her home; a very short time was required to get the fire out.

Saturday night at about eight thirty, Dr. L. R. Twete reported a fire in one of the rooms of his garage which he uses for a shop. After a little trouble in locating the source of fire the situation was soon dealth with in such a manner as to gain control. Estimated damage to equipment and to the building was approximately $600.00, according to Dr. Twete.

Monday morning came with another strong wind and a chimney fire at the home of Mrs. Harry Anderson, 417 State Street, required two trips by the firemen to completely extinguish the fire.

Dr. T. G. Hoiland. chiropractor, who has practiced in Minneapolis for the Past ten years, will open an office in this city in the Dudley Building. Dr. Hoiland states that he will be ready for business on or about April first.

Third Party Move Gains

Recent conferences with progressives in Washington and New York and in cities in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois reveal strong support of a third party in 1936, Howard Y. Williams, Farmer-Labor organizer, said on return Friday from a tour of the east.

"I conferred with progressives senators, congressmen, trade union and farm leaders, heads of the Utopian society, the Townsend group, and the socialist party," Williams said. "All showed a splendid determination and the necessity of getting together for a united new party.

"Most of these people are convinced that while Huey Long's program appeals to the masses it is not adequate and would be imposible of fulfillment under the profit system. They also believed that no tinkering of the present economic system can meet the crisis and that the only hope of letting the people share the wealth lies in sharing the power through social ownership of the monopolized industries, banks and public utilities, and the building of a united political organization that can do the job."

Williams spoke of "close harmony" between industrial and military forces in Washington. He said he believed "we are in a state of war without having named the enemy."

Collapse of Austria's Social Legislation

Vienna, (TIS).—The reform of Austrian social legislation, the main object of victorious reaction, is slowly taking form. Despite the unwillingness of the Schuschnigg government to publicly discuss these matters, certain facts have already become known, which will further aggravate the almost unbearable economic conditions of the Austrian working masses. Workers contributions to the social insurance system and its various branches are to be raised 50 per cent, while benefits will be considerably reduced.

After one year of Fascist rule, the financial situation of the Austrian employees' insurance is desperate. The budgetary deficit in 1934 amounts to 33 million schillings (about $6,500,000), and the reserves have been reduced from 60 million schillings in 1933 to 27 million in 1934. It is reliably reported that the federal Insurance Institute, which administers the present insurance system, will be unable to pay benefits in the second half of 1935.

The "United Trade Union," organized by the Fascists to woo the workers away from their former independent trade unions, has also met with a similar disaster. At a meeting of the Fascist Carpenters' union, the president declared that the union's budgetary deficit amounts to 300,000 schillings ($60,000) "since almost nobody is willing to pay dues."

FISH LIFE THRETENED IN SHALLOW LAKES

Rescue of game fishes in shallow lakes where low water would smother out all fish life has been carried on by the division of Game and Fish during the month of February. A total of 47,389 game fishes were transferred from shallow lakes and bays to deeper lakes tributary with work centered in two lakes where conditions were most critical.

Included in the species were sunfish, crappies, pickerel, bullheads and a scattering of other varieties.

This work is accomplished with "very little expense" by professional fishermen engaged by the division to carry out rough fish removal.

Game fishes were removed from Lake Sabre in Le Sueur county to Lake Volney and Lake Tetonka in the same county. In Spring Lake in Dakota county, game fishes were rescued from shallow bays and transferred into deeper water.

Low water in many good fishing lakes in the state, particularly in the southern part of Minnesota, has made it necessary for the state division of game and fish to take drastic action to save and utilize fish in the affected lakes.

Promiscuous fishing has been permitted in some lakes where shallow water threatened to smother out fish life. In other instances, oxygenators have been used with satisfactory results.

"Unless we have an early breakup this spring, it may become necessary to open up other lakes in the state to promiscuous fishing operations," Erling Swanson, director said.

HARRY S. PETERSON TO THE RESCUE

St. Paul, (Mc)—It will take a tough judge to turn down Atty. Gen. H. S. Peterson's argument for the Frazier-Lemke bill, now up before the U. S. Supreme Court, because Harry is just a Minnesota boy that not only knows his stuff about farmers, but who can shoot legalities as fast as anybody in Washington. He has already argued the case in the Cincinnati District Court—and can he argue when 60,000 Minnesota farmers are affected! Not to mention the farmers outside the state. The Supreme Court, is worried about the sanctity of "contract." Harry Peterson is arguing about human

MARSHALL POWER PLANT PAYS OFF CITY'S DEBT

Marshall.—Contract papers involved in a city debt of $63,435 were burned with due ceremony at a celebration in the municipal power plant signalizing the payment of this obligation three months before it was due. Mayor C. O. Middleton declared that if nothing unforeseen occurs, the plant will pay off the city's entire bonded debt of $152,000 in the next four years. The city is justly proud, he added, to own a $100,000 business "and an institution that is worth $1,000,000 in cold cash to its citizens."

THIRD DRIVE ON THE COMMONWEALTH SCHOOL IS MADE IN ARKANSAS

Mena, Ark.—The third open move of the Arkansas state legislature to crush Commonwealth College, the labor school near Mena, Arkansas, came yesterday when a bill was introduced at a night session of the lower house, declaring the act of "advocating anarchy, communism, or the overthrow of any established government by force or violence," to be a nuisance which could be abated by permanent injunction in chancery court. Arthur Garfield Hays and Lee Gallagher, internationally famous labor lawyers, have offered to defend Commonwealth.

Marcus Miller, chairman of the legislative committee to investigate Commonwealth, and Representative Miner Milwee, authors of the bill, said it was "aimed at Commonwealth or any other society, sect or institution which advocated anarchy, communism, or the overthrow of any established government by force or violence."

Suit for action to abate the alleged nuisance can be brought by five citizens, the attorney general or any prosecuting attorney. If the existence of a "nuisance" is established the court order "shall direct the removal from the building or place wherein such nuisance exists or is maintained, of all means, applications, fixtures, . . .etc., used for the purpose of conducting, maintaining or occupation constituting such nuisance and shall direct the sale thereof, or such portion thereof as may be lawfully sold, . . and the destruction of such portions . as cannot be lawfully sold within this state."

Commonwealth College is a non-factional labor school which teaches all working-class points of view, and it is certain that the "nuisance" bill will be so interpreted as to make unlawful the possession of many of the books which the Commonwealth library contains, and the possession of such books ample grounds for getting an injunction against the operation of the college.

This series of determined attacks against Commonwealth follows directly upon the participation of students and teachers of Commonwealth in the struggles of the sharecroppers in eastern Arkansas to force the landlords to obey the ruling of AAA. The planters retaliated first by instituting a legislative committee to investigate "un-American teachings" of the College, at the same time rushing through the house the most vicious anti-labor sedition bill ever presented to a legislative body in America. The investigating committee report, now past due, has not been made public, and the sedition bill, because of national and state protest, has not come out of the Senate Judiciary Committee. This "nuisance" bill, however, is aimed directly at the college, and is so worded, that after the legislature would close Commonwealth, the bill would have no further use, and henceforth be shelved.

SIXTH MATTRESS FACTORY APPROVED

Immediate benefits will accrue ot the destitute on the iron range from a mattress factory which is now being established in Ironton, according to a decision by the Minnesota SERA. Quarters will be provided by the village council, and equipment and materials by the SERA.

It is planned to operate the factory five days a week, with a personnel of about 30 relief clients from the range towns.

The State Emergency Relief administration has for some time been operating mattress factoies at Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, and in addition to the Ironton plant, factories are being installed in St. Cloud and Willmar.

Matreials for the mattresses is furnished the SERA without cost by the Federal Surplus Relief corporation.

DEATHS FROM DRINK IS ON AN INCREASE

By W. G. Calderwood

An advance report from the Census Bureau shows an increase in the number of alcoholic deaths per 100,000 of population during 1933 for the first time for the last four years, during which there had been a decline of 1.5 deaths for each 100,000 unit of population. The record for 1933, the first year of legalized beer, turned the tide upward, tho by only 0.1 per unit.

There was an increase in 30 states (counting D. C. as a state) with 13 showing a decrease, 5 no change, and one state not reporting. The states showing the largest percentages of gain were New Hampshire, 122 percent; Washington, 88 per cent; South Dakota, 84 per cent; District of Columbia, 70 per cent and Montana 64 per cent. The states which report the largest numerical increases are District of Columbia, 2.1; Delaware, 2; New Hampshire, 1.9; Montana, 1.7, and Washington, 1.6.

Of the 13 states in which alcoholic deaths decreased, the following lead in percentage; Arkansas, 44 per cent; Kansas 30 per cent; Oklahoma 28 per cent; Missouri, 25 per cent; and Connecticut, 21 per cent. The states with the lowest number of deaths per 100,000 were Arkansas and Kansas, .9 each; Louisiana, 1.0; Michigan, Oklahoma and Texas, 1.3 each, and Nebraska, 1.4.

The most significant revelation in the report is the fact that the alcoholic death rate, which had been steadily declining for the four preceding years began an upward swing the first year under beer. Many drys had joined the wets in the belief that the legalization of mild beer would decrease both drunkenness and alcoholic deaths, but the record shows an increase of both.

These facts are as stubborn as they are startling and significant.

EARLY SEEDING NEEDED FOR HIGH GRAIN YIELDS

When small grain seeding time arrives, "he who hesitates is lost" judging from crop trials carried on at the Minesota Agricultural Experiment Station, University Farm, St. Paul. Getting the seeding done at the earliest practicable date in spring is much more important than preparing the seed bed extra well, says A. C. Arny.

Over a period of years, the experiment station crops men made tests with successive seedings of wheat, oats, barley and flax, beginning with the earliest practicable date in the spring and making other plantings after 10 days, 20 days and 30 days. Results showed that both yield and quality are better from the earlier seedings.

A delay of 10 days in the sowing date decreased average yields of wheat 26.1 per cent, oats 11.4 per cent, and barley 17.8 per cent. When the seeding was delayed 20 days the decreases in yield were 50.9 per cent for wheat, 28.2 per cent for oats, and 24.5 per cent for barley. When the seedings were made 30 days late, the reductions were 76.3 per cent for wheat, 55.8 per cent for oats, and 50.8 per cent for barley. Delayed planting cut flax yields slightly more than the oats yields. Where all of these grains are planted on the same farm, the figures indicate that the order of planting should be wheat first, followed in order by oats and flax, with barley last, says Mr. Arny.

Six years of work on different methods of preparing seedbeds for grains and for grasses and legumes sown with them, showed that yields of grain on unplowed corn land were about as high as on fall plowed corn land harrowed before sowing in spring. Disking fall or spring plowed land before seeding did not bring higher yields.

Nazi Shouts Hide Discrimination Against U. S. A

Berlin, (TIS)—Violent Nazi denunciations of the anti-Hitler economic boycott, effective as it is, are in reality clever attempts to disguise the discriminations which the new Germany practices against its creditors, notably the United States.

According to business reports, American exports to Germany have shrunk from $15,700,000 in January, 1934, to $2,600,000 in December of the same year or approximately to one-sixth of its previous value. At the same time German exports to the Unitet States decreased from -6.500,000 to $5,500,000. The German authorities under the leadership of the economic dictator, Dr. Schacht, openly admit that they are practising a policy of open discrimination against America for the simple reason that German-American trade shows an active balance for Germany. Other countries showing a passive trend for Germany have been singled out for preferred treatment, which is deeply resented by American business interests in Germany.

SOUTH AMERICA TO READ MINNESOTAN'S ADDRESS

South America farmers will soon be reading in Spanish and Portugese an address on "Long-Lived Farm Structures," delivered at Chicago last December by Prof. William Boss, chief of agricultural engineering, University farm, before members of the Farm Structures Division of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

Professor Boss' address was published in the February number of Agricultural Engineering, the journal of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. Immediately a request to reproduce the article was received from "La Hacienda," a South American farm paper published in the Portugese and Spanish languages.

In this article Professor Boss contends that an extensive program for the construction of permanent farm buildings, capable of lasting 100 years or more, is the most promising road to permanent recovery. There is no other possiyle movement that would be more helpful to all classes of people, give more universal employment, and return more enjoyment per dollar or per hour of work, than a movement that would put a good home of modern buildings on every farm, declares Professor Boss.

Mrs. Knight—Is your husband getting better these sunshiney days?

Mrs. White—He ought to be. The only thing the matter with him is moonshiney nights.

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1897."

There is nothing quite so pathetic in all the world than the disillusionment of those who have lost their faith in the orderly process of government.

IF IT'S A NON-PROFIT INSTITUTION IT SHOULD BE TAX-EXEMPT

It seems to us, judging from what information we have on the matter, that the request of the St. Luke's Hospital Association and the Bratrud Clinic for exemption from taxes is decidedly unjustified.

When the association was formed, a great many Thief River Falls citizens donated towards what they believed was a civic enterprise. It was understood that the hospital would maintain a charity ward and on this understanding the hospital was first rated as a taxfree institution.

Up to the present there has been no justification for the claims made by the hospital and the clinic to maintaining a charity ward. If anyone has been admitted without a guaranty of payment being made in advance of entry, we have not heard about it. On the other hand we know of numerous instances when prospective patients have had their pocketbooks examined, figuratively speaking, before they were admitted, and if it was found too light the city or the county has been called upon to guarantee the amount.

The Forum believes in socialized medicine and hospitalization. We believe that society owes to the children of the poor the same opportunity for good health and necessary medical attention that is accorded to the children of the well-to-do. We believe the life of the laborer's wife and unborn babe is fully as precious as the life of the wife of the industrial executive or financial wizard, but under present conditions of society the former are sacrificed because they lack the necessary funds to obtain proper hospitalization, in all too many instances.

If and when, the St. Luke's hospital and the Bratrud Clinic will show us that they maintain a charity ward where unfortunates lacking the necessary funds to pay for the services extended them, are taken care of without a claim immediately entered against the city or county, we shall be among the first to raise our voice in favor of exempting them from taxes. But until that time we believe that they should pay taxes just as well as all other profit-taking institutions must and just as the other medical men of the city pay taxes both real and personal.

It might be well to point out that the other hospital in the city has paid taxes for twenty years or more witohut quibbling or attempting to slide from under with claims that can not be verified with facts.

ROOSEVELT MAKES A GESTURE

President Roosevelt made a noble gesture to the rapidly thinning ranks of his progressive supporters last week when he condemned holding companies and decreed that they must go. However, we are afraid that the gesture has been made too late and will be in vain. By this time, most of the people know that he does not intend to do anything that will interfere with the profits of the industrial lords. He has surrounded himself with the representatives of organized capital, and inasmuch as that is the group which controls and profits from holding companies, it will be rather too much to ask us to believe that he intends seriously to oppose them.

His record for the past six months has convinced the progressive and liberal forces that he has definitely swung to the right. The NRA fiasco, the purging of the AAA of liberals; his request for the largest peacetime army and navy appropriation in history; his insistence on starvation wages on the new public works program ,thus driving the standard of living for the masess of the people to new low levels, are all too poignant proof of his servility to the forces of organized greed.

The liberals know full well by this time that whatever regulatory measures may be passed to control the holding companies, will be so framed and administered that the grip his banking friends hold on the American people will not be in the least endangered.

We are surprised that he is naive enough to believe that his mock tirade can in any way halt the swing of the liberals away from his banner.

WHAT WOULD OLD "FIGHTING BOB" HAVE DONE?

It is a sore disappointment to us to learn that Senator LaFollette was one of the six Senators that swung away from the McCarran amendment to the public works bill which provided for prevailing wages to be paid on the public works projects to be inaugurated. Somehow our love and respect for the elder LaFollette has led us to believe that his offspring would be made of the same true steel. Can anyone imagine "Old Fighting Bob" compromising with the president on such a clearcut issue as this? It is inconceivable.

FRIEND MARIUS PAYS FOR HIS SEAT

Now that the reactionaries in the Minnesota legislature have finally eaten their crow and passed the $10,000,000 million dollar relief bill, it is interesting to receive a clipping from a Twin City daily which we entirely overlooked at the time the bill was first pending in the house.

According to the clipping:

"Anti-administration forces in the legislature, dissatisfied with Governor Olson's present relief setup, Saturday applied the brakes to his $10,000,000 relief program and laid the groundwork for an inquiry.

"The move came as an abrupt about face among house members who Friday received the emergency relief committee bill calling for $11,000,000 appropriations for 1935-1936 relief. The independent majority expected to rush it thru to give the senate early opportunity to act.

"Saturday, however, Representative Marius Waldal of Plummer demanded that claims of exbitant distribution costs and political use of relief be investigated before any sum is appropriated . . ."

We are wondering if the onerous job of making the first move for the holding up of relief funds required to feed people on relief in Minnesota was the price that Marius Waldal paid to keep his seat in the house. It is significant that shortly after this incident the reacticnary majority decided to reach a conclusion on the Day-Waldal election contest and set aside the verdict of the voters and the decision of the district court to seat the Plummer Solon.

TACTICS THAT ARE HARD TO FATHOM

During the past campaign the Communists opposed the Farmer-Labor forces with all the strength they could command. The program of immediate demands embodied in the Farmer-Labor platform were sneered at and castigated as puny and ineffective. Now the Communists are organizing marches on the capitol and threatening picketing and other dire things if a hostile legislature fails to act promptly and favorably on the Bennet Social Insurance Bill embodying one of the planks of the Farmer-Labor platform and introduced by Representative W. F. Bennett, a Farmer-Labor member of the house.

It is our opinion that a cross made in the right place on your ballot is worth a dozen marches on the capitol and now that we have made our bed by electing reactionaries to the legislature we had better lay in it until the next election no matter how full of fleas it may be. The time and place to protest is on election day; in the voting booth, and say it with exes.

TACOMA MAKES HUGE SAVING
(Union Advocate)

With the lowest electric rates in the United States, the municipal power system of Tacoma has saved the consumers of that city $15,125,405 during the last five years, as compared with the cost of similar service on the basis of the average charged by the private power companies for 1932, given in the Edison Institute rate schedules.

DESTROY MONOPOLY
(William S. Borah)

Just as rapidly as the producer or laborer secures some possible increase, some gains, these increases or these gains are drained away from the people into the coffer of monopolies. So long as this continues to be true, millions are ging to struggle for a mere existence in a land of wealth and plenty sufficient for all. The fight for recovery is in a true sense a fight against monopoly. It is idle to say that you cannot destroy monopoly.. It is cowardly to say it. Monopoly has no more right to exist than any other form of depreciation.

BLUE EAGLE RESULTS
(St. Paul Union Advocate)

A sixth of the entire population of the United States is on relief, and one-fifth of all formerly employed workers are now out of work. A third of all the aged people in the U. S. A. are dependents. Two-fifths of our population now on relief are minor children. Nearly 50 per cent of our citizens lack proper medical care, and millions of Americans live in homes little better than hovels. In 1929, referred to as one of the most prosperous years of American history, the average annual income was only $1,475. That same year the annual earnings of 18,000,000 American workers were less than $1,000 apiece, and the annual earnings of 28,000,000 were less than $1,500 each.

The above facts suggest communistic propaganda. But it just so happens that these facts were taken from an address given at Chicago last week by Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

And he was paid $300 for making the address. That, too, is important in view of the fact that he defended the President's opposition to the prevailing rate of pay amendment to the $4,800,000,000 public relief appropriation. The President was insisting that $50 a month was ample for any man on a federal project.

FOOL CENSORSHIP
(St. Paul Daily News)

Daniel W. McCormack, United States commissioner of immigration, is now making this nation more than slightly rediculous by his order for the arrest of Evelyn John St. Loe Strachey, self-styled British communist.

And even more important, he is doing Mr. Strachey a splendid turn by bringing him to the attention of millions of Americans to whom heretofore he has been not even a name.

It is another exhibition of the kind of official stupidity which defeats its own purpose—and never learns anything from its own past mistakes.

More important it shows the hollowness of our pretension that there is freedom of speech and thought. Mr. Strachey is not an agitator in the commonly accepted sense of that word. He is an intellectual radical expounding a philosophy of government. Even if he were a radical who sought to convert others to a line of action, his arrest would not be justified and it surely would be ineffectual. The road to social advance is strewn with the bones of radicals.

How in the world can we ever learn if we refuse to listen to those who bring in new ideas or give voice to sentiments which may be distasteful?

The days of the ostrich with his head in the sands should be over—and the days of Daniel W. McCormack, United States commissioner of immigration.

ANOTHER BETTING BILL
(St. Paul Daily News)

Despite the overwhelming evidence of evil effects, the effort persists to legalize horse race betting in Minnesota.

Tuesday there appeared in the senate a companion bill to that introduced in the house by Rep. Horwitz. Its father is Sen. Harry Wing, Carlton, who would permit pari-mutuel betting on horse races. The state would charge $500 a day and get 10 per cent of the profits and 2 per cent of the betting stakes.

From the immediate standpoint of the state government such a measure would produce revenue. From the standpoint of the general public welfare it would be a calamity.

Those states which have recently legalized horse race betting are now having headaches. There is less legitimate business as folks get the gambling fever. Bills go unpaid and the first apparent prosperity which results from erecting racing parks and bringing thousands of folks out to them soon fades into bitter loss to the community.

There is not one single thing to commend such a measure except perhaps that it enriches the state treasury for the time being with some easy money.

If there is a will to learn from the sad experiences of other states, the Minnesota legislature will toss all these measures in the wastebasket.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

BEER, — MILK'S DANGEROUS COMPETITOR

Beer and other alcoholic liquors, protected by the State and backed by wealthy profiteers with heavily financed propaganda through the press, radio and movies, are a most dangerous menace to the prosperity of the farmer and the whole non-alcoholic beverage industry.

Official trade figures, furnished by The Western Brewer, show that during 1934 the people of Chicago consumed approximately 1,800,000 barrels of beer, the retail cost of which was about $75,000,000. United States Government surveys carried on in 1934 in 59 cities reveal a 27 per cent underconsumption of milk when compared with minimum health requirements. Based upon these govenent findings, Chicago's milk bill for the past year was $60,000,000 less than it should have been to have reached adequate health standards.

The brewers through their leading trade magazines during the last weeks of 1934 announced a concerted sales invasion of the field of milk, fruit juices, softdrinks, and other non-alcoholic beverages, to obtain, as they say, a 'larger share" of America's "beverage dollar" than ever before.

Under prohibtion, including seven years operation of the 18th Amendment, milk consumption in the United States showed an increase of 212 pounds per year per capita.* (1917-1926).

Richberg Encounters the Big, Bad Wolf

Donald Richberg, new director of the NRA, explains that the new plan will be to enforce the antitrust laws and that the plan all along has been to preserve the American tradition of free competition among businesses, and to discourage combines of all kinds.

There are many, many complaints that the whole purpose of the NRA to date has been exactly opposite to this,—that it has fostered big business and tended to freeze out small business. So, they say, are we to stand by and let the NRA continue its nefarious practices?

Thus the issue stands. One man says the NRA will do one thing: numerous others claim it has done exactly the opposite. Personally I wash my hands of the matter. I didn't vote for Roosevelt last election; I didn't favor the New Deal; and I see nothing but failure ahead for all attempts to thus perpetuate the Profit System.

"The System Must Go"

Stephen Pearl Andrews, American author and anti-slavery leader (1812-1886), writing eighty-five years ago, solved the present predicament neatly: He said: "No reform under the present system but a decided step out of and above that system is the fit and enduring remedy for the wrongs and oppressions of labor by capital." That was in 1850, the year that Karl Marx' first edition of DAS KAPITAL appeared in Europe. The problem has been recognized for years and years; it takes a long time for a lessen to sink in. For even now we find those who want to patch up this system and perpetuate the "guiding motive"—the desire for Profits. The above sentiment by our own Stephen Pearl Andrews may gratify those who patriotically refuse to be dominated by an European mind.

"Revolutions Grow"

Then there is that other American, the silver-tongued orator Wendell Phillips (1811-1884), who said: "We are apt to feel ourselves overshadowed in the presence of colossal institutions. We are apt . . . to ask what a few hundred or a few thousand persons can do against the weight of government, the mountainous odds of majorities, the influence of the press, the power of the pulpit, the organization of parties, the omnipotence of wealth. No matter where you meet a dozen earnest men pledged to a new idea—wherever you have met them, you have met the beginning of a revolution. Revolutions are not made; they come. A revolution is as natural a growth as an oak. It comes out of the past. Its foundations are laid far back."

I think that this selection by Wendell Phillips would not be found in the average school textbook as a model for eloquence.—not because it lacks eloquence, which it does not, but because it would not be considered harmless by those who decide what should go into school textboks. That is, Wendell Phillips is generally hailed as an orator, but not as a thinker.

Again I may say that those who object to having their thinking done for them by foreigners, may save their Americanism by remembering the above words of Wendell Phillips, who is generally considered a true-blue.

The Two-Edged Sword

A constant legislator asks in effect what hunger and unemployment marches have accomplished, besides stirring up a fuss and making a lot of noise. Now, a marcher might retaliate by asking what legislatures and congresses have done. But that brings us right back to where we started, and we hate riddles.

THE READER'S ROSTRUM

March 18, 1935

Editor the Forum:

On the editorial page of Thief River Falls Times for March 7th appeared a write-up under the heading, "Time to Take Our Bearings."

It said that relief costs in Pennington county for 1933 almost reached the $25,000 mark, and the county spent $1,000 in administering it with the result that several indignation meetings were held to protest against this big expense. Then it goes on and says that the federal government spent in 1934, more than $50,000, $10,000 of which was administering costs. This money, it said, all had to come out of the taxpayers' pockets just as well as the money spent direct by the county, and no one protested last year's poor relief expenses.

The above is true far as I know. But how and where shall we protest? Talking this matter over with hundreds of farmers and others during the past year, there is just as much dissatisfaction with federal poor relief as there was when the county paid this relief direct.

But when this wastefulness in poor relief could not be changed when the county was handling it direct, most people seem to think that there is no use in protesting any more. Can any of the readers of the Forum suggest any plan of protest against poor relief that will be effective?

If you can tell us how, don't hide your light under a bushel but put it on a candlestick that all may see, so that we can protest against Poor Relief wastefulness in a way that will bring results.

J. W. Erlandson.

A POVERTY TAX

The principle objection to the Turnover Tax is that it taxes poverty more than it taxes wealth. consumers' goods are bought by. Basically, the sales tax is a TAX ON POVERTY . . . The masses who are without means bear the largest share of the burden . . The man with an income of $1,000 a year spends almost all of it The man with an income of $100,000 a year lives comfortably, yet saves at least 35 per cent of his income. The man with an income of $1,000,000 a year saves more than 76 per cent. Only that which is spent is taxed; that which is saved escapes taxation. The poor man would thus be paying tax on 100 per cent of his income while the extremely wealthy man would be paying a tax on less than 24 per cent of his income. Stated differently, the poor man would pay a one-half of one per cent tax and the rich man . -eighth of one per cent . . . Two-thirds of all persons of a low level income. . .

TECHNOLOGY AND COLLECTIVISM

One major force is encouraging collectivism in this country: the pressure of the technical arts. Modern technology has bound us into one network of interlocked activities; it has hammered down costs of production in terms of man-hours threatening unnumbered vested interests in high relative prices; it has shrunk the map by high speed transport and communication; it has reduced the working population through technological unemployment, with a consequent decrease in purchasing power; it has reared the fantastic towers and piled up the fantastic congestion of Megalopolis; it has spewed upon the roads 25,000,000 motor cars for the state to direct as best it may, while 20,000,000 radio sets demand a policing of air waves: it has equipped backward nations with energy systems of their own and thus has encouraged economic nationalism; it has speeded up the business cycle; it has unbalanced the whole price structure to the particular disadvantage of the business of farming; it has created a production plant far in excess of market demand—though not of human needs; it has upset the moralities of thrift; it has divorced ownership from industrial control; it has placed the consumer above the producer in economic importance, while "sound" finance knows no way adequately to finance the consumer; and, perhaps most devastating of all, it has reduced great blocks of property to importance failing mass consumption.—Stuart Chase in the Current History.

RICHBERG, THE "RADICAL"

In March REAL AMERICA Mr. Donald Richberg chides his "stiffnecked friend" for opposing the New Deal, and very aptly tells him that his "attitude rises out of the economics of a bygone age." A few sentences further along, Mr. Richberg himself reveals the identical attitude of which he complains in his friends. He says:—" I am one of those who believe that the willing workers of our industrial and commercial world should be able to rely on private enterprise for their continuous support."

In the same mind he could have said, (as thousands did some thirty years ago), "I am one of those who believe that hurtling along at this breath-taking speed of twelve miles per hour is risking the lives of everyone in the automobile as well as of the drivers of all horsedrawn vehicles on the highway."

With more than half of Mr. Rosevelt's term already passed into history, we find unemployment still universal, the number on relief at a new high, and the public debt at its all-time peak. We are "getting no better, fast!" Better call Upton Sinclair, Mr. President, for another conference. You need him.

PATRIOTISM

What kind of an American is he who loudly boasts we have the best government on Earth then, in almost the same breath, just as loudly insists that it is too crooked, too dishonest, too wasteful, too extravagant, too ignorant, too inefficient, too criminally stupid, to be trusted to conduct any business bigger than a peanut stand?

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

Munitions salesmen are scattered here and there throughout the earth with their sales talk, "preparedness" and "national defense" hokum.

This preparedness salestalk is strengthened by the Boran-Johnson-Long and Coughlin, against the World Court hokum, which keeps alive the hates and fears and suspicion of one another among nations and among peoples.

Stirring up fear and suspicion is the mission of munitions manufacturers and war creators along with the puffed-up superiority ideas of nationalism as against the giving of self in the greater good of internationalism. It is time we take our stand for the confiscation of fortunes and elimination of war profiteering. When we do this we will have created a peace mechanism that will lessen the probability of another war. Until we do we will be living in the midst of the daily possibility of a war, more horrible than all preceding wars combined.

In one day the United States Senate voted against the World Court while the next day it voted $800,000,000 for increase in armaments. What a Judas act

Economics and Thrift

"What are your views on this great economic question?" asked the reporter.

"Sorry I can't give them to you gratis," answered Senator Sorghum. "I'm under contract to save 'em up for my next magazine article."

Grandma's Problem

Mother—You don't know how you worry me. Why, my hair is turning gray.

Small Daughter—You sure must have worried poor grandma. Her hair's turned white!

And a Dollar

Teacher—Tommy, if your father could save a dollar a week for four weeks, what would he have?

Tommy—A radio, a new suit, and a set of furniture.—Chicago Tribune.

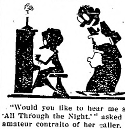
THIRTY-HOUR WEEK



"Would you like to hear me sing 'All Through the Night,'" asked the amateur contralto of her caller.

"I'm going to beat it about ten," he hedged. "Better knock off about then."

One-Man War

"And there, my son, you have the story of your dad and the Great war."

"Yes, dad, but why did they need all the other soldiers?"

Built Right

"That's an appropriate looking hot-dog stand."

"Yes. It's made of dogwood and covered with bark."

The Farmers' Union at Washington

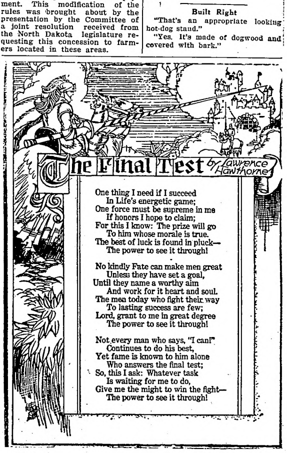
Washington, D. C.,
March 14, 1935.

Hearings on the Frazier-Lemke Re-Finance Bill designated H. R. 2066 began yesterday before the House Agricultural Committee. The Committee has allotted three days to the friends of this Bill to present their testimony. Congressman Lemke and a delegation of fifty-two members headed by a floor leader armed with a joint resolution of the Michigan Legislature, authorizing him to speak in behalf of this Bill for the state of Michigan, testified yesterday. Congressman Hull of Wisconsin and Congressman Binderup of Nebraska appeared before the committee this morning. C. C. Talbott, president of the North Dakota Farmers Union representing the Northwest Farmers Union Legislative committee made a very able presentation before the committee this morning. The studies made by the Congressmen of this Bill have brought about a very favorable attitude on their part encouraging the friends of this legislation very much. K. W. Hones, president of the Wisconsin Farmers Union, M. W. Thatcher, Representative of Farmers National Grain Corporation in Washington, and E. E. Kennedy, Secretary of the National Farmers Unio nare scheduled to appear before the committee tomorrow in behalf of the Bill.

A lot of good work has been done by Mr. Hones and Mr. Lewis in the interest of Dairying. Particularly with respect to importations of competitive fats and oils and imported butter, and also with the difficult problem of working out a satisfactory program for the Industry.

Chester Davis, administrator of the AAA in a conference today expressed his appreciation of the efforts of this Committee in helping work out the many difficult problems encountered in the twenty-two months operation of the Act, and in assisting in the development of a future program for Agriculture, based on the knowledge gained in the experience of the past.

It will not be necessary for the Farmers living in the drouth Area to seed the minimum acres in order to qualify for a benefit payment. This modification of the rules was brought about by the presentation by the Committee of a joint resolution received from the North Dakota legislature requesting this concession to farmers located in these areas.



The Final Test by Lawrence Hawthorne

One thing I need if I succeed
In Life's energetic game;
One force must be supreme in me
If honors I hope to claim;
For this I know: The prize will go
To him whose morale is true.
The best of luck is found in pluck—
The power to see it through!

No kindly Fate can make men great
Unless they have set a goal,
Until they name a worthy aim
And work for it heart and soul.
The men today who fight their way
To lasting success are few;
Lord, grant to me in great degree
The power to see it through!

Not every man who says, "I can!"
Continues to do his best.
Yet fame is known to him alone
Who answers the final test;
So, this I ask: Whatever task
Is waiting for me to do,
Give me the might to win the fight—
The power to see it through!

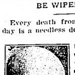
Let Our Motto Be
GOOD HEALTH
BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

DIPHTHERIA CAN AND SHOULD BE WIPED OUT

Every death from diphtheria today is a needless death.



We who have to do with preventive medicine wish every community would rise up and say, "Every person within our boundaries must be made immune to diphtheria."

Indeed the most radical health officers would like to make every diphtheria death subject to a coroner's inquest, as if it were a case of murder. And they would bring to trial the parent, or the doctor, or whoever it was who let the child go too long before antitoxin was administered. If these radical officials would have their way, they would make it a criminal offense for anyone to get diphtheria. Because diphtheria is a disease we could stamp out completely in this country in the space of a few years if everyone would do his part.

Diphtheria is no longer a spectacular disease in the minds of the public. It would be well if it were. Older persons can remember when epidemics of diphtheria were feared. Cases of "black diphtheria" put dread in everyone's heart.

But even though diphtheria does not come in waves any more, as influenza does, it nevertheless bobs up continually. Diphtheria is the second greatest cause of death among children from five to fourteen years of age in the state of Illinois. It is led only by accidents.

Diphtheria is a treacherous disease. It is what physicians call a toxoid disease, that is, the diphtheria germ, as well as doing its own particular damage, develops a poison that goes through the system, and as a result, even though the child recovers, damage may be done to the heart or the kidneys, and in later life the victim becomes a semi-invalid, or is otherwise handicapped. Children weakened by scarlet fever or measles are particularly liable to diphtheria if exposed to it.

The greatest number of cases occur among children from five to seven years of age, at the time they are beginning school and coming in contact with more people.

Diphtheria germs enter the body by the nose or throat and leave it in the discharge from the nose or throat. Hence the person caring for a diphtheria case should be very careful in the handling of these discharges, and in the handling of anything touched by the patient's hands. Milk, if touched by infected hands, becomes infected and transmits the disease. A patient should not be considered safe to mingle with others until two cultures from both throat and nose are declared free from germs by a competent laboratory. Certain individuals, immune to the disease themselves, can have germs in virulent form in the lining of their noses and throats, and can transmit these germs to susceptible persons.

Different persons vary greatly in their susceptibility to diphtheria. Some have a natural antitoxin in their blood, and will not contract diphtheria under any circumstances. But others can get a second case within a few weeks after recovering from a first attack, so it is not safe to assume, without a test, that an attack of diphtheria will give immunity.

But every single person can be made immune to diphtheria. By the use of the Schick test, a doctor can tell whether antitoxin is present or absent in the blood of an individual.

If it is present, then that person will not contract diphtheria, even when exposed to it. If the Schick reaction is positive, then an injection of toxic-antitoxin given once a week for three weeks, will immunize the person against diphtheria. The toxin-antitoxin works slowly, however, and it may be eight to twelve weeks before immunity is complete.

In case a child who gives a positive Schick test is exposed to diphtheria, that child should be kept under frequent observation by a physician. Diphtheria can be an insidious disease. A child can have it for several days before the characteristic sore throat becomes painful enough that the child seems really sick. It is much better that the parents of a susceptible child be overly suspicious when diphtheria is about than to be worry free.

The period of incubation for diphtheria is from two to seven days, usually two days. If a child develops diphtheria, the physician should not delay a moment in the administering of antitoxin, so as to minimize as much as possible the toxin development of the disease. Speed has a meaning in diphtheria.

If there were a law that every child on his third birthday should be made immune to diphtheria, we could stamp out this dread disease in a very few years.

County Contribution To Poor Relief Cut

At the County Auditors' Meeting held in St. Paul last Friday and Saturday the Northwest District of counties' contribution to poor relief funds was materially reduced. The amount the counties will have to put up to match federal funds will be equalized all over the state, but the figures will not be released until the work on all the counties has been completed. Work on this matter should be finished next Saturday, according to H. L. Fowler, Pennington county auditor, and president of the asosciation.

Porcelain Tower of Nanking

The Porcelain Tower of Nanking was designed by the Emperor Yung-lo (1403-28) on a previously sacred site to commemorate the virtues of his mother. It was begun in 1413 and destroyed during the Taiping rebellion. The tower was octagonal in shape, about 260 feet high, its outer walls cased with the finest white porcelain bricks. Each of the nine stories in which the building was divided was marked by overhanging eaves of green glazed tiles.

Gypsum

Gypsum, a white, rocklike mineral, on heating gives plaster of paris, which is easily converted back into gysum by the addition of water. This process makes possible the manufacture of relatively thin sheets of gypsum of any size, which, because of their lightness and insulating properties, are quite useful for wallboards and roofing. Mixed with suitable binding materials, gypsum is a competitor of concrete for certain kinds of flooring.

Inconsistent Laws

In courts of law, an expert is defined as one whose knowledge is based on "experience and practice." Yet in a number of states today, says Harry Greenspan, New York city, in Collier's Weekly, a physician who has practiced only one year and who has never performed an operation is allowed to testify in cases of surgical malpractice and to criticize or commend the methods used by a defendant physician.

Driver's License Suspended

Charged with careless driving, Arthur F. Ostmoe was arrested by the state highway police on the road between St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls, late Saturday evening. Because liquor was smelled it was charged that he had been drinking. He was arraigned in municipal court Monday morning and fined forty dollars and costs; his driver's license was also suspended for a ninety day period.

NORWAY TO HAVE LABOR CABINET

Oslo, Norway—Norway's first labor ministry was in the farmative process Saturday evening after the resignation of the Mowinckel cabinet earlier in the day. King Haakon, accepting the resignations, commissioned Johan Nygaardsvold, laborite and president of the storting, to form a new cabinet. The cabinet resignation followed a no-confidence vote after two days on the budget.

THI RI FA MU CLUB MEETS

The Thi Ri Fa Mu Club met at the studio of Thelma Holm Erickson on Tuesday, March 19. The Music club observed Bach's 250th Anniversary. After Current Events on Music and business meeting a program devoted entirely to Bach's period was given.

Angeline Havel played the "Two Part Invention No. 8" by Bach and Fern Barnett played the "E Flat Minor Prelude" from the "Well-Tempered Clavichord by Bach. Violet Rhodegard gave a talk on Bach's Passion Music.

H. S. Seniors are Taking College Aptitude Tests

The Seniors of the High School are taking College Aptitude Tests this week; the procedure this year differs from that of previous years in that only those who plan on going to school are required to take the tests whereas before all seniors were required to take it. Another change in the test this year is that it is now given in four parts; one conducted on General Science; another on Contemporary Affairs, and an English test; the fourth requirement is given only to those students who are planning on attending the University of Minesota. The tests will be completed this week.

SPEAK WEDDING VOWSS

Mrs. Mable Jenkins and Melvin Ihle were married Thursday evening, March 14, at 7 o'clock at the Rev. H. L. Sjogren home. They were attended by Estelle Phillip, Louis Stokke, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lee. Only immediate friends and relatives of the couple were present.

Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was given for Mr. and Mrs. Ihle at the Palm Garden Cafe. Pink and white decorations were used for the occasion.

The couple left that same evening for a week's trip, after which they will make their home on the groom's farm near Newfolden.

Declamatory Contest to Be Staged at Ag. School

Class representatives are making final preparations for the extemporaneous and declamatory contests to be held at the Northwest School on Monday of Commencement Week. These representatives have been selected thru a series of elimination contests which have been carried on under the direction of the English department, including Misses Dorothy Smith and Grace Warne, and D. C. McGenty. Those who will compete in the extemporaneous speaking contest include Richard Johansen, Pitt, advanced; Carlos Grove, Roosevelt, senior; James Weckwerth, Hazel, junior; and Wilfred Wellbrook, Fergus Falls, freshman.

In the oratory section Bertrum Johnson, Hawley, advanced, will give "National Character". David Anderson, Crookston, senior, "Comedy or Tragedy"; Martin Chilson, Crookston, junior, "Youth Aflame"; Werner Weindorf, Red Lake freshman "The Big Parade." Marjorie Bysom, Fosston, will represent the advanced class in the dramatic reading section with "Berkeley Square" by Balderston; Earl Lindberg, Beltrami, senior. "Ile" by Eugene O'Neill; Evelyn LaRiviere, Crookston, junior, "The Barretts of Wimple Street," by Besier, and Ivy McVeety, East Grand Forks, freshman, "Pelleas and Melisande" by Maeterlinck. Agatha Olson, Beltrami, will carry the advanced colors in the humorous reading section with "The Vanishing Princess" by Golden; William Mumby, Breckenridge, senior, "Green Pastures" by Connolly; Ruth Lerud, Twin Valley, junior, "A Marriage Proposal" by Tchekoff, and Raymond Higgin, Viking, freshman, "The Merchant of Venice" by Shakespeare.

Judges will include Mrs. C. D. Mitchell, and Misses Katherine Quealy and Jean McKellar.

Canadian Official Will Address N. W. Seniors

The annual senior class program will take a prominent place in Commencement Week exercises to be held at the Northwest school during the coming week. This program will be in the afternoon preceding the presentation of diplomas and an address by Honorable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, Ontario, Canada.

Clifford Sauer, Glyndon, vice-president of the senior class, has been selected chairman of the meeting which will open with a greeting by Miss Lydia Dahlen, senior class advisor. Special numbers will include the charge to the juniors by Marcus Wolden, Fergus Falls, senior response for the junior class by Roland Wentzel, Fisher, president of the junior class; class history by Marie Johansen, Pitt; Class Will, Joyce Stammes, Halma; Class Prophecy, James Burns, Crookston; "Recreation in the Rural Community," by Harold Sanden, Beaulieu; and an address by Miss Fae Hughbanks, senior class adviser. The speaking program will be interspersed with songs by the school; a piano solo, "Romance"—La Forge, by Olive Steen, Halstad; selections by the girls' trio, Irene Holst, Thief River Falls; Marjorie Bysom, Fosston, and Helen Carlson, Halstad; mixed quartet, Irene Holst, Helen Carlson, Chester Ingebretson of Ulen, and Bertrum Johnson, Hawley; and a piano solo, "Whims"—Schumann, by Marjorie Bysom.

Martial Law in S. Dakota Twice in Only Four Days

Sioux Falls, S. D., (MC)—Remaining in the plant until chased out by the National Guard, sitting on the railroad siding to prevent movement of trains, the workers in the Morrell packing plant have at last expressed their indignation at slave-like conditions by striking, under the leadership of rank-and-file leaders within the Amalgamated, A. F. of L union. Although sabotaged by a number of scabs and company men, the strike is a strong one, supported by local unemployed and members of militant farm organizations. Sioux Falls is the headquarters of the Farmers Emergency Relief Conference.

Petitioned by sheriffs, Chamber of Commerce, and other conservatives and strikebreakers, Governor Berry first gave a mobilization order that sent soldiers against the men in the plant, succeeding in ousting them, but the governor said he did not mean military action in this case. He had issued the order because he had been told that "thousands of dollars worth of meat was spoiling."

But March 13, the National Guard from seven S. D. cities marched again, not including Sioux Falls, where many of the strikers are themselves National Guardsmen. The conservative press is playinv up the influx of "avitators" from outside the state, and the fact that a number of scabs have been prevented from going to work by the strikers.

Sioux Falls is about 200 miles from Austin and Albert Lea where the Independent Union of All Workers originated, conducting a strike two weeks ago in the latter place, and in Austin having seized the Hormel Packing plant last year. This Sioux Falls strike, although in the same industry as Hormel, is not connected—as yet.

Highway Department To Employ Farmers

Farmers and teams will be hired by the state highmay department to drag secondary roads which will not support motorized equipment during the spring break-up, says a highway department announcement.

District maintenance engineers throughout the state have been instructed to arrange with farmers in their territory for whatever help of this kind is needed. Included in the 4,500 miles of county roads taken into the trunk system last year are many miles not well enough constructed to hold up standard motorized maintenance equipment when the frost is coming out of the ground.

Load restrictions have already been placed on many secondary routes, and these must be obeyed to the letter if the roads are not to become impassable during the break-up highway engineers assert.

SILVERTON

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Williams, who have just came back from the southern states, visited with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Anderson, Sunday.

Miss Thelma Homme had as her guest over the week end Miss Belle Anderson of Goodridge.

Miss Gladys Kisner, who is employed at the O. E. Grinde home, spent the week end at her parental home in Wylie.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hendrickson and family of Minot, N. D., are visiting with Ole Isaacson at the Wm. Sanders home.

Visitors at the Emil Wollen home Sunday were Mrs. Gall and son George, and Albert Novak of Mavie and Albert and Thomas Homme.

Ted Kusmak, teacher in Dist. 53, spent the week end at his home in Goodridge.

Mr. Kirkconnel of Thief River Falls, was a caller at the Banner school Monday.

Ole Homme Jr., visited with friends in Thief River Falls Sunday evening.

Miss Threse Olson, who attends Lincoln high school, visited over the week end at her parental home.

A. G. ANDEASON HEADS FARMER-LABOR CLUB

tor Bergstrom, (succeeding Arthur M. Johnson): directors, Gust Hanson, (succeeding C. E. Hellquist), and Edw. Odelin, (re-elected); members of the County Central committee, Otto Rehr and H. Halland, were elected by acclamation. The latter two were elected to the county committee by the county convention last March and have held the offices of county chairman and county secretary, respectively.

A short talk was given by J. W. Erlandson, who suggested the organization of a Farmer-Labor chorus under the direction of Dr. P. L. Vistaunet. Mr. Erlandson stressed the importance of music and community singing in programs arranged for the club meetings.

Fred C. Proehl, formerly of this city and now Special Deputy Examiner of Banks in charge of liquidation at Hill City, Minnesota, gave a short talk on the manipulations of chain banks, chain stores and corporation farming and on the proposed "Gross Turnover Tax."

R. M. Aalbu, chairman of the program committee announced that he has a letter from W. E. Day of Bagley, whose seat in the state legislature was stolen by the reactionary majority, stating that he (Mr. Day) will be here to address the club at its next meeting, April 19. Mr. Lewis, who was Mr. Day's attorney in the contest proceedings, and Mr. Prestemon, who acted as referee in the contest are also expected to be here, Mr. Aalbu stated.

Mrs. Thora Nelson headed a committee from the Women's Farmer-Labor club which served lunch after the program.

RED LAKE RIVER GROUPS DISCUSS WATER PROJECTS

sure adequate water power at strategically located power dams.

It was pointed out, however, that this project would take two years or more to complete and in the meantime it is necessary to take steps to guarantee against a recurrence of the drouth conditions of the past two years. As an immediate and temporary measure, Mr. Frisbie recommends that the Red Lake River be thoroughly cleaned and flumes constructed where there is apparent leakage out thru the swamps and into other water sheds.

It was decided to approach the state planning board to get their assistance, if possible, to carry out this temporary project. A resolution was adopted, addressed to the planning board requesting this cooperation. The resolution follows:

RESOLUTION

BE IT RESOLVED, That whereas we have during the past few years suffered a serious condition in our diminishing water supply and

"WHEREAS, the condition continues to become more and more serious, making it imperative that something be done to remedy the situation, and

"WHEREAS, no large program could be undertaken speedily enough to give us permanent and immediate relief, and

"WHEREAS, a plan for immediate relief in the coming year has been presented to the cities assembled,

"NOW, THEREFORE, we urge your honorable body to give your immediate consideration to the plan that has been proposed,—further identified as that proposed by the State Emergency Relief Engineer, Mr. H. I. Frisbie, or such other plans as your Honorable Body might see fit to consider."

Yours very truly,

"SAVE 15% TO 20% ON GAS"

Say owners of bigger, faster Dodge

More power! More speed! 85 satin-smooth miles an hour! Yet more economical than ever. Actually costs less to run than smaller, lower-priced cars, owners say. They report 20—22—24 miles to the gallon of gas ... savings of 30¢ to 40¢ on every dollar's worth of oil they buy!

That's real economy! And this new Dodge has dozens of other surprises besides its astonishing thrift of operation and upkeep. You'll experience an entirely new kind of motoring thrill with the "Airglide Ride" ... smooth, always level, free from sideway even on curves.

With "Synchromatic Control", driving has been made twice as easy and effortless. Altogether, there are 95 basic advancements in the New-Value Dodge ... plus the sturdy all-steel body, pioneered by Dodge more than 20 years ago .. safe perfected, dual-cylinder hydraulic brakes, introduced by Dodge many years ago, and constantly improved ... patented Floating Power engine mountings ... and other famous features exclusive with Dodge in its price field.

Only the genius of a manufacturing organization such as Dodge—with such complete facilities, with 20 years of experience in building nearly three million fine vehicles—could create such outstanding dollar-for-dollar value!

Let Our Motto Be

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

DIPHTHERIA CAN AND SHOULD BE WIPED OUT

Every death from diphtheria today is a needless death.

We who have to do with preventive medicine wish every community would rise up and say, "Every person within our boundaries must be made immune to diphtheria."

Indeed the most radical health officers would like to make every diphtheria death subject to a coroner's inquest, as if it were a case of murder. And they would bring to trial the parent, or the doctor, or whoever it was who let the child go too long before antitoxin was administered. If these radical officials would have their way, they would make it a criminal offense for anyone to get diphtheria. Because diphtheria is a disease we could stamp out completely in this country in the space of a few years if everyone would do his part.

Diphtheria is no longer a spectacular disease in the minds of the public. It would be well if it were. Older persons can remember when epidemics of diphtheria were feared. Cases of "black diphtheria" put dread in everyone's heart.

But even though diphtheria does not come in waves any more, as influenza does, it nevertheless bobs up continually. Diphtheria is the second greatest cause of death among children from five to fourteen years of age in the state of Illinois. It is led only by accidents.

Diphtheria is a treacherous disease. It is what physicians call a toxoid disease, that is, the diphtheria germ, as well as doing its own particular damage, develops a poison that goes through the system, and as a result, even though the child recovers, damage may be done to the heart or the kidneys, and in later life the victim becomes a semi-invalid, or is otherwise handicapped. Children weakened by scarlet fever or measles are particularly liable to diphtheria if exposed to it.

The greatest number of cases occur among children from five to seven years of age, at the time they are beginning school and coming in contact with more people.

Diphtheria germs enter the body by the nose or throat and leave it in the discharge from the nose or throat. Hence the person caring for a diphtheria case should be very careful in the handling of these discharges, and in the handling of anything touched by the patient's hands. Milk, if touched by infected hands, becomes infected and transmits the disease. A patient should not be considered safe to mingle with others until two cultures from both throat and nose are declared free from germs by a competent laboratory. Certain individuals, immune to the disease themselves, can have germs in virulent form in the lining of their noses and throats, and can transmit these germs to susceptible persons.

Different persons vary greatly in their susceptibility to diphtheria. Some have a natural antitoxin in their blood, and will not contract diphtheria under any circumstances. But others can get a second case within a few weeks after recovering from a first attack, so it is not safe to assume, without a test, that an attack of diphtheria will give immunity.

But every single person can be made immune to diphtheria. By the use of the Schick test, a doctor can tell whether antitoxin is present or absent in the blood of an individual.

If it is present, then that person will not contract diphtheria, even when exposed to it. If the Schick reaction is positive, then an injection of toxic-antitoxin given once a week for three weeks, will immunize the person against diphtheria. The toxin-antitoxin works slowly, however, and it may be eight to twelve weeks before immunity is complete.

In case a child who gives a positive Schick test is exposed to diphtheria, that child should be kept under frequent observation by a physician. Diphtheria can be an insidious disease. A child can have it for several days before the characteristic sore throat becomes painful enough that the child seems really sick. It is much better that the parents of a susceptible child be overly suspicious when diphtheria is about than to be worry free.

The period of incubation for diphtheria is from two to seven days, usually two days. If a child develops diphtheria, the physician should not delay a moment in the administering of antitoxin, so as to minimize as much as possible the toxin development of the disease. Speed has a meaning in diphtheria.

If there were a law that every child on his third birthday should be made immune to diphtheria, we could stamp out this dread disease in a very few years.

County Contribution To Poor Relief Cut

At the County Auditors' Meeting held in St. Paul last Friday and Saturday the Northwest District of counties' contribution to poor relief funds was materially reduced. The amount the counties will have to put up to match federal funds will be equalized all over the state, but the figures will not be released until the work on all the counties has been completed. Work on this matter should be finished next Saturday, according to H. L. Fowler, Pennington county auditor, and president of the asosciation.

Porcelain Tower of Nanking

The Porcelain Tower of Nanking was designed by the Emperor Yunglo (1403-28) on a previously sacred site to commemorate the virtues of his mother. It was begun in 1413 and destroyed during the Taiping rebellion. The tower was octagonal in shape, about 260 feet high, its outer walls cased with the finest white porcelain bricks. Each of the nine stories in which the building was divided was marked by overhanging eaves of green glazed tiles.

Gypsum

Gypsum, a white, rocklike mineral, on heating gives plaster of paris, which is easily converted back into gysum by the addition of water. This process makes possible the manufacture of relatively thin sheets of gypsum of any size, which, because of their lightness and insulating properties, are quite useful for wallboards and roofing. Mixed with suitable binding materials, gypsum is a competitor of concrete for certain kinds of flooring.

Inconsistent Laws

In courts of law, an expert is defined as one whose knowledge is based on "experience and practice." Yet in a number of states today, says Harry Greenspan, New York city, in Collier's Weekly, a physician who has practiced only one year and who has never performed an operation is allowed to testify in cases of surgical malpractice and to criticize or commend the methods used by a defendant physician.

Driver's License Suspended

Charged with careless driving, Arthur F. Ostmoe was arrested by the state highway police on the road between St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls, late Saturday evening. Because liquor was smelled it was charged that he had been drinking. He was arraigned in municipal court Monday morning and fined forty dollars and costs; his driver's license was also suspended for a ninety day period.

NORWAY TO HAVE LABOR CABINET

Oslo, Norway—Norway's first labor ministry was in the farmative process Saturday evening after the resignation of the Mowinckel cabinet earlier in the day. King Haakon, accepting the resignations, commissioned Johan Nygaardsvold, laborite and president of the storting, to form a new cabinet. The cabinet resignation followed a no-confidence vote after two days on the budget.

H. S. Seniors are Taking College Aptitude Tests

The Seniors of the High School are taking College Aptitude Tests this week; the procedure this year differs from that of previous years in that only those who plan on going to school are required to take the tests whereas before all seniors were required to take it. Another change in the test this year is that it is now given in four parts; one conducted on General Science; another on Contemporary Affairs, and an English test; the fourth requirement is given only to those students who are planning on attending the University of Minesota. The tests will be completed this week.

SPEAK WEDDING VOWSS

Mrs. Mable Jenkins and Melvin Ihle were married Thursday evening, March 14, at 7 o'clock at the Rev. H. L. Sjogren home. They were attended by Estelle Phillip, Louis Stokke, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lee. Only immediate friends and relatives of the couple were present.

Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was given for Mr. and Mrs. Ihle at the Palm Garden Cafe. Pink and white decorations were used for the occasion.

The couple left that same evening for a week's trip, after which they will make their home on the groom's farm near Newfolden.

Declamatory Contest to Be Staged at Ag. School

Class representatives are making final preparations for the extemporaneous and declamatory contests to be held at the Northwest School on Monday of Commencement Week. These representatives have been selected thru a series of elimination contests which have been carried on under the direction of the English department, including Misses Dorothy Smith and Grace Warne, and D. C. McGenty. Those who will compete in the extemporaneous speaking contest include Richard Johansen, Pitt, advanced; Carlos Grove, Roosevelt, senior; James Weckwerth, Hazel, junior; and Wilfred Wellbrook, Fergus Falls, freshman.

In the oratory section Bertrum Johnson, Hawley, advanced, will give "National Character"; David Anderson, Crookston, senior, "Comedy or Tragedy"; Martin Chilson, Crookston, junior, "Youth Aflame"; Werner Weindorf, Red Lake freshman "The Big Parade." Marjorie Bysom, Fosston, will represent the advanced class in the dramatic reading section with "Berkeley Square" by Balderston; Earl Lindberg, Beltrami, senior, "Ile" by Eugene O'Neill; Evelyn LaRiviere, Crookston, junior, "The Barretts of Wimple Street," by Besier, and Ivy McVeety, East Grand Forks, freshman, "Pelleas and Melisande" by Maeterlinck. Agatha Olson, Beltrami, will carry the advanced colors in the humorous reading section with "The Vanishing Princess" by Golden; William Mumby, Breckenridge, senior, "Green Pastures" by Connolly; Ruth Lerud, Twin Valley, junior, "A Marriage Proposal" by Tchekoff, and Raymond Higgin, Viking, freshman, "The Merchant of Venice" by Shakespeare.

Judges will include Mrs. C. D. Mitchell, and Misses Katherine Quealy and Jean McKellar.

Canadian Official Will Address N. W. Seniors

The annual senior class program will take a prominent place in Commencement Week exercises to be held at the Northwest school during the coming week. This program will be in the afternoon preceding the presentation of diplomas and an address by Honorable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, Ontario, Canada.

Clifford Sauer, Glyndon, vice-president of the senior class, has been selected chairman of the meeting which will open with a greeting by Miss Lydia Dahlen, senior class advisor. Special numbers will include the charge to the juniors by Marcus Wolden, Fergus Falls, senior response for the junior class by Roland Wentzel, Fisher, president of the junior class; class history by Marie Johansen, Pitt; Class Will, Joyce Stammes, Halma; Class Prophecy, James Burns, Crookston; "Recreation in the Rural Community," by Harold Sanden, Beaulieu; and an address by Miss Fae Hughbanks, senior class adviser. The speaking program will be interspersed with songs by the school; a piano solo, "Romance"—La Forge, by Olive Steen, Halstad; selections by the girls' trio, Irene Holst, Thief River Falls; Marjorie Bysom, Fosston, and Helen Carlson, Halstad; mixed quartet, Irene Holst, Helen Carlson, Chester Ingebretson of Ulen, and Bertrum Johnson, Hawley; and a piano solo, "Whims"—Schumann, by Marjorie Bysom.

Martial Law in S. Dakota Twice in Only Four Days

Sioux Falls, S. D., (MC)—Remaining in the plant until chased out by the National Guard, sitting on the railroad siding to prevent movement of trains, the workers in the Morrell packing plant have at last expressed their indignation at slave-like conditions by striking, under the leadership of rank-and-file leaders within the Amalgamated, A. F. of L. union. Although sabotaged by a number of scabs and company men, the strike is a strong one, supported by local unemployed and members of militant farm organizations. Sioux Falls is the headquarters of the Farmers Emergency Relief Conference.

Petitioned by sheriffs, Chamber of Commerce, and other conservatives and strikebreakers, Governor Berry first gave a mobilization order that sent soldiers against the men in the plant, succeeding in ousting them, but the governor said he did not mean military action in this case. He had issued the order because he had been told that "thousands of dollars worth of meat was spoiling."

But March 13, the National Guard from seven S. D. cities marched again, not including Sioux Falls, where many of the strikers are themselves National Guardsmen. The conservative press is playinv up the influx of "avitators" from outside the state, and the fact that a number of scabs have been prevented from going to work by the strikers.

Sioux Falls is about 200 miles from Austin and Albert Lea where the Independent Union of All Workers originated, conducting a strike two weeks ago in the latter place, and in Austin having seized the Hormel Packing plant last year. This Sioux Falls strike, although in the same industry as Hormel, is not connected—as yet.

Highway Department To Employ Farmers

Farmers and teams will be hired by the state highmay department to drag secondary roads which will not support motorized equipment during the spring break-up, says a highway department announcement.

District maintenance engineers throughout the state have been instructed to arrange with farmers in their territory for whatever help of this kind is needed. Included in the 4,500 miles of county roads taken into the trunk system last year are many miles not well enough constructed to hold up standard motorized maintenance equipment when the frost is coming out of the ground.

Load restrictions have already been placed on many secondary routes, and these must be obeyed to the letter if the roads are not to become impassable during the break-up highway engineers assert.

tor Bergstrom, (succeeding Arthur M. Johnson); directors, Gust Hanson, (succeeding C. E. Hellquist), and Edw. Odelin, (re-elected); members of the County Central committee, Otto Rehr and H. Halland, were elected by acclamation. The latter two were elected to the county committee by the county convention last March and have held the offices of county chairman and county secretary, respectively.

A short talk was given by J. W. Erlandson, who suggested the organization of a Farmer-Labor chorus under the direction of Dr. P. L. Vistaunet. Mr. Erlandson stressed the importance of music and community singing in programs arranged for the club meetings.

Fred C. Proehl, formerly of this city and now Special Deputy Examiner of Banks in charge of liquidation at Hill City, Minnesota, gave a short talk on the manipulations of chain banks, chain stores and corporation farming and on the proposed "Gross Turnover Tax."

R. M. Aalbu, chairman of the program committee announced that he has a letter from W. E. Day of Bagley, whose seat in the state legislature was stolen by the reactionary majority, stating that he (Mr. Day) will be here to address the club at its next meeting, April 19. Mr. Lewis, who was Mr. Day's attorney in the contest proceedings, and Mr. Prestemon, who acted as referee in the contest are also expected to be here, Mr. Aalbu stated.

Mrs. Thora Nelson headed a committee from the Women's Farmer-Labor club which served lunch after the program.

RED LAKE RIVER GROUPS DISCUSS WATER PROJECTS

sure adequate water power at strategically located power dams.

It was pointed out, however, that this project would take two years or more to complete and in the meantime it is necessary to take steps to guarantee against a recurrence of the drouth conditions of the past two years. As an immediate and temporary measure, Mr. Frisbie recommends that the Red Lake River be thoroughly cleaned and flumes constructed where there is apparent leakage out thru the swamps and into other water sheds.

It was decided to approach the state planning board to get their assistance, if possible, to carry out this temporary project. A resolution was adopted, addressed to the planning board requesting this cooperation. The resolution follows:

RESOLUTION

BE IT RESOLVED, That whereas we have during the past few years suffered a serious condition in our diminishing water supply and

"WHEREAS, the condition continues to become more and more serious, making it imperative that something be done to remedy the situation, and

"WHEREAS, no large program could be undertaken speedily enough to give us permanent and immediate relief, and

"WHEREAS, a plan for immediate relief in the coming year has been presented to the cities assembled,

SECRET ALLIANCE OF PLANTERS FORMED TO SUBDUE SHARECROPPERS

Marked Tree, Ark.—Assassination of attorneys and union leaders, a two thousand dollar fund to import strong-arm men, new organizations of night riders—these are the threats being carried by rumor to every member of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, growing out of a secret meeting of planters held Sunday.

No one knows just what the planters' program is, but part of it, obviously, is to spread terror of new horrors yet to come among the striking sharecroppers. Already mobs have beaten union leaders and broken up the tenants' meetings, active union members have been evicted from their miserable homes, and the courts have been used as tools to convict the workers on flimsy charges and on flimsier evidence.

Laws Made to Order

A new crime has been introduced into labor law by the resourceful planter-controlled law enforcement officers. "Barratry," which is the crime a shyster lawyer commits when he stirs up a quarrel in order to give himself some legal business, has been charged to the union leaders, and convictions against them have actually been secured on this rare charge.

The Arkansas legislature, meanwhile, has moved to tighten up its already severe syndicalism laws so that it is now going to be a crime, not only to encourage the use of force in overthrowing the government, but even to encourage any overt act which might bring the government into public hatred or contempt.

Appeal for Outsile Help

The Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, organized a year ago, following a visit of Norman Thomas through the Arkansas and Tennessee plantation country, is standing solid against the planters. These owners of land, receiving benefits from the Federal Government for reducing their cotton crop, have left their tenants who actually grow the cotton to starve.

Ragged, debt-ridden because of the exactions of their share-crop contracts, malnourished and uneducated except in the knowledge of how to grow and harvest cotton, the tenants have risen against the planters who receive a -government subsidy to keep them idle.

An appeal to the Federal Government brought in an outside investigator, Dr. Mary Conner Myers, who made a report which was considered too hot to publish by the secretary of agriculture. Part of the share-croppers' appeal to the outside world, now, is that pressure be brought on the government to publish Dr. Myers' report.

Tour Country for Aid

Representatives of the union have been sent into the outside world to explain the tenants' plight to the country. Ward Rodgers, a Socialist who helped them as an FERA teacher until his conviction for the "anarchy" of advocating that Negroes and whites combine in a single organization against the plantation system, has been touring the mid-west on behalf of the union. He returns to Arkansas this week for the appeal of his case.

Ed Pickering, president of the local union at Post, Ark.;E. B. McKinney, vice-president of the union; and Walter Moskop, a member of the union's executive council, are now in New York to awaken interest of Eastern labor and workers fraternal organizations in the share-croppers' plight.

Funds for relief and defense should be mailed to H. L. Mitchell, secretary, Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, Tyronza, Ark.

New Deal's "Sugared Poison" Is Attacked

Washington, D. C.—Following a speech by Norman Thomas criticizing the New Deal's security program as "not even a crust, but a piece of poison sprinkled with a little sugar," delegates of organizations of the unemployed from twenty-three states adopted resolutions bitterly condemning Roosevelt's stand Federal Relief and organized a new national federation, the Workers' Alliance of America, to conduct a nationwide fight for adequate aid to the unemployed.

On behalf of the American Federation of Labor, William Green sent a telegram to the convention sayin:

"I am of the opinion that cooperation should prevail among the unemployed organizations and the city central bodies and state federations of labor for the purpose of protecting and preserving wage standards, hours of labor and conditions of employment on public works and public projects. I will urge the closest cooperation among the organized units referred to in this telegram so that the interests of both employed and unemployed may be protected and alvanced."

A statement which appeared in the Daily Worker, indicating that the national executive board of the new organization had been instructed "to meet leading committees of other national unemployed organizations and plan a unity convention within three months," was vigorously denied by David Lasser, national chairman.

"The lies which have been printed about our organization by the Daily Worker have caused our national executive board to have grave doubts as to whether the Communist-led National Unemployment Councils sincerely want unity," Lasser said.

While individual members of the Socialist party were active in calling the Washington conference, every effort will be made to enforce strict independence of the Workers' Alliance from any kind of political domination, Lasser sail.

SECRET ALLIANCE OF PLANTERS FORMED TO SUBDUE SHARECROPPERS

Marked Tree, Ark.—Assassination of attorneys and union leaders, a two thousand dollar fund to import strong-arm men, new organizations of night riders—these are the threats being carried by rumor to every member of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, growing out of a secret meeting of planters held Sunday.

No one knows just what the planters' program is, but part of it, obviously, is to spread terror of new horrors yet to come among the striking sharecroppers. Already mobs have beaten union leaders and broken up the tenants' meetings, active union members have been evicted from their miserable homes, and the courts have been used as tools to convict the workers on flimsy charges and on flimsier evidence.

Laws Made to Order

A new crime has been introduced into labor law by the resourceful planter-controlled law enforcement officers. "Barratry," which is the crime a shyster lawyer commits when he stirs up a quarrel in order to give himself some legal business, has been charged to the union leaders, and convictions against them have actually been secured on this rare charge.

The Arkansas legislature, meanwhile, has moved to tighten up its already severe syndicalism laws so that it is now going to be a crime, not only to encourage the use of force in overthrowing the government, but even to encourage any overt act which might bring the government into public hatred or contempt.

Appeal for Outsile Help

The Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, organized a year ago, following a visit of Norman Thomas through the Arkansas and Tennessee plantation country, is standing solid against the planters. These owners of land, receiving benefits from the Federal Government for reducing their cotton crop, have left their tenants who actually grow the cotton to starve.

Ragged, debt-ridden because of the exactions of their share-crop contracts, malnourished and uneducated except in the knowledge of how to grow and harvest cotton, the tenants have risen against the planters who receive a government subsidy to keep them idle.

An appeal to the Federal Government brought in an outside investigator, Dr. Mary Conner Myers, who made a report which was considered too hot to publish by the secretary of agriculture. Part of the share-croppers' appeal to the outside world, now, is that pressure be brought on the government to publish Dr. Myers' report.

Tour Country for Aid

Representatives of the union have been sent into the outside world to explain the tenants' plight to the country. Ward Rodgers, a Socialist who helped them as an FERA teacher until his conviction for the "anarchy" of advocating that Negroes and whites combine in a single organization against the plantation system, has been touring the mid-west on behalf of the union. He returns to Arkansas this week for the appeal of his case.

Ed Pickering, president of the local union at Post, Ark.;E. B. McKinney, vice-president of the union; and Walter Moskop, a member of the union's executive council, are now in New York to awaken interest of Eastern labor and workers fraternal organizations in the share-croppers' plight.

Funds for relief and defense should be mailed to H. L. Mitchell, secretary, Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, Tyronza, Ark.

New Deal's "Sugared Poison" Is Attacked

Washington, D. C.—Following a speech by Norman Thomas criticizing the New Deal's security program as "not even a crust, but a piece of poison sprinkled with a little sugar," delegates of organizations of the unemployed from twenty-three states adopted resolutions bitterly condemning Roosevelt's stand Federal Relief and organized a new national federation, the Workers' Alliance of America, to conduct a nationwide fight for adequate aid to the unemployed.

On behalf of the American Federation of Labor, William Green sent a telegram to the convention sayin:

"I am of the opinion that cooperation should prevail among the unemployed organizations and the city central bodies and state federations of labor for the purpose of protecting and preserving wage standards, hours of labor and conditions of employment on public works and public projects. I will urge the closest cooperation among the organized units referred to in this telegram so that the interests of both employed and unemployed may be protected and advanced."

A statement which appeared in the Daily Worker, indicating that the national executive board of the new organization had been instructed "to meet leading committees of other national unemployed organizations and plan a unity convention within three months," was vigorously denied by David Lasser, national chairman.

"The lies which have been printed about our organization by the Daily Worker have caused our national executive board to have grave doubts as to whether the Communist-led National Unemployment Councils sincerely want unity," Lasser said.

While individual members of the Socialist party were active in calling the Washington conference, every effort will be made to enforce strict independence of the Workers' Alliance from any kind of political domination, Lasser sail.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

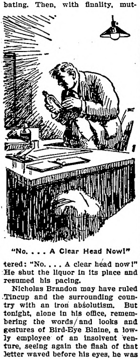
THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a logbirling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

He stopped after a time and opening a drawer of his big desk took from it a bottle of whisky, shook himself and muttered softly. For a time he held it in his hands, debating. Then, with finality, muttered: "No. . . . A clear head now!" He shut the liquor in its place and resumed his pacing.



"No. . . . A Clear Head Now!"

Nicholas Brandon may have ruled Tincup and the surrounding country with an iron absolutism. But tonight, alone in his office, remembering the words and looks and gestures of Bird-Eye Blaine, a lowly employee of an insolvent venture, seeing again the flash of that letter waved before his eyes, he was no commanding figure. He was a frightened man, a hunted man, battling to retain a hold on himself.

CHAPTER IV

BEN ELLIOTT had been on the job at Hoot Owl just two weeks. Able Armitage was with him for the night. Ben was tireless, it seemed. Since the beginning he had labored daytimes, schemed until late at night, and now he spent another hour with Able, trying, as he said, to make every dime look like a dollar.

"Now, say!" His face took on a curious smile as they finally folded their papers. "I haven't had much time to think about anything but patching up this outfit and getting it to function, but through it all one thing's kept bobbing up so often it's got my curiosity on its hind legs.

"Who was McManus? What about Sam Faxson? Where does the little girl you're guardian for come in?"

"Little girl!" Able said, startled and then smiled. "Why, Dawn is—"

"I keep hearing about these men McManus and Faxson and how Brandon is trying to beat you down so he can cheat the orphan child. How about it all?"

Able's smile died out. He shoved up his spectacles and rubbed his sleepy eyes.

"I'll have to make a long story short; just hit the high spots. First, Nicholas Brandon and Denny McManus came into this country when they weren't much more than boys. They were the first hardwood operators in this country. They'd had some experience and a little money but they hit at the right time, picked up a raft of timber for a song and started turning it into a fortune.

"McManus was married and had the daughter, Dawn. Brandon never married. Just when they were swinging nicely, everything running smooth as butter, McManus' wife died. He was as deeply in love as any man I've ever seen and it sent him completely to pot. He took to heavy drinking and got himself in a bad way.

"Of the two, Denny was the more popular. He was friendly, charitable, had a heart as big as a camp stove and as soft as a sponge. He'd go the route for anybody. Why—probably you've never even heard this—when old Don Stuart rimmed the company it was McManus who stood in the way of prosecution. Don had cruised and bought a lot of stuff for them. He always had been a drinker himself and on one spree got into some sort of mess and crooked the company out of three or four hundred dollars. Enough, anyhow, to let himself in for a long term in the penitentiary if they'd pushed it. Brandon wanted to prosecute, all right, but McManus stood up for Don. That was typical of the man: friendly, forgiving, a real human being, if you understand.

"But Mac went to pieces himself. He would be off on a bender for weeks at a time and scarcely get over the shakes before he'd start on another. Finally he got so bad that Brandon sent him out to a hunting camp on the river with a fine old trapper named Sam Faxson. Great old character, Sam. Brandon figured—and it seemed reasonable—that Sam could keep Mac away from the booze, you see. He was there a week or so, tapering off gradually, seeing nobody but Sam. Brandon was working away like a nailer, buying up a lot of stuff for himself, probably figuring that if McManus didn't straighten up he'd operate on his own hook. McManus had this Hoot Owl stuff cinched in his own name before he went bad.

"Well, one night we were in the middle of a three-day blizzard and Sam Faxson stumbled into Don Stuart's shanty on the edge of town, shot through the arm and frozen so badly that he died the next afternoon. Don's story"—voice slowing and a finger raised for emphasis—"was that Faxson told him McManus had gotten out of booze and turned ugly and that when he—Sam—tried to prevent him from starting for town after more whisky he went wild at Sam and shot him. He was hit in the arm, had to have help and in trying to get it suffered more exposure than any man could stand.

"Well, that caused a great stir! A party hit straight out for the camp and couldn't find hide nor hair nor sign of Mac. A couple of old trailers agreed that somebody had gone down to the river below the camp the night that Faxson was shot. The Mad Woman is swift at that bend and never freezes. The trail seemed to go right to the edge of the stream and the accepted theory was that McManus, realizing what he had done, had drowned himself. The fact that nothing has ever been seen or heard of him since lends strength to that supposition.

"An inquest was held, on Don's story a warrant was issued for McManus and so it stands, after all these years."

He rubbed his face.

"Now, that's that. The thing that's stuck in the minds of some of us is this: that McManus, under no circumstances, ever showed a quarrelsome streak, let alone giving evidence of being a killer. However,"—with a shrug—"he'd been on a long, long drunk."

He paused and shook his head. Then went on:

"Brandon carried on the partnership and his own interests, buying his own logs in the name of the firm and sawing them in the mill. He bought right and left, left and right. As soon as another man would plan to operate here Brandon would try to buy him out. If he couldn't buy at his own figure things commenced to happen to that man. . . . Duval has figured in a good many failures!"—nodding profoundly. "The man seemed to be obsessed by the idea that he must own all the timber in the locality.

"Finally it came down to this one piece, owned by McManus, which was the last which Brandon wanted and that he didn't have. He commenced to jockey so he could get title to it. Homer Campbell was judge of probate then. Nick went to Homer with a petition to have McManus declared legally dead so the estate could be probated and this timber disposed of. Mac had been gone seven years and such an arrangement could be brought about according to law, you see.

"However, Homer got the notion that Brandon was a mite too anxious, satisfied himself that while Brandon was getting rich personally the partnership was in a bad way, and decided that he wouldn't be a party to any scheme to rob an [illegible] that ended Homer politically. Nick put up another candidate and trimmed us properly and we knew that when the new judge came in he'd take orders from Brandon. So Homer surprised Brandon by reopening the McManus matter, declaring him legally dead and appointed me administrator for the estate and guardian for Dawn.

"Nick was pretty mad, all right! I commenced to pry into things, found that the partnership books certainly did look bad and decided to take a licking there and sold out the McManus interest. We were stung, all right, but there was no use squealing. I took the money, paid up the mortgage on the Hoot Owl, sent Dawn off to school in the East where she wouldn't be known as the daughter of a murderer—a cloud which was misshaping her whole life—and tried to make some money for her.

"That's how it stands to date. I've failed. We're on the ragged edge; the estate right now, considering the location of this timber in Brandon's territory as a liability, is insolvent. Dawn's had to come back here to live where she's unhappy and what's ahead of us depends on you."

Ben gave a wry smile.

"This killing thing, now. . . . Did anybody ever suspect Brandon?"

Able shook his head.

"Faxson and McManus were alone. And McManus disappeared. I know what's in your mind, Ben. But there was nothing to support the suspicion."

He sat silent a moment and then asked drily:

"Haven't read old Don's letter yet?"

"Not yet. I'm superstitious. I don't like to use all I've got until I have to; don't even like to look at my hole card."

"Well, it's your message, that letter; your property," Able said. "And the nut's going to get tougher fast. I hate to think what'd happen if we had to stop sawing for two or three days right now. A shutdown certainly would put temper into the shell of the nut, Ben, and—"

He stopped short. Into the stillness of the room came a muffled shout. Ben started to his feet and Able turned a bewildered face in the direction of the sound.

"Fire!" a wailing voice cried. "Th' mill's on fire!"

"Of the two, Denny was the more popular. He was friendly, charitable, had a heart as big as a camp stove and as soft as a sponge. He'd go the route for anybody. Why—probably you've never even heard this—when old Don Stuart rimmed the company it was McManus who stood in the way of prosecution. Don had cruised and bought a lot of stuff for them. He always had been a drinker himself and on one spree got into some sort of mess and crooked the company out of three or four hundred dollars. Enough, anyhow, to let himself in for a long term in the penitentiary if they'd pushed it. Brandon wanted to prosecute, all right, but McManus stood up for Don. That was typical of the man: friendly, forgiving, a real human being, if you understand.

"But Mac went to pieces himself. He would be off on a bender for weeks at a time and scarcely get over the shakes before he'd start on another. Finally he got so bad that Brandon sent him out to a hunting camp on the river with a fine old trapper named Sam Faxson. Great old character, Sam. Brandon figured—and it seemed reasonable—that Sam could keep Mac away from the booze, you see. He was there a week or so, tapering off gradually, seeing nobody but Sam. Brandon was working away like a nailer, buying up a lot of stuff for himself, probably figuring that if McManus didn't straighten up he'd operate on his own hook. McManus had this Hoot Owl stuff cinched in his own name before he went bad.

"Well, one night we were in the middle of a three-day blizzard and Sam Faxson stumbled into Don Stuart's shanty on the edge of town, shot through the arm and frozen so badly that he died the next afternoon. Don's story"—voice slowing and a finger raised for emphasis—"was that Faxson told him McManus had gotten out of booze and turned ugly and that when he—Sam—tried to prevent him from starting for town after more whisky he went wild at Sam and shot him. He was hit in the arm, had to have help and in trying to get it suffered more exposure than any man could stand.

"Well, that caused a great stir! A party hit straight out for the camp and couldn't find hide nor hair nor sign of Mac. A couple of old trailers agreed that somebody had gone down to the river below the camp the night that Faxson was shot. The Mad Woman is swift at that bend and never freezes. The trail seemed to go right to the edge of the stream and the accepted theory was that McManus, realizing what he had done, had drowned himself. The fact that nothing has ever been seen or heard of him since lends strength to that supposition.

"An inquest was held, on Don's story a warrant was issued for McManus and so it stands, after all these years."

He rubbed his face.

"Now, that's that. The thing that's stuck in the minds of some of us is this: that McManus, under no circumstances, ever showed a quarrelsome streak, let alone giving evidence of being a killer. However,"—with a shrug—"he'd been on a long, long drunk."

He paused and shook his head. Then went on:

"Brandon carried on the partnership and his own interests, buying his own logs in the name of the firm and sawing them in the mill. He bought right and left, left and right. As soon as another man would plan to operate here Brandon would try to buy him out. If he couldn't buy at his own figure things commenced to happen to that man. . . . Duval has figured in a good many failures!"—nodding profoundly. "The man seemed to be obsessed by the idea that he must own all the timber in the locality.

"Finally it came down to this one piece, owned by McManus, which was the last which Brandon wanted and that he didn't have. He commenced to jockey so he could get title to it. Homer Campbell was judge of probate then. Nick went to Homer with a petition to have McManus declared legally dead so the estate could be probated and this timber disposed of. Mac had been gone seven years and such an arrangement could be brought about according to law, you see.

"However, Homer got the notion that Brandon was a mite too anxious, satisfied himself that while Brandon was getting rich personally the partnership was in a bad way, and decided that he wouldn't be a party to any scheme to rob an

"That ended Homer politically. Nick put up another candidate and trimmed us properly and we knew that when the new judge came in he'd take orders from Brandon. So Homer surprised Brandon by reopening the McManus matter, declaring him legally dead and appointed me administrator for the estate and guardian for Dawn.

"Nick was pretty mad, all right! I commenced to pry into things, found that the partnership books certainly did look bad and decided to take a licking there and sold out the McManus interest. We were stung, all right, but there was no use squealing. I took the money, paid up the mortgage on the Hoot Owl, sent Dawn off to school in the East where she wouldn't be known as the daughter of a murderer—a cloud which was misshaping her whole life—and tried to make some money for her.

"That's how it stands to date. I've failed. We're on the ragged edge; the estate right now, considering the location of this timber in Brandon's territory as a liability, is insolvent. Dawn's had to come back here to live where she's unhappy and what's ahead of us depends on you."

Ben gave a wry smile.

"This killing thing, now. . . . Did anybody ever suspect Brandon?"

Able shook his head.

"Faxson and McManus were alone. And McManus disappeared. I know what's in your mind, Ben. But there was nothing to support the suspicion."

He sat silent a moment and then asked drily:

"Haven't read old Don's letter yet?"

"Not yet. I'm superstitious. I don't like to use all I've got until I have to; don't even like to look at my hole card."

"Well, it's your message, that letter; your property," Able said. "And the nut's going to get tougher fast. I hate to think what'd happen if we had to stop sawing for two or three days right now. A shutdown certainly would put temper into the shell of the nut, Ben, and—"

He stopped short. Into the stillness of the room came a muffled shout. Ben started to his feet and Able turned a bewildered face in the direction of the sound.

"Fire!" a wailing voice cried. "Th' mill's on fire!"

Co-op. Cr'mry Board Upheld At Meet Sat.

Vote Nearly Two to One to Let Creamery Board Sell Building If Seen Fit

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Thief River Falls Cooperative Creamery held Saturday a vote revealed that the stockholders of the organization were strongly in favor of any action that the board of directors might take in regard to the selling of the biulding to the Land O' Lakes.

The meeting was called by that group of stockholders who were opposed to the selling of a building to the Land O' Lakes and which the board of directors indicated they were about to do The directors of the organization felt that the building they now occupy was too large for the amount of business done by the concern and that by selling the building to the Land O' Lakes and building a smaller building for their own use a large sum of money could be saved each year on overhead expenses. When this question came to a vote the result was 70 to 47 in favor of abiding by the decision of the creamery board of directors.

Municipal Judges To Convene in St. Paul

Municipal Judges from throughout the state will hold a convention in St. Paul Friday, according to word received by Judge Bishop Wednesday. The meeting is called for ten o'clock Friday morning at the St. Francis Hotel in St. Paul. Judge Bishop stated that he would attend if it were possible for him to get away at that time.

Term of Court Terminated Wed.

The February term of court which convened here Feb. 25 adjourned yesterday and the jurors were discharged. Nearly all court matters on the calendar were cleaned up by Tuesday evening with only one important jury case being laid over until the October term of court. The appeal of C. Fiterman on the condemnation of his property was continued because Mr. Fiterman was in a hospital and was unable to appear in court when his case came up.

In the McGrath appeal on the condemnation of their properties lying between the Auditorium and the Fiterman building the jury allowed the appellant $1600 for the condemned parcel over the $840 which the appraiser set as a fair price for the property. The jury went out at 5:30 p. m. Tuesday and returned the verdict at 8:40 p. m. the same day.

Judge Brattland announced that he would be in the city Tuesday, March 26, to try the court cases that are on the calendar which were not cleaned up at this term of court.

No State Feed Loans Will Be Granted in Co.

Set-up of Administration of Loans Would be Very Expensive

St. Paul—Preparations for financing seed loans under the $2,000,000 seed loan bill passed by the Minnesota legislature last Saturday, are under way throughout the state this week. Copies of the act and regulations for administering the fund have been forwarded to all county auditors and county board chairmen by Stafford King, state auditor, who is designated by the law as administrator of the state seed loan fund. Application blanks will be distributed to the counties in a few days.

County boards are urged to meet immediately and arrange for financing. The act provides that the county boards must purchase and distribute the seed. They are authorized to issue and sell bonds or borrow upon county warrants to obtain funds.

Inquiry made at the office of H. L. Fowler, county auditor, revealed that Pennington county would not make application nor attempt to make any loans under the State Seed Loan set-up. Mr. Fowler stated that because of the expense that would be connected with setting up an office here would be far too great for the amount of benefit that would be derived. The Federal seed loans should take care of all cases in Pennington county, which will be few in number because of good crops enjoyed by the farmers in this county last summer, the county auditor said.

LAND O'LAKES HAS BIG GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

Total weight of all merchandise exceeded 251,900,0000 pounds, Mr. Johnson said.

Describes Merchandise

Merchandising of Land O' Lakes products was described by H. F. Meyer, director of sales. Another speaker was Dean W. C. Coffey of the university farm school. Most of the session was devoted to business sessions and problems of the co-operative.

Gov. Olson was the principal speaker at the Thursday afternoon session. He told delegates that co-operative production and consumption of agricultural commodities would create a more equitable distribution of American wealth.

Serve 18,000 Sandwiches

More than 5,000 delegates to the 14th annual convention attended noonday luncheon in one of the buildings of the plant at 2201 Kenwood St. ne, Mineapolis, on Thursday. It was estimated that the cost of the luncheon was about $3,500 with 18,000 cheese and ham sandwiches; 500 gallons of coffee; 100 gallons of buttermilk, 200 gallons of fruit gelatin; 10,000 cups of ice cream and 8,500 slices of cake.

John Brandt, president reported that $52,000 in dividends will be paid to members June 30. These, he said, were slightly higher than in 1933.

John Brandt, president, and all other officers of the co-operative, were re-elected for the coming year. Other officers are: Archie J. Brovold, Ettrick, Wis., first vice president; Stuart McLeod, Thief River Falls, second vice president; Frank W. White, Marshall, secretary, and Emil G. Johnson, Minneapolis, treasurer.

The new directors named Friday are M. H. Mauritson, Shelly, and A. J. Sandness, La Moure, N. D.

License Corrections Bring State $20,014

In the first two months of 1935 the state highway patrol was instrumental in collecting $20,014 in motor vehicle license corrections, according to a highway department bulletin. In adition, the patrol was instrumental in collecting $3,262 in fines, or a total of $23,276. License corrections were mostly on trucks. More than 24,000 motorists were warned for various traffic violations, and 255 were arrested. Patrolmen drove 555,022 miles in the two months.

Review of the Legislature

By A. I. Harris

Remedial Legislative Measures Slumber While Reactionaries Do Political Acts

With only about four weeks left to go, the reactionary controlled legislature, absorbed in political investigations and political maneuvers. now finds itself in a very embarassing and awkward position for its failure to pass remedial legislation demanded by the people.

The strategy of the conservatives is not working out as planned. It was hoped to divert the minds of the people from badly needed legislation through the investigation smokescreen and, at the same time, set the groundwork to "defeat Olson in 1936." Inability of the investigating committee to get results is ascribed by reactionaries as the reason why public attention has been focused on the business of legislation.

The visits to the Capitol of the organized farmers and the unemployed, together with big stacks of letters from the folks back home, have brought the conservatives to the realization that the people are watching them. Even reactionary newspapers, driven by the force of public opinion, are beginning to ask editorially why the Legislature is not accomplishing anything. All this has made the reactionaries in both houses nervous and almost panicky.

The record is clear and not very complimentary. Under threats of Governor Olson, the Legislature was compelled to pass the $10,000,000 Relief Bill, the $1,00,000 Drouth Relief Bill, the $2,000,000 Seed Bill, and the Mortgage Moratorium Extension Bill. Incidentally, the mortgage moratorium law was not up to the standard requested by the Governor, who is in favor of permitting farmers to pay their mortgage debts in kind.

In the passage of these bill the venerable old guard fumed and fretted and acted like spanked children. They did something which they did not want to do. But despite the fact that we are passing through the most critical and most precarious economic period in our state and national history, the above constitutes virtually the entire legislative accomplishments to date.

The political investigations, which have consumed the principal attention of the reactionaries, have degenerated into the worst sort of dirt-finding expeditions, with stool pigeons scouring the countryside and snooping about state offices, grasping and running down every rumor of scandal that they can find. Even Republican members of the Legislature have become nauseated.

The Committee held only one session last week. The reason given was that Attorney Mouer was ill. It is known, however, that the Carley army of stool pigeons and snoopers were rather short in their load of dirt, making the holding of any hearings unwise from the Carley point of view. It is difficult at this time to see how the committee can possibly finish its assignment since the investigation has not been completed of a single state department, and all available funds have either been exhausted or hypothecated. There is talk of making this an interim committee, which would necessitate appropriation of more money. The Republican leadership of the state is behind such a move as it would give them a permanent campaign committee, supplied with taxpayers' money.

Legislation in the intrests of corporate groups and powerful interests was not forgotten in the investigation excitement. The tax limitation bill, which is the forerunner of a sales tax, was favorably voted out of committee, and much work has been done to pave the way for ultimate sales tax legislation. Were it not for the known stand of the Governor in opposition to this tax on poverty, a asles tax would by this time have been passed.

The investigating orgie also didn't take the edge off the alertness of the reactionaries to kill progressive measures. Stockwell's hydro-electric plant bill was killed.

The bill lowering the legal interest rate on contracts was passed by the house by a small margin only after amendments from the floor had substantially weakened its provisions.

But what of progressive legislation? It has been given dope to bring about the sleeping sickness. All methods known to legislators are employed to bring about delay until the measures die natural—if not unnatural—death. Delay until the closing days of a session is a sure-method kill.

Bills to provide an adequate old age pension; unemployment insurance; an increase in inheritance taxes in the upper brackets increase in chain store taxes; increase in the gross earnings taxes on railroads and establishment of a Minnesota bank are being held up in various conservative-controlled committees. A measure which would enable the state to acquire and operate public utilities is gathering dust in a committee room.

An important bill making it imposible for persons to make gifts and gratuities to avoid payment of legitimate taxes has found no enthusiastic response with the Senate tax committee. The tax receivership bill, aimed at the big fellow who is willfully tax delinquent, introduced on January 12 in the Senate, is a step-child to the conservative members of the Senate tax committee. This bill is aimed particularly at mining companies, which have been withholding payment of their taxes. Under this bill, in such contingencies. the court can declare a receivership, making the county treasurer receiver, with power to collect the taxes due.

The power extension bill, which would enable municipalities that own their own light and power plants, to extend their lines beyond the present 25-mile limit and sell current to individuals or other municipalities, was killed in the house. Threatened by a denunciatory minority report, the bill was called back to committee where it will undergo amendments to make it innocuous.

The train limit bill, which would increase safety not only to the worker but to the public by limiting the length of freight trains to 7 cars, is now in the coma stage. The interests of the railroads apparently mean more to the reactionaries than the interest of the public.

Social legislation is passe as far as the reactionaries are concerned. A piece of social legislation important to the women of Minnesota, having the endorsement of the Minnesota Federation of labor, Y. W. C. A. groups, the Industrial Commission, provides for a nine-hour day and a 48-hour week for the majority of women workers in the state, excluding those in domestic service, nursing seasonal industries, and women holding executive positions. This bill was introduced in the House on January 25 and was referred to the committee on public welfare, where it now reposes. Evidently the name of this committee is a misnomer.

The Conservation Commission has several bills pending designed to put teeth into the conservation laws, but these bills are also jeopardized. Most important of these bills is one providing a water code for the state and another for classification of tax delinquent lands and zoning for future use. Depite the fact that Minnesota leads the states in water resources, it is notoriously one of the most backward states as regards water conservation laws.

Faced with this condition, liberal legislators are preparing to make a final drive to force action on progressive bills. Measures will be recalled from the committees and voted on by the houses as a whole. Some bitter struggles are certain.

By some unexplained oversight, control of the House committee on telephones and telegraph was given to the liberals, who made the most of their opportunity and recommended to pass three important bills relating to telephone companies. The bills provide for increasing the gross earnings tax, for placing the burden of proof in rate investigations on the company and not on the investigating body where it rests at present, and for a comprehensive system of investigating and supervising rate charges.

SHARP BREAK IN HOG MART

Dollar Lower Than Best Time Last week—Cattle Also Slump Badly—Steers About 50c Off for Week.

South St. Paul, Minn., March 20, 1935: (U. S. D. A.). Hog prices broke 25-35c today, with prices now about $1.00 lower than last week's best time. Better 190-300 ℔. cleared at $8.60-8.76, most 150-190½. $8.00-8.60, killer pigs $6.75-7.75, good sows $7.90-8.00.

Cattle have also slumped badly this week, with slaughter steers mostly 50c lower, she stock weak to 25c or more lower. Good grain fed steers were held at $10.00-12.00 today, plainer kinds selling from $7.00-9.75, inbetween and lower grade heifers $5.50-9.00, beef cows $4.50-7.00, cutters $3.25-4.00, sausage bulls $5.00 and down. Medium to choice vealers brought $5.50-8.50, cull and common $3.00-5.00.

Most stocker and feeder cattle cashed at $5.50-7.00 with best feeders held around $8.00.

Most good native and fed western lambs sold Tuesday at $7.75 down, medium to good grades $7.50 and down, cull and common $5.00-6.00, native ewes $3.00-4.50. Several loads of desirable lambs were still unsold late today, these being held at $7.75-8.00

Jobless Stage Militant Demonstration at Capitol

JOBLESS DEM —

St. Paul, (MC)—Streaming into the chamber of the State House of Representatives, the Minnesota convention for Unemployment Insurance "took possession" peacefully and the leaders, Harry Mayville and Walter Frank, harangued those legislators present for several hours on Mar. 11, after three days of convening and a day of marching through the streets, largely under Communist leadership.

Mayville included in his excited remarks: "It is said that we are a gang coming here to tear the doors off the capitol, but when we do come to take possession we will leave the doors on and use this building for the majority of the people."

Frank said: "Speaking of Senator Rockne, conservative, "I don't see how nature can crowd so little intelligence into the skull of a human being," and qualifying by saying "men of Rockne's type."

Mayville also used the "club" of a general strike, sayin one may be called on May Day, if action is not taken on the Lundeen State unemployment insurance bill.

CO-OP CAFE OPENS IN MINNESOTA CAPITOL

St. Paul, Minn.—State employees and other patrons including some members of the state legislature are now operating a consumers' co-operative cafe in the capitol building in St. Paul, Minn. Higher wages for employees and dividends to patrons at the end of the year are promised at the first step since the Gopher cafe has been relinquished by its private owner and has become a co-operative institution.

The co-operative management will raise the pay of the employees to a living wage standard and the 20 employees in the cafe will be retained by the consumer co-operative.

State employees and others purchased shares in the enterprise to provide capital for the purchase of new equipment and the income surplus for the year above the cost of operation and maintenance will be returned to the consumers in the form of patronage dividends.

LEGAL NOTICES

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State land purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

E. V. WILLARD,
Commissioner of Conservation.

Co-op. Cr'mry Board Upheld At Meet Sat.

Vote Nearly Two to One to Let Creamery Board Sell Building If Seen Fit

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Thief River Falls Cooperative Creamery held Saturday a vote revealed that the stockholders of the organization were strongly in favor of any action that the board of directors might take in regard to the selling of the biulding to the Land O' Lakes.

The meeting was called by that group of stockholders who were opposed to the selling of a building to the Land O' Lakes and which the board of directors indicated they were about to do. The directors of the organization felt that the building they now occupy was too large for the amount of business done by the concern and that by selling the building to the Land O' Lakes and building a smaller building for their own use a large sum of money could be saved each year on overhead expenses. When this question came to a vote the result was 70 to 47 in favor of abiding by the decision of the creamery board of directors.

Municipal Judges To Convene in St. Paul

Municipal Judges from throughout the state will hold a convention in St. Paul Friday, according to word received by Judge Bishop Wednesday. The meeting is called for ten o'clock Friday morning at the St. Francis Hotel in St. Paul. Judge Bishop stated that he would attend if it were possible for him to get away at that time.

Term of Court Terminated Wed.

The February term of court which convened here Feb. 25 adjourned yesterday and the jurors were discharged. Nearly all court matters on the calendar were cleaned up by Tuesday evening with only one important jury case being laid over until the October term of court. The appeal of C. Fiterman on the condemnation of his property was continued because Mr. Fiterman was in a hospital and was unable to appear in court when his case came up.

In the McGrath appeal on the condemnation of their properties lying between the Auditorium and the Fiterman building the jury allowed the appellant $1600 for the condemned parcel over the $840 which the appraiser set as a fair price for the property. The jury went out at 5:30 p. m. Tuesday and returned the verdict at 8:40 p. m. the same day.

Judge Brattland announced that he would be in the city Tuesday, March 26, to try the court cases that are on the calendar which were not cleaned up at this term of court.

MARRIAGE

Mr. Andy Olson and Miss Petra Olson, both of Erie, Minn., were united in marriage at the Trinity parsonage by Rev. Fjelstad, Monday, Mar. 18, at four p. m. The young couple will make their home at Hatton, N. D., where Mr. Olson will be employed.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carrie Funnesdahl; one son, John A.; and one daughter, Anna M. one brother, Henning Funnesdahl; and three sisters, Ellen, Sophie and Johanna, all living in Norway. His parents and two brothers and one sister preceded him in death. Interment was made in the Norden cemetery.

No State Feed Loans Will Be Granted in Co.

Set-up of Administration of Loans Would be Very Expensive

St. Paul—Preparations for financing seed loans under the $2,000,000 seed loan bill passed by the Minnesota legislature last Saturday, are under way throughout the state this week. Copies of the act and regulations for administering the fund have been forwarded to all county auditors and county board chairmen by Stafford King, state auditor, who is designated by the law as administrator of the state seed loan fund. Application blanks will be distributed to the counties in a few days.

County boards are urged to meet immediately and arrange for financing. The act provides that the county boards must purchase and distribute the seed. They are authorized to issue and sell bonds or borrow upon county warrants to obtain funds.

Inquiry made at the office of H. L. Fowler, county auditor, revealed that Pennington county would not make application nor attempt to make any loans under the State Seed Loan set-up. Mr. Fowler stated that because of the expense that would be connected with setting up an office here would be far too great for the amount of benefit that would be derived. The Federal seed loans should take care of all cases in Pennington county, which will be few in number because of good crops enjoyed by the farmers in this county last summer, the county auditor said.

LAND O'LAKES HAS BIG GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

Total weight of all merchandise exceeded 251,900,0000 pounds, Mr. Johnson said.

Describes Merchandise

Merchandising of Land O' Lakes products was described by H. F. Meyer, director of sales. Another speaker was Dean W. C. Coffey of the university farm school. Most of the session was devoted to business sessions and problems of the co-operative.

Gov. Olson was the principal speaker at the Thursday afternoon session. He told delegates that co-operative production and consumption of agricultural commodities would create a more equitable distribution of American wealth.

Serve 18,000 Sandwiches

More than 5,000 delegates to the 14th annual convention attended noonday luncheon in one of the buildings of the plant at 2201 Kenwood St. ne, Mineapolis, on Thursday. It was estimated that the cost of the luncheon was about $3,500 with 18,000 cheese and ham sandwiches; 500 gallons of coffee; 100 gallons of buttermilk, 200 gallons of fruit gelatin; 10,000 cups of ice cream and 8,500 slices of cake.

John Brandt, president, reported that $52,000 in dividends will be paid to members June 30. These, he said, were slightly higher than in 1933.

John Brandt, president, and all other officers of the co-operative, were re-elected for the coming year. Other officers are: Archie J. Brovold, Ettrick, Wis., first vice president; Stuart McLeod, Thief River Falls, second vice president; Frank W. White, Marshall, secretary, and Emil G. Johnson, Minneapolis, treasurer.

The new directors named Friday are M. H. Mauritson, Shelly, and A. J. Sandness, La Moure, N. D.

License Corrections Bring State $20,014

In the first two months of 1935 the state highway patrol was instrumental in collecting $20,014 in motor vehicle license corrections, according to a highway department bulletin. In adition, the patrol was instrumental in collecting $3,262 in fines, or a total of $23,276. License corrections were mostly on trucks. More than 24,000 motorists were warned for various traffic violations, and 255 were arrested. Patrolmen drove 555,022 miles in the two months.

Review of the Legislature

By A. I. Harris

Remedial Legislative Measures Slumber While Reactionaries Do Political Acts

With only about four weeks left to go, the reactionary controlled legislature, absorbed in political investigations and political maneuvers, now finds itself in a very embarassing and awkward position for its failure to pass remedial legislation demanded by the people.

The strategy of the conservatives is not working out as planned. It was hoped to divert the minds of the people from badly needed legislation through the investigation smokescreen and, at the same time, set the groundwork to "defeat Olson in 1936." Inability of the investigating committee to get results is ascribed by reactionaries as the reason why public attention has been focused on the business of legislation.

The visits to the Capitol of the organized farmers and the unemployed, together with big stacks of letters from the folks back home, have brought the conservatives to the realization that the people are watching them. Even reactionary newspapers, driven by the force of public opinion, are beginning to ask editorially why the Legislature is not accomplishing anything. All this has made the reactionaries in both houses nervous and almost panicky.

The record is clear and not very complimentary. Under threats of Governor Olson, the Legislature was compelled to pass the $10,000,000 Relief Bill, the $1,00,000 Drouth Relief Bill, the $2,000,000 Seed Bill, and the Mortgage Moratorium Extension Bill. Incidentally, the mortgage moratorium law was not up to the standard requested by the Governor, who is in favor of permitting farmers to pay their mortgage debts in kind.

In the pasage of these bill the venerable old guard fumed and fretted and acted like spanked children. They did something which they did not want to do. But despite the fact that we are passing through the most critical and most precarious economic period in our state and national history, the above constitutes virtually the entire legislative accomplishments to date.

The political investigations, which have consumed the principal attention of the reactionaries, have degenerated into the worst sort of dirt-finding expeditions, with stool pigeons scouring the countryside and snooping about state offices, grasping and running down every rumor of scandal that they can find. Even Republican members of the Legislature have become nauseated.

The Committee held only one session last week. The reason given was that Attorney Mouer was ill. It is known, however, that the Carley army of stool pigeons and snoopers were rather short in their load of dirt, making the holding of any hearings unwise from the Carley point of view. It is difficult at this time to see how the committee can possibly finish its assignment since the investigation has not been completed of a single state department, and all available funds have either been exhausted or hypothecated. There is talk of making this an interim committee, which would necessitate appropriation of more money. The Republican leadership of the state is behind such a move as it would give them a permanent campaign committee, supplied with taxpayers' money.

Legislation in the intrests of corporate groups and powerful interests was not forgotten in the investigation excitement. The tax limitation bill, which is the forerunner of a sales tax, was favorably voted out of committee, and much work has been done to pave the way for ultimate sales tax legislation. Were it not for the known stand of the Governor in opposition to this tax on poverty, a asles tax would by this time have been passed.

The investigating orgie also didn't take the edge off the alertness of the reactionaries to kill progressive measures. Stockwell's hydro-electric plant bill was killed.

The bill lowering the legal interest rate on contracts was passed by the house by a small margin only after amendments from the floor had substantially weakened its provisions.

But what of progressive legislation? It has been given dope to bring about the sleeping sickness. All methods known to legislators are employed to bring about delay until the measures die natural—if not unnatural—death. Delay until the closing days of a session is a sure-method kill.

Bills to provide an adequate old age pension; unemployment insurance; an increase in inheritance taxes in the upper brackets; increase in chain store taxes; increase in the gross earnings taxes on railroads and establishment of a Minnesota bank are being held up in various conservative-controlled committees. A measure which would enable the state to acquire and operate public utilities is gathering dust in a committee room.

An important bill making it impossible for persons to make gifts and gratuities to avoid payment of legitimate taxes has found no enthusiastic response with the Senate tax committee. The tax receivership bill, aimed at the big fellow who is willfully tax delinquent, introduced on January 12 in the Senate, is a step-child to the conservative members of the Senate tax committee. This bill is aimed particularly at mining companies, which have been withholding payment of their taxes. Under this bill, in such contingencies, the court can declare a receivership, making the county treasurer receiver, with power to collect the taxes due.

The power extension bill, which would enable municipalities that own their own light and power plants, to extend their lines beyond the present 25-mile limit and sell current to individuals or other municipalities, was killed in the house. Threatened by a denunciatory minority report, the bill was called back to committee where it will undergo amendments to make it innocuous.

The train limit bill, which would increase safety not only to the worker but to the public by limiting the length of freight trains to 7 cars, is now in the coma stage. The interests of the railroads apparently mean more to the reactionaries than the interest of the public.

Social legislation is passe as far as the reactionaries are concerned. A piece of social legislation important to the women of Minnesota, having the endorsement of the Minnesota Federation of labor, Y. W. C. A. groups, the Industrial Commission, provides for a nine-hour day and a 48-hour week for the majority of women workers in the state, excluding those in domestic service, nursing, seasonal industries, and women holding executive positions. This bill was introduced in the House on January 25 and was referred to the committee on public welfare, where it now reposes. Evidently the name of this committee is a misnomer.

The Conservation commission has several bills pending designed to put teeth into the conservation laws, but these bills are also jeopardized. Most important of these bills is one providing a water code for the state and another for classification of tax delinquent lands and zoning for future use. Depite the fact that Minnesota leads the states in water resources, it is notoriously one of the most backward states as regards water conservation laws.

Faced with this condition, liberal legislators are preparing to make a final drive to force action on progressive bills. Measures will be recalled from the committees and voted on by the houses as a whole. Some bitter struggles are certain.

By some unexplained oversight, control of the House committee on telephones and telegraph was given to the liberals, who made the most of their opportunity and recommended to pass three important bills relating to telephone companies. The bills provide for increasing the gross earnings tax, for placing the burden of proof in rate investigations on the company and not on the investigating body where it rests at present, and for a comprehensive system of investigating and supervising rate charges.

SHARP BREAK IN HOG MART

Dollar Lower Than Best Time Last week—Cattle Also Slump Badly—Steers About 50c Off for Week.

South St. Paul, Minn., March 20, 1935: (U. S. D. A.). Hog prices broke 25-35c today, with prices now about $1.00 lower than last week's best time. Better 190-300 lb. cleared at $8.60-8.76, most 150-190½. $8.00-8.60, killer pigs $6.75-7.75, good sows $7.90-8.00.

Cattle have also slumped badly this week, with slaughter steers mostly 50c lower, she stock weak to 25c or more lower. Good grain fed steers were held at $10.00-12.00 today, plainer kinds selling from $7.00-9.75, inbetween and lower grade heifers $5.50-9.00, beef cows $4.50-7.00, cutters $3.25-4.00, sausage bulls $5.00 and down. Medium to choice vealers brought $5.50-8.50, cull and common $3.00-5.00.

Most stocker and feeder cattle cashed at $5.50-7.00 with best feeders held around $8.00.

Most good native and fed western lambs sold Tuesday at $7.75 down, medium to good grades $7.50 and down, cull and common $5.00-6.00, native ewes $3.00-4.50. Several loads of desirable lambs were still unsold late today, these being held at $7.75-8.00

JOBLESS DEM —

St. Paul, (MC)—Streaming into the chamber of the State House of Representatives, the Minnesota convention for Unemployment Insurance "took possession" peacefully and the leaders, Harry Mayville and Walter Frank, harangued those legislators present for several hours on Mar. 11, after three days of convening and a day of marching through the streets, largely under Communist leadership.

Mayville included in his excited remarks: "It is said that we are a gang coming here to tear the doors off the capitol, but when we do come to take possession we will leave the doors on and use this building for the majority of the people."

Frank said: "Speaking of Senator Rockne, conservative, "I don't see how nature can crowd so little intelligence into the skull of a human being," and qualifying by saying "men of Rockne's type."

Mayville also used the "club" of a general strike, sayin one may be called on May Day, if action is not taken on the Lundeen State unemployment insurance bill.

CO-OP CAFE OPENS IN MINNESOTA CAPITOL

St. Paul, Minn.—State employees and other patrons including some members of the state legislature are now operating a consumers' co-operative cafe in the capitol building in St. Paul, Minn. Higher wages for employees and dividends to patrons at the end of the year are promised at the first step since the Gopher cafe has been relinquished by its private owner and has become a co-operative institution.

The co-operative management will raise the pay of the employees to a living wage standard and the 20 employees in the cafe will be retained by the consumer cooperative.

State employees and others purchased shares in the enterprise to provide capital for the purchase of new equipment, and the income surplus for the year above the cost of operation and maintenance will be returned to the consumers in the form of patronage dividends.

LEGAL NOTICES

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State land purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

E. V. WILLARD,
Commissioner of Conservation.

HOUSE PASSES PATMAN BONUS BILL 318 TO 90

Administration Will Try to Stop It In Senate Is Report

SUPPORTED BY F.-L.'S

Buckler Speaks on Behalf of Measure Wednes. Afternoon

Washington, D. C.—After four days of speech making and "jockeying" for advantage between the forces of the Vinson Bill group, H. R. 3896 and the H. R. 1 supporters, the House of Representatives passed the Patman "bonus" bill, by a vote of 318 to 90 on Friday afternoon.

The margin of victory is the largest in the history of Congress and gives rise to hopes of successful passage in the Senate. However it may be a long struggle there, as the administration leaders will attempt to block passage in order to save President Roosevelt the politically embarassing veto which he promised the bill if it reached him. The Patman bill passed the House in June, 1932, by a vote of 211 to 176, and in March 1934 by a vote of 295 to 125, but it was twice defeated in the Senate.

James E. Van Zandt, Commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which organization has led the fight for the Patman measure, declared following the final vote, "The bill will now go to the Senate for action. We hope that all other veterans organizations will now join us in presenting a united front to the Senate for support of this bill."

The real battle came on a motion to substitute the Patman Bill for the Vinson measure which has been reported out by the Ways and Means committee. The motion carried, first by a standing vote of 183 to 142, later by a teller vote of 180 to 157 and finally by a roll call vote of 202 to 191. The final test and death blow to the Vinson bill came on the motion to recommit the Patman bill to the committee, which lost by a vote of 204 to 207.

On final passage by the vote of 318 to 90, the Farmer-Laborites, Buckler, Kvale and Lundeen and the seven Wisconsin Progressives voted solidly for the bonus payment while the two major parties

DATA ON CORN HOG PLAN SENT TO REVIEW BD.

April 1 is Final Date That County May Accept Applications

With the work of appraising cornyields and counting hogs almost completed by the Pennington county Corn-Hog Production Control Association, the county allotment committee is now assembling application data to submit to the State Corn-Hog Review Board at University Farm, St. Paul, announces R. M. Douglass, the county agent.

The approval of this data by the State Review Board Mr. Douglass says, will prepare the way for the final preparation and signing of contracts, which will then be started Washington-ward for final approval and payment of benefits to producers.

Before the contracts may be sent to Washington, however, they must undergo a preliminary audit by the State Review Board, which because of its more convenient location with respect to the corn and hog producing counties, and greater familiarity with the program in Minnesota, should be able to do this work much more quickly than the Washington office of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Other factors that will speed handling of the 1935 contracts, according to Mr. Douglass, are the continued use, by the majority of 1934 signers of corn and hog production bases established for them last year; the use of simplified contract forms, and the experience gained by local, state and national corn-hog officials in administering the 1934 program, which in general, is similar to that of 1935.

April 1 is the final date on which the county allotment committee may accept applications for contracts and farmers who have not already signed applications are urged to do so at once. To date, a total of 80 farmers have applied.

Civil Service Announces Exam. for Forest Service

The manager of the 8th Civil Service district announced the following open competitive examination early this week: Forest and Field Clerk. Full information regarding requirements may be had at the local postoffice from G. Legvold, secretary, Board of United States Civil Service Examiners. Junior Class Play at Auditorium Fri. Night

"Growing Pains," directed by Miss Edberg of the high school faculty, will be presented tomorrow night in the Municipal Auditorium. This play is produced by the Junior Class and the cast is made up entirely of high school juniors. The production of a play by the junior class has become a custom and has been highly successful in the past.

This play is partly comedy and party tragedy, depending on the person's viewpoint, Miss Edberg states. It deals with the loves and "puppy" loves of boys and girls during the tender 'teen age, members of a professor's family. A flirt becomes a menace to one of the proessor's sons and an opportunity for him to express his feelings towards her becomes exceedingly hard to arrange for him at least. When he is finally allowed to express himself to her, then

AUTO TAX BILL BRINGS ON HOT SENATE BATTLE

Drastic Cut Plan Favored By Senate Conservatives Is Passed

By Hjalmer Peterson

Lieutenant Governor of Minnesota

The hottest battle on the floor of the Senate during the week was that waged for the reduction of motor vehicle license fees. The measure before the Senate was House Bill 915, which would restore the motor vehicle license rate to 2.4 per cent of the value of the car. This was the rate for licenses before the 1933 session of the Legislature cut the fees for the years 1933-34 from 20 to 50 per cent. Without new legislation the state reverts to the old rate this year. However, the House bill retained the minimum fees provided by the 1933 Legislature of $5 for cars under 2,000 pounds in weight, and $7.50 for cars over 2,000 pounds.

Under this provision the minimum for such cars as the Model T Ford would have been $5, as under the present law, and that for larger cars $7.50.

"Squaring it With the Boss," by the St. Hilaire Women's Club; Elroy Johnson, Alice Skattum, Mrs. Myles Jackson, M. Jackson, Mrs. E. Reiersgord and Garth Schantzen. "Sophie from Sandyville," by the Goodridge Com. Club, with Ruby Mandt, Clair McEnelly, Ernest Asleson, Eunice Thoreson and Mildred Black. "The Lost Church" by the T. R. F. Com. Church with K. Brown, Dorothy Traver, Francis Engle, Ardith Schultz, Edna Gilchrift, A. Douville, Marjorie Ward, Emma Carlson, Ardith Knight, Helen Wilson, Evangeline Douville and Yvonne Anderson. "Teacher, Kin I Go Home?" by the Wyandotte Com. Club., with a cast of B. Schiefert, C. Weckworth, A. Rasmussen, J. Fallon, C. Pike, H Walter, J. Brakke, Mrs. E. Erickson, Mrs .C. Pike, Mrs. C. Prestby, M. Gerardy, Mrs. M. Gerardy, Hazel Nelson, and Evelyn 'Samuelson.

Coaches for these groups are respectively Erma Swenson, Grace Dahle, Grace Bratlee, Rev. E. A. Cooke and Leo. 'Lauer. All coaches report careful training of their casts and some very fine performances are expected, Mrs. Verna Becker Purcell states.

BENNETT BILL FINDS FAVOR WITH COUNCIL

Social Insurance Bill Of Progressives Wins Approval

RIV'R PROJECT BILLS

"No Parking Signs To Be Placed on Main Between 4th, 6th

A resolution was presented to the City Council asking them to voice their opinion on the Bennett Bill to the legislature by the Workmen's Protective Association at the regular meeting of the city council last Tuesday eveinng. This bill is a bill sponsered by the progressive members of the legislature and deals with unemployment, old age and social insurance legislation. The resolution was adopted by the council unanimously.

The second reading of the amendment to change the ordinance relating to the time of meetings was heard. The proposed amendmont would change the time of meetings from twice to once a month. The second reading was approved and one more reading is now necessary to permanently change the frequency of the meetings.

Mrs. King, poor relief administrator for this district, asked the council to grant her permission to use the property on the Rockstad place which is south of the city for garden purposes for the poor of the city; the council granted her request and at the same time agreed to rent the building on the property for $5 per month.

The street commissioner was asked to take care of the walking approaches to the new bridge as it has become nearly impassable since the frost has begun to leave the ground. The council approved the suggestion that the city truck be overhauled at a cost of $34.60; Mr. Legvold stated that the truck needed to be rebored and that new pistons were needed.

Bills amounting to approximately $1000 were turned into the city council by the SERA office on the work and materials bought by H. I. Frisbie during the past few months in connection with restoring water in the Red Lake River. These bills were not approved by the state and the burden of paying them now rests with the cities who asked the work done. The

G. Giving Tells Of Arabian Modes

Students of Lincoln high school and a number of local people were given an opportunity Monday afternoon at the Municipal Auditorium to see and hear a real "Arab" brought to this country by Gerald Giving, globe trotter and explorer.

Arabian customs and costumes were given clear descriptions with the help of the "Arab" and many garments which Mr. Giving had with him. An interesting topio that Mr. Giving discussed in detail was the schooling of Arabian children and how they were taught the English language which held the assemblage's attention for nearly half an hour. The speaker had been an instructor of English in Arabian schools for a number of years and had at one time been assigned to a group of children who knew no words of the language and he knowing no words of their language was forced to employ signs to convey meanings to the children.

All who attended the lecture expressed the opinion that it was one of the most enlightening and interesting talks heard in this vicinity.

Will Enter Evangelistic work

REV. E. N. DALEY

Rev. E. N. Daley, of the Thief River Falls Gospel Tabernacle, will preach his farewell sermon here on Sunday evening, March 31. Rev. Daley expects to leave this city on Wednesday, April 3, and will engage in evangelistic work, his first stop being Detroit Lakes.

The Assemblies of God fellowship meeting will be held Tuesday and Tuesday evening at the Gospel Tabernacle, under the Union State Bank. Rev. Maurice Cory, who will succeed Rev. Daley in charge of the Tabernacle here, will be installed at afternoon services. Rev. Cory comes here from Pillager, Minnesota.

Representatives of the various assemblies thruout Northern Minnesota and North Dakota will be in attendance as will officials of the district Presbytery.

Local Business Leaders Discuss Possibility of Hiring Baseball Team

A group of business men met at the Masonic Hall Monday night to discuss plans for a baseball team in this city next summer. "Shorty" Dekko, of Gary, Minn., called on R. Lambert last Sunday and made a proposition whereby Thief River Falls could have a high class team here with very little expense to the backers. No final action was taken at this meeting but another meeting will be held tomorrow night at which time a report will be made by a group selected to find out what the sentiment of the local people is on this matter.

Mr. Dekko stated that he would bring a high class team to Thief River Falls and that they would play at least fou rSunday games here every month and in addition would furnish uniforms for his players. In return for the services of this team a hundred dollars a month is to be put up by the backers of the team and a diamond is to be kept in playing condition. Only the best teams will be played and it is hoped that the city can work up enough interest to enter the Northern League next year.

ATTEND DODGE-PLYMOUTH MEETING AT GRAND FORKS

Louis Borchert and Norman Johnson, local auto dealers, accompanied by one of their salesmen, Harvey Beauregard, attended a dealers' meeting and banquet held at the Dakota hotel at Grand Forks last Friday. Among those present were several factory officials from Detroit, Michigan. At 3:30 in the afternoon the entire body were guests at the radio studios of KFJM where they listened to a radio program of which the Dodge-Plymouth dealers of this territory are sponsoring every day from 3:30 to 4:00. After the radio program they again returned to the Hotel where another short business session was held and a Dutch lunch was served. Mr. Kelly and Mr. Hustad of Valley Motor Co., of Grand Forks extended their appreciation for the large attenndance present.

Penn. County Taxpayers Will Meet on Tuesday

Penington County Taxpayers' Association will hold their annual meeting at the Civic and Commerce room in the New Acuditorium in Thief River Falls at 2 o'clock on Tuesday, April 2nd, announces Alfred Longren, the secretary of the organization.

Sons and Daughters of Sweden

The Sons and Daughters of Sweden will hold their annual meeting at the Sons of Norway hall at 8 o'clock on Friday, April 12th.

W. P. A. FAVORS HOUSE PLAN OF STATE AUTO TAX

Bennett, Lundeen Bills to Be Pushed for Early Passage

A lively discussion of legislative problems took place at the meeting of the Workmen's Protective Association Monday evening at the court house. Immediate action was demanded in the form of resolutions on the Bennett Bill in the legislature and the Lundeen Bill which is on the floor of the house in the national congress. Various business men of the city were asked to express their views on these bills and all present agreed that the bill should be passed and that they would be of benefit to the people. Anton Hall, Alfred Bredeson, Ward Long, James Cosgrove and R. M. Aalbu were among those present who stated that they would work to support the bills.

Another bill, that of the Minnesota House of Representatives, on Motor Vehicle Taxation, was approved by the group after Mr. Aalbu explained why it was superior to the senate plan, in-as-much as it benefited the small and old car owners. The House plan also would give the state the opportunity to take advantage of the federal highway funds that are being offered to states that will match them and thereby create employment for about 14,000 men on highway construction.

A resolution was adopted opposing the giving of full police powers to members of the state Bureau of Criminal Apprehension so that they could enter a county without first consulting the county sheriff It was stated that as far as increasing the number of operatives on the Bureau's force was concerned, the organization was heartily in favor of such a move, if it would help lessen crimes in the state.

Another resolution opposing the changing of dates of city elections to conform with the date of the general elections was adopted. The resolution was adopted on the grounds that the people were tired of their present city officials, and that the general election was already too complicated for most voters to keep straight as it is and that if the city elections were to be held with the general election the issues would be still further confused in the minds of many.

The next regular meeting of the WPA will be held Monday night in the courtroom of the court house in this city. Business men are expressly invited to attend this meeting and to take part in the discussion of economic ills and cures, Wm. Douville, president, states.

County's Share for Relief is Reduced

The meeting of the County Auditors' Association which has been held for the past two Saturdays was instrumental in reducing the Pennington county share of the poor relief fund $13,804.25, according to H. L. Fowler, County Auditor and President of the association. The amount of relief which has been allotted to Pennington county is $74,769, of which amount the county was to pay $22,370 and the state and federal governments were to make up the difference. The county's amount was reduced to$8,565.75 but the total amount for relief in this county remains the same due to the equalization work of this association.

Reductions made in adjoining counties are: Marshall, reduced from $36,968, county contribution to the fund to $13,324.50; Red Lake reduced from $18,301 to $7,6614; Roseau, from $25,300 to $7,614. Counties in the southern parts of the state were not reduced as much because of their better financial condition, Mr. Fowler said.

PENTECOSTAL CONVENTION

Ministers and members of their congregations will gather in this city, at the Pentecostal Assembly, Bridge St. and Conley Ave. for a Spring Convention to begin April 3rd and continuing to and including Sunday, April 7th. These services will be held daily. Morning worship and bible study at 10:30; afternoon service 2:30, and evening service at 7:30.

The nature of the convention will be strictly spiritual, with messages and singing by those visiting the city.

Saturday, April 6th, is set apart as missionary day, and the entire program for the day will be in charge of the missionaries.

For the convenience of those attending the convention, meals will be served in the church basement.

The public is urged to attend all the services.

Vacant Lots for Garden Plots Wanted by SERA

Mrs. King, local relief administrator, announced today that all persons having vacant property in the city or near by the city should get in touch with her as soon as possible. Land which is not being used for any purpose, she states, is desirable for garden purposes and those having such property would be assisting in the care of the needy if they would allow a garden to be put on this property this summer.

Thousands of Dncks in State on Flight North

The annual spring flight of wild ducks to northern climes is on and minnesota now has thousands of these feathered travelers within its boundaries. Most of these birds are grouped in southern parts of the state at the present time.

D. P. Brady, state game warden at Windom, reported thousands of wild ducks in lakes in his section with large numbers at Heron Lake.

"We are hoping for a break in the drouth conditions in Minnesota so that better breeding conditions will prevail for our wild migratory waterfowl," Erling Swenson, game and fish director, said.

STAN RADNICKI TAKES M. OLSON 2 OUT OF 3 FALLS

20-Pound Handicap Tells After Olson Gets First Fall

A card of wrestling bouts brimfull of action was presented to followers of the grunt and groan game at the old Elks' hall Tuesday evening culminating in a main go wherein Stan Radniecki of Oklee took two out of three falls from Mark Olson of this city.

The first fall went to Mark Olson after 12 minutes of action replete with thrills. Mark took his heavier opponent with a cross bodylock after having apparently tired his adversary. Radniecki came back strong to take the second fall in 4½ minutes however. The third fall went to Radniecki after 10 minutes of the most breath-taking wrestling yet exhibited on the cards this year. Olson was on the point of pinning Radniecki just a moment before the end but was not heavy enough to weigh him down. A quick back somersault reversed the positions of the men and Stan had the weight needed to hold his more experienced and wiry opponent.

'Radniecki is a comer but could apparently do away with about 10 pounds and gain staying power. He weighed 165 pounds and Olson tipped the scales at 144.

Christie of Angus and Young Radnicki of Oklee took turns at heaving each other out of the ring and rolling out together tangled up like a giant tarantula for 20 minutes, neither securing a fall. They weighed 144 andd 155 pounds respectively.

Saunders of Frazee pinned Johnson of this city after just one minute of a one fall to a finish match and the question of who is the best man remains rather doubtful as the end came too quick for anyone to form an opinion These two should be matched again. They both looked good while it lasted.

Strovel of Angus (162) threw Egenes (160) of this city after 7 minutes of another one fall bout. Strovel looked good and appeared to have oodles of stamina and strength. Egenes too, showed up well.

"Red" Wedul of Hazel came thru his match with Christofferson of this city, taking a fall after 6 minutes of real wrestling with a combination of half-Nelson, armlock and body-lock. These boys, too, gave the fans plenty of thrills. Wedul shows increasing skill and endurance with each match he appears in.

Newly Purchased Bonds Delivered April First

All of the county bonds that were offered for sale last week were sold to local people, the county auditor, H. L. Fowler, announced early this week. Persons having made known their willingness to take these bonds were instructed to pay at the County Auditor's office not later than April 1st, 1935, at which time the bonds will be delivered.

Six Auto Dealers to Exhibit Twenty-Seven Nineteen-Thirty-Five Models

9 Other Local Concerns To Have Industrial Displays

MARIE EARLY TO BE IN CHARGE OF SHOW

Cast of Twenty-Eight In A Real High-Class Vaudeville

Wednesday noon marks the opening of the Eighth Annual Auto Show and Spring Exposition which is sponsored every year by the Elmer J. Ecklund Post of the American Legion. As it has been found true in the past this year's Exposition promises to be one of the gala events of the year as can be determined by the entertainments provided, O. C. Paulson, chairman in charge of arrangements, stated today.

Local automobile dealers have announced their intentions of having 27 models of cars displayed on the main floor of the auditorium. Cross-sections of cars, cut away chassis views and motion pictures are also planned by some of the dealers. The auditorium stage will be so ararnged that dealers can isolate themselves and their prospective customers and show these pictures. Local dealers who will have displays are C. Gustafson and Sons, 6 cars; Northern Chevrolet, 7 cars; Lund and Tundberg, 4 cars; Borchert and Johnson, 4 cars; Thronson Motor Co., 4 cars; and Taxeraas, 2 cars.

Industrial exhibits will be displayed on the main floor of the auditorium this year also thus making it possible for all exhibitions to be viewed without going into the basement as it has been necessary here-to-fore Haakos Olson, chairman of the industrial exhibits, announced. Mr. Olson stated that the following concerns will display articles this spring: Borry's Garage, Land O' Lakes, Alness Electrical, Thief River

$112,000 Received by Co. From State Auditor Fri.

The county treasurer, J. Gullingsrud, received a check for $112,000 late last week from the state auditor's office for the purpose of taking up outstanding warrants and ditch bonds. This money, together with the $80,000 received for bonds sold last week, will very nearly absorb all debts of the county, Mr. Gullingsrud said. The purpose of taking up all outstanding warrants, etc., is that from ¾ to 1½ per cent interest can be saved on these debts, according to the county treasurer.

SUPREME COURT RULES AGAINST INSURANCE CO.

Nels G. Beckstrom Wins Suit After Nearly Six Yrs. In Court

A supreme court decision handed down late last week affirmed the last action of the district court of this district and gave $4,960 insurance award to Nels G. Beckstrom in the death of his son Albert. It was held that the death was accidental, after the 14th Judicial District Court had twice ruled it was suicide and once held that it was accidental.

In the early part of September in 1929, Albert Beckstrom, a bookkeeper at Jung's bakery, did not report for work on Monday morning and it was thought that he had gone home over the week end and was unable to return. As the Jung truck went through Alvarado, Beckstrom's home town, the truck driver stopped at the Beckstrom home and made inquiries and found that Albert had not come home that week end. A search was started but no trace of him was found. About two weeks later a patient at the Sanitorium looked out the window and saw a form lying on the ground, and later in the same day investigated and it was found to be the body of the missing bookkeeper. The Finder called Charlie Eicher, engineer at the Sanitorium, who found that Beckstrom had been shot through the head and that a revolver was still in his hands. The body had been lying there for more than two weks and was in an advanced stage of decomposition.

The decision of the Supreme Court ends a long battle between the insurance company and Mr. Nels Beckstrom which was started because it was contended on one side that the death was accidental and on the other side that it was a case of suicide.

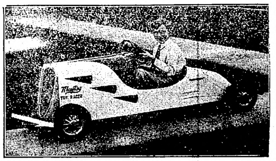
Thief River Music Company Displays Smallest Car at the Automobile Show



The car pictured above will be the smallest stock model car displayed at the Auto Show and Spring Exposition which opens at the Municipal auditorium on Wednesday of next week.

This little car, which contains a real motor and steerin' wheel and gear shift an' ev'rthing, raises a glow of joy to the face of every youngster who sees it. It is being displayed by the Larson company, formerly called Thief River Music to some lucky youngster. The contest is open to any boy or girl of school age and will be awarded to the contestant receiving the highest number of votes. The list of contestants are to be found elsewhere in this issue and votes are awarded on the basis of 100 votes with each dollars worth purchased from the Larson company on the easy payment plan. An additional 100 votes per dollar is awarded on cash purchases, on the following products: The Maytag Washer or Ironer, Philco radio or car radio, Frigidaire refrigerators. 100 votes per dollar of cash purchases of other merchandise is also given.

Verdict for State in Rice Lake Controversy

Sportsmen and conservationists in Minnesota hailed with delight the verdict rendered by Federal Judge Gunnar H. Nordbye giving to the state condemnation rights covering Wild Rice Lake in Clearwater county to be set aside as a wild life refuge, and wild rice reserve for use by Chippewa Indians. The state's interests were represented by Atorney General Harry H. Peterson with A. D. Brattland, assistant attorney general, in direct charge.

State and federal actions were instituted at the same time for control of this land, "probably the first case in the history of this country where a state and nation have sought to acquire the same land at the same time by condemnation proceedings," Mr. Peterson said.

The decision of the U. S. District court denies the right of condemnation to the federal government in order that the state action may proceed.

"Rice lake is one of the outstanding nesting and resting places for wild fowl in the state," E. V. Willard, commissioner of conservation, said. "The Minnesota Conservation Commission recommended this area as a wild life refuge because of those features and because of inaction on the part of federal authorities to proceed with needed physical improvements for wild rice culture."

LIBERALS FORM BLOC FOR CONGRESS ACTION

The organization of a so-called "liberal" or "progressive" group of HOUSE members has caused quite a furor in Washington. Congressman Fuller of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic Patronage committee, made a bitter attack on the members joining up with the group, mentioning each by name. Among those present at the "liberal caucus" were Democrats, Republicans, Farmer-Laborites, and Progressives, including the following Minnesota members: Buckler, Kvale, and Lundeen, all F.-L.; Ryan, Democrat; Maas and Knutson, Republicans. Knutson later stated on the floor of the House that he just dropped in to Congressman Burdick of North Dakota concerning a telegram.

While there were 39 members at the first meeting, more than 50 are expected to turn out for the next session of the new "liberal" bloc." Although no legislation has been agreed upon such proposals as the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, establishing of a central bank revision of income tax laws, immediate payment of the bonus, shorter hours fo labor and guaranteed cost of production for agriculture were discussed as possibilities for support.

SAD STORY FROM OKLAHOMA

McAlester, Okla., (MC) — A "Hungry Army," jobless and foodless, dropped into the County courthouse here, and refused to budge from Saturday to Monday. They spent the week end PRAYING, SINGING HYMNS, etc., led by Mrs. Viola Watson. 55 years old, who led the army. Monday the sheriff signed a check for $100 the sheriff signed a check for $100 for food, which he said was not a bribe, and then told the army that if they did not disperse he would order tear gas to come down from Heaven.

The Forum will be $1.50 per year after April 1st. Better renew now!

Thomas Jains Campaign For Florida Open Ballot

TAMPA.—Norman Thomas has urged Governor Sholtz to exert his personal influence in behalf of a bill the Socialist party will introduce in the coming Florida legislature to give all political parties position on the official ballot.

The apepal from the nationally-known Socialist was made in the form of a letter to Governor Sholtz. The letter follows:

"I am writing to urge that you put your personal influence and the influence of your office behind the bill, which will again make Florida genuinely democratic in respect to the right of minority parties to get the names of their candidates on the ballot.

"One of the most important tasks of our time is to defend the American tradition of democracy against the Fascist notion of dictatorship. We cannot defend democracy if it is hypocritical or unreal. Until the act of June 15, 1931, Florida was in the vanguard of American states which allowed citizens to express their opinion. We Socialists appreciated that fact and took advantage of it in Florida in honorable fashion.

"Both as a Socialist and as an American citizen I want to see your state returned to democratic procedure in the matter of elections. The difficulty of getting minority party candidates on the ballot is now so great as to amount to virtual disfranchisement of a great many honest American citizens. I am sure you will agree with me."

FERA STRIKERS HOLD FAST AFTER THIRD WEEK

By John C. Taylor

Toledo.—The strike of 1500 organized FERA workers in Lucas county is in its third week with undiminished force and enthusiasm. All FERA projects in the county are practically at a standstill, with only a few unorganized workers going through the picket lines.

The news of the strike has brot enthusiastic resolutions of support from hundreds of unemployed organizations from within and without the state, and there is every likelihood that the strike will spread rapidly.

The Relief Workers' League, which was hastily organized following the strike to take in all the non-union workers, has already reached a membership of over 1,000 members, with new applications being received every day. The new organization voted in its last meeting to affiliate with the Workers' Aliance of America, and is taking immediate steps to secure its charter.

To Join National Group

Paul Rasmussen, secretary of the Workers' Alliance of America, appeared before a mass meeting of the FERA strikers. He explained the policies and program of the new national unemployed organization and told of the recent successful meeting at Washington, D. C. Mr. Rasmussen's address was received with great enthusiasm by the large group present.

A strike committee of 15, including representation from the Building Trades Council and other organized bodies, has been formed to carry on the strike activities. Various projects are picketed daily and there is every determination to go forward to a fight to a finish.

Win Local Support

Wednesday afternoon a committee of the strikers met with the county relief administrator and presented him with demands for an investigation of the Lucas county relief administration, citing ten specific charges in support of their demands. The committee also demanded that the allowance for direct relief be immediately increased and gave figures proving that the amount per family per month in Toledo was probably the lowest of any city of its size in the United States.

The relief administrator promised to forward the demands of the strikers at once to Washington and also said that he would support the claims for larger direct relief allowances.

Governor Davey of Ohio has also come in open support of Toledo strikers and referred to the demand for an investigation as tending to support his stand that the present relief set-up in Ohio is inefficient and wasteful. He added, "The charges are exceedingly interesting."

The strikers in Toledo hope that organized and unorganized labor in other parts of the country will take up the fight and spread the struggle against the enslavement of labor. They hope that the budetary system of relief wages will meet with stern and unrelenting opposition on the part of all organized groups throughout the country and that every attempt will be made to bring mass pressure on Congress to pay decent and sufficient wages to all relief workers in the administration's relief program which is now being debated.

GERMAN PREPARATIONS FOR AIR WARFARE ARE RAPIDLY ADVANCING

Hamburg, (TIS)—14 military airplanes a day—this is the daily production rate of the famous Junker airplane concern at Dessau. More than 13,000 men are now employed at the Junker's factories, whose activities are surrounded with deep mystery. Similarly, the Heinkel works in northern Germany are turning out a highly specialized military pursuit plane daily, and a bombing airplane every third day. The number of men employed at these factories is given as 4,000. Airports are rising in all parts of Germany. Their number is tentatively estimated at 30, some of them under construction. All have subterraneous passages and hangers.

Despite these facts and numerous other informations reaching the outside world, the extent to which the German air armament has ?progressed still remains a mystery. The authorities are doing everything to deepen the mystery, although they refrain from publicly denying that Germany has made great forward strides in becoming the leading military power of Europe.

Picked Foreign Athlets To Visit Am. Olympic

By Laddie Janik

Prague, Czechoslovakia, —(By Mail).—In response to the large participation of American Labor Gymnasts at the Third Labor Olympiad held here last summer, the Czechslovakia Labor Gymnastic Association (DTJ) has voted to send a group of twenty or more athletics to tour America in 1936.

This picked squad of men and women, the cream of an organization having 200,000 members —in a country of 15,000,000 population —will appear in several important centers of labor sports activity in America, including New York, Bridgeport, Reading, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis.

The central occasion for the visit will be the first American Labor Olympiad, to be held in Cleveland, O., in July of 1936. Czech sports organizations have taken the initiative in forming this Olympiad, but the invitation to it will include all non-Communist labor sports groups in America.

The executive committee of the Labor sports International has sent our invitations to other European Workers' groups, asking that the organization of other countries follow the Czech lead in sending delegations to the American Labor Olympiad.

Graduation Exercises At N'West School Tonight

Commencement week activities opened with the baccalaureate services which were held last Sunday evening, March 24. Reverend F. J. Hibbard, Crookston, delivered the commencement sermon before an audience that taxed the auditorium to capacity.

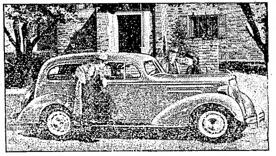
Monday evening was devoted to declamatory contests with representatives from each of the four classes taking part in the extemporaneous, oratory, dramatic and humorous divisions. Tuesday evening all members of the Senior class, together with senior and junior advisers, were guests of Superintendent and Mrs. A. A. Dowell at their home on the campus. The annual concert recital by students specializing in voice, piano and violin was held Wednesday evening under the direction of Misses Katherina Hennig, Constance Lane, and Grace Warne. R. S. Dunham presided as chairman and introduced the various numbers.

A special luncheon will be held Thursday noon for alumni. This will be followed by the senior class exercises with Clifford Sauer, Glyndon, vice president of the senior class, presiding. Graduation exercises are scheduled for the evening with the principal address to be delivered by Honorable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, Ontario, Canada. Burnett Bergeson, Twin Valley, president of the senior class and prominent school debater, will deliver the class address on this occasion. Dr. O. J. Hagen of Moorhead, member of the University Board of Regents will extend greetings on behalf of the University of Minnesota. Following the speaking program, Superintendent A. A. Dowell will present diplomas and other scholarship awards.

Ninety-one students will graduate from the Northwest School of Agriculture and receive diplomas at the close of the commencement exercises which will be held in the school auditorium Thursday, Mar. 26. This will bring the total number of graduates to over one thousand, while additional thousands of young men and women have been in attendance one or more years.

Members of the graduating classes from Pennington county include the following: Morris Engelstad, Laura Hanson, Irene Holst of Thief River Falls.

Chicago.—The Young People's Socialist League has prepared a study outline on child labor, edited by Murray Plavner, which will be sent free to party organizations, youth groups and others who send in a stamped self-addressed large envelope.



The New 1935 Chevrolet Master DeLuxe Coach

Chevrolet Will Lead Again This Year the Local Dealer Asserts

Three complete lines of quality products, introduced in 1935 give Chevrolet an "inside track" to the widest market it has ever enjoyed, Chris Rinkel, of the Northern Chevrolet company of this city, Chevrolet and Oldsmobile dealers, pointed out in announcing his firm's entries in the Auto Show and Spring Exposition to be held here next week.

"Two brand news series of passenger cars and the time-tried commercial cars of the past forecast an even better year than we experienced in 1934, when our sales led the industry for the fourth year in succession."

The complete line of Chevrolets and Oldsmobiles will be on display at the exposition, Mr. Rinkel stated. Among them will be the New Standard series, full-size, high quality cars, providing economical, dependable transportation at a price that millions can pay. Another, the aristocrat of the low-price field, is the new DeLuxe Master series, whose beautifully re-styled bodies by Fisher, numerous mechanical refinements, and all-around value appear will, we believe, push to a new high peak Chevrolet's conquest of the higher priced market.

Visitors to the show are invited to inspect these cars, Mr. Rinkel says, and are reminded that "we are always ready to demonstrate them on the road to any prospective purchaser, so that they may judge for themselves the wonderful roadability of these cars."

BEMIDJI AIRPORT WILL HAVE $50,000 HANGAR

The Bemidji airport will be equipped with a modern $50,000 hangar through joint action of the city and the Minnesota SERA, announces Walter F. MacGregor, work director.

Of the total cost the city will contribute $11,500. The remainder will be provided by the SERA in wages to between 125 and 150 relief workers from Bemidji and vicinity. A St. Paul architect, Fred C. Klawiter, designed the new structure.

. . . When men have realized that time has upset many fighting faiths, they have come to believe even more than they believe the very foundations of their own conduct that the ultimate good desired is better reached by free trade in ideas—that the best test of truth is the power of the thought to get itself accepted in the market, and that truth is the only ground upon which their wishes can be carried out. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

SENATOR E. L. TUNGSETH: REACTIONARY

We have on a great many occasions of late been accosted by various people who have labored under the illusion (Lord only knows how they got it) that Senator Tungseth would emerge from the smoke screen with which he surrounded himself during the campaign and prove to be a liberal after all. These people have asked us how he is voting. How is he lining up, et cetera. One local business man who has always claimed to be a farmer-laborite, but who supported Tungseth during the campaign asked us one day how long we supposed that Tungseth can "ride two horses." To all of whom we have replied that Tungseth has been, and is lined up with the crowd he has always supported and chummed with; the reactionary gang that has run the state of Minnesota into the ground, and are now holding a ninety days funeral service at St. Paul.

Much as we dislike shattering the mirages of the "high-hopers" we feel constrained to call attention to Mr. Tungseth's vote on the motor tax bill considered by the Senate last Thursday. The senate, with its characteristic regard for the pocketbooks of the Rolls-Royce class was considering motor taxes. Senator Bridgeman had introduced an amendment which would have brought the senate plan somewhat nearly in conformity with the house plan. Altho the house cannot by any stretch of the imagination be charged with "soaking the rich," the house plan would have raised $1,300,000 more revenue for the highway department than the senate plan. The differecent in tax on the low priced cars would have amounted to about $1.70 so that it will be seen that the additional revenue would have, in the main, been assessed against the owners of the high-priced cars.

A half-dozen of the conservative senators joined with the farmer-laborites in voting for the Bridgeman amendment and the vote was 25 yeas and 38 nays, and Mr. Tungseth is found with the Carley-Crowley-McKenzie- Rockne- Weber crowd. Which is, of course after all, just where he could be expected to be, rude as the awakening may be for the somnambulists.

BUILDING THE 1936 MACHINE

Republicans who have been so flabbergasted at the much discussed three per cent contributions made by farmer-labor state employees towards the sustaining fund of the Minnesota Leader and the farmer-labor campaign fund should prepare themselves for a shock. Farmer-Laborites pay the money out of their own pocket, but if the statements made by Senator Byrd of Virginia (dem.) and the report of the federal treasury department means anything it would seem that Governor Langer of North Dakota was a piker in the art of diverting federal funds as compared with the president himself.

According to the Congressional Record, and we assume that it should be fairly reliable authority; Senator Byrd in discussing the five billion dollar public works fund which the president is asking, and which may have passed before this appears in print, said: " . . . The reply to that inquiry, . . . shows that there is $1,116,000,000 still unexpended of the appropriation (for public works) which was made nearly 18 months ago."

Further Senator Byrd states that out of the part that was expended and which the congress and the people supposed was to be expended for the purpose of relieving unemployment, $485,000,000 have been diverted to departments of government which are assumed to be taken care of by other and regular department appropriations. Senator Byrd points out that altho the law of the land provides that:

> "Except as otherwise provided by law, sums appropriated for the various branches of expenditure in the public service shall be applied solely to the objects for which they are respectively made, and for no other."

President Roosevelt has by executive decree diverted from the public works fund as follows:

To the Federal Alcohol Control Board (not yet authorized by congress) ....$	500,000
To Federal Coordinator of Transportation	140,000
The Federal Power Commission	700,000
The General Accounting office	506,000
Administration of the NRA	13,420,000
Stock in Commodity Credit Corporation .	3,000,000
The Electric Home and Farm Authority (not authorized by congress)	1,000,000
For Executive Council	43,000
Stock in Import-Export Bank	1,250,000
Administrative Expense of Federal housing Administration	1,000,000
National Emergency Council	1,416,491
For National Railroad Adjustment Board	200,000
For National Resources Board	135,000
Office of Advisor of Foreign Trade	350,000
For administrating the Oil Code	830,000
Immigration and Naturalization Service.	88,000
United States Employment Service	1,300,000
Bureau of Labor Statistics	10,000
Office of Secretary of Labor	16,000
For the Conciliation Board	110,000
For the National Labor Board	222,000
For the National Labor Relations Board.	1,027,000
For the National Steel Labor Board	58,000
National Longshoremen's Labor Board ..	25,000
Office of the Secretary of the Treasury..	1,141,000
For relief of Contractors	100,000
For the Public Health Service	43,698
For Mississippi Valley Committee	45,000
For the Review Board	50,000
For the Self-Help Movement	35,000

Added to this imposing list, which the honorable senator made public, we might include the $400,000,000 which were diverted to the army and navy for armament purposes under the rather flimsy excuse that it was for "public works." All the foregoing diversions will of course be excused by administration supporters with the same hypocritical alibi.

A little simple arithmetic shows that out of the $3,300,000,000 appropriated by congress for a mammoth public works program, designed to relieve the unprecedented unemployment situation and the ever mounting misery among the people because of curtailed purchasing power, only about $915,000,000, or about 30 cents on the dollar found its way into the channel it was intended for. And about $885,000,000 or about 27 cents on the dollar, was diverted into various and sundry departments of government, many of which were created by the president, without authority of congress.

And let it not be forgotten that there remains unexpended about one and one-half billion dollars, eighteen months afterwards and unemployment stands today at about the same figure as when the appropriation was made: namely 12,000,000.

If the appropriation had been honestly expended as intended by congress it would have made it possible for the unemployed to have earned an average of $275 apiece at honest labor, which may be assumed to have "primed the pump" as the democrats speak so long and so often about. As the matter stands, only $76.25 per head of unemployed was expended. And anyone who watched the public works fiasco, knows that 90 per cent of this went to engineers, inspectors and investigators on projects that never materialized to the point where the workingman got a chance to earn one penny.

And this brings us to the point we want to make: that the president has used the public works fund for the purpose of building up a political machine. He has created and is maintaining with public funds a myriad of departments, divisions, bureaus, commissions, commitees and boards, all filled with potential democratic ward-heelers feeding at the public trough, while the American people wallow in the muck of poverty, degradation and shame.

To our mind it would be a toss-up whether the democratic slogan in 1936 should be "He Kept Us Out of the Saloon," or "Boards, Bureaus, Boodle and Booze."

AGREES WITH COUGHLIN

(The Progressive, Madison, Wis.)

Out of an experience of nearly 30 years in the newspaper business, thispaper is willing to admit that Father Coughlin has hit the nail on the head.

The newspaper today has become a big business institution. A large amount of capital is needed by the newspapers in cities of 50,000 and over to meet the modern demands for speed, all-inclusiveness in the news, and the many features which people want in their newspapers. The average investment in a newspaper in a city of over 50,000 is $350,000.

Invested capital is always timid. In its modern development the newspaper inherited the fears of invested capital. The newspapers follow a course that will not seriously interfere with returns on the capital invested. Following that course, newspapers fear to antagonize those who are in a position to pour billions of dollars in business into the American newspapers each year.

The average newspaper owes money to the banks. Editors are not unmindful of these obligations and have no desire to gain the ill will of the bankers.

"THE FIGHT MUST GO ON"

(New York World-Telegram)

We condemn, and an increasing body of American citizens condemn, compulsory military training as unwise, illiberal and unfair. Moreover, we condemn it as inefficient and wasteful of the taxpayers' money.

It is unwise because it breeds disloyalty to the government by large numbers of the highest types of citizens.

The battle against compulsory militarizing of the students of state universities should go on. But the fight will have to made in Congress, which controls appropriations for the army and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, on which the state compulsory military education system rests in practice. And the fight also will have to be continued in the states. Just as Wisconsin and Minnesota recently changed from compulsory to elective military courses, so other states can be persuaded by proper methods.

PUBLICITY ON MELLON'S INCOME

(The Progressive, Madison, Wis.)

Some things being brought out in the income tax evasion trial of Andrew Mellon, "the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton,"

That Mellon profited by $72,000 on stock he sold short in March 1931, while he was secretary of the treasury. That Mellon signed his income tax report for 1931 without swearing to it.

That D. D. Shepard, Mellon's tax attorney, occupied a government office in the United States Treasury Building during 1931, although not a government employe.

Small wonder that propaganda is being launched in Washington fo rthe repeal of the law which provides for the publicity of income tax returns.

FASCISM BARES ITS TEETH

(Minnesota Leader)

...."In one stroke," says James W. Gerard, wartime ambassador to Germany, "he (Hitler) not only satisfied the newly-aroused nationalistic spirit of Germany but he also provided at least a partial solution for his unemployment problem."

Correct. Unable to proceed along constructive lines under its boasted code of "free competition," Big Business in Germany, and elsewhere ,reverts to the law of the economic jungle from which it sprang. The last stand of capitalism in Germany, and in other countries, will see the frenzied fanning of the flames of nationalism. (In America it is taking form in the guise of "red" scares). And then the crowding into military service of hundreds of thousands of unemployed.

Along with that will be the imprisonment of clergymen with courage enough to declare the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill." Witness Hitler's arrest of the first thousand. They have refused to prostitute themselves by twisting the message of Jesus to conform with fascist tyranny.

Big Business in America is no different from Big Business in Germany. Unless the development of fascism is brought to a sudden halt in the United States we are likely to witness here what is taking place now across the seas. One way to stop the growth in Minnesota is for YOU to become a member of the Farmer-Labor association. And another way is to promote the circulation of this newspaper. As an awakened Farmer-Laborite you should do both.

Let's not be deceived. Fascism in its worst form looks hungrily at America. It will take united, intelligent action to keep it from developing.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The National Safety Council in a preliminary review of 1934's record states that motor traffic accident deaths for 1934 reached a total of 35,500,—at least 3,500 more than in 1933.

A similar national survey connected with the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., reports a gain, as compared with 1933, of nearly 24 per cent in the number of drunken drivers and of more than 55 per cent in drunken pedestrians involved in automobile accidents in 1934.

A survey presented, by Dr. Theron Wendell Kilmer of New York City, at the 1934 Convention of the International Convention of Police Chiefs, Washington, D. C., reports many individual city police records showing startling increases in accidents attributable to intoxication, among them; New York City, 25 per cent; Philadelphia, 300 per cent; District of Columbia 42 per cent; Cincinnati, 380 per cent; Los Angeles, 479 per cent; New Orleans, 122 per cent.

Reckoned on the basis of the National Safety Council's statistical finding, which in an official statement last year asserted that each automobile accident fatality involved a property loss of $50,000 the record of automobile deaths in 1933 involved a total cost to the participants of $1,772,000,000,—an increase of something like $275,000,000 over that of 1933!

This is simply one item in the record of re-legalized liquor's first year since repeal. Dry laws, backed by public sentiment educated and aroused by this record, and abolishing liquor advertising, would go far toward remedying this startling situation.

THE COST OF STRIKES

By KAY JACKSON
Author of "Let's Have Action" "Let's Have More Action!"
(From Action Magazine)

NOTE: Mr. Henry P. Fletcher, Republican Party Chairman, blames the New Deal for strikes of workers which he claims resulted in "terrific economic losses" in 1934. Losses of $75,000,000 in wages alone. ACTION prints below evidence that the strike of the capitalists is entailing a loss, in wages alone of $50,000,000 every day!

Just what is a strike? A strike is merely the refusal of workers to sell or rent their labor or to put it at the disposal of society, except at what they believe is a fair return (or profit) to themselves. But do only workers strike? It is being noised around that capitalists, too, sometimes strike. How about it? We will change just two words in the above definition of a strike, then see if it sounds reasonable: A strike is merely the refusal of capitalists to sell or rent their capital, or to put it at the disposal of society, except at what they believe is a fair return (or profit) to themselves. That sentence makes just as good sense as the other, does it not? Then why should any distinction be made between a strike of workers and a strike of capitalists? Newspapers loosely and erroneously refer to those two groups as "labor" and "capital," thus beclouding the issue that is here clearly drawn. Workers and capitalists, animate individuals, inaugurate and conduct all strikes! Labor and capital, inanimate objects, are simply the instruments that the workers and the capitalists employ. For whether it is the strength of the miner, the skill of the driver of truck and taxi, the ability of the stenographer and bookkeeper, the ingenuity of the mechanic and builder, the knowledge of the teacher and engineer, or the ideas of the Henry P. Fletchers, this, their labor, whether of hand or brain, is all that the workers have to offer society. And whether it is the cash in the banks, the credit in the books, the resources in the ground, the machines in the shops, the trucks on the highways, or the cars on the sidings this, their capital, whether of money or goods, is all that the capitalists have to offer society! Now we are getting some place! Now we can show you some strike losses that are more than "terrific"!

In late October, 1929, there came a time when the capitalists could no longer secure a "fair return or profit" upon their capital. With only slight hesitation, and with only a few noteworthy exceptions, they struck! Their strike spread rapidly. Within sixty days it had become general Within ninety days it had sewed up the entire nation. They locked up their cash, their resources, their factories, mills, and shops, and clamped down the lid, determined, let come what may, to simply sit tight until such time as a satisfactory return—adequate profits, could be assured,—could be virtually guaranteed! Today, after more than five years, again with a few noteworthy exceptions, they are still sitting tight! Only as some "lucky break," an unusual demand, or the intervention of the government itself, has virtually guarateed the profits, have the capitalists raised the lid only to release such portion of their capital upon which they were sure of a satisfactory return,—adequate profits.

It may be truthfully stated, therefore, that their nation-wide general strike, called five years ago, today remains unbroken! Parenthetically, it was a "general strike" in one neighborhood that threatened to run perhaps five days, that had all the capitalists sitting forward on their chairs, and imploring both heaven and the government to break it for them, less than a year ago! But let us go on to the losses!

For five years, fifteen hundred working days, there has been, due to this capitalist conducted general strike, an average of ten million men without work. This means a total loss of 15,000,000,000 workdays with $75,000,000,000.00 lost in wages! Here is a sum three times the present national debt, a thousand times greater than the maximum "terrific economic losses" about which Chairman Fletcher has been raving, and this sum is being further increased, day by day, even while these lines are being written, at the stupendous rate of more than $50,000,000.00 per DAY!

Workers' strikes displace few high salaried men. This capitalists' strike has thrown scores of men formerly drawing from five to ten thousand a year, into the street. Therefore we are fully justified in using the same $5-per-day figure that was employed in tabulating the losses in wages from workers' strikes.

This loss, too, is of wages only. We have not included lost homes, lost farms, lost businesses, lost morals, lost hopes, suicides, increased crime, and all the rest of it, which can be rightfully tied in with the wage loss. And all due simply and solely to this general strike of the capitalists, called in 1929, which the government, always so solicitous about the welfare of the "innocent third party" —the general public, when a strike of workers is on, has permitted to go on unchecked and unhindered for five long and terrible years!

Meantime the patience and tolerant good nature of the general public, the "innocent third party," bring expressions of astonishment, (and gratefulness), from many in high places. And well they may. For the apparent wilingness of this public to put up with want in the midst of plenty, year after year, for no other or better reason than to preserve the Profit System, is truly astounding. It becomes still more astounding when it is pointed out that upwards of ninety per-cent of the total of individuals comprising this public are not in a position to get any profits from any source whatever, assuming the Profit System was functioning normally.

These vast masses want nothing but a job at decent wages, if they are unemployed now; want only to hold their present job, if they are now employed. The government already is providing the entire cash income for more than twenty million persons,whether by relief, wage or salary. The government is not asking for a "fair return" or "adequate profits." The government does not require a profit. The government can operate at cost. The wages it pays, its pensions, its upkeep, its unemployment insurance, can all be figured into that cost. The government, in complete command of all industry and service, can charge for its products and services whatever will cover such cost, and that is all it need charge. It would cost the governent and society less to place the illusory and mythical "million" of stock-holders, the present owners of the nation's industries, upon pensions sufficient to maintain these people, than it is costing it today for its loans to business, its relief, and its further incalculable loss of the wealth of all kinds that the idle men, idle money, and idle machines and resources could now be steadily creating if the government, society, was today in complete command and was operating this nation's matchless industrial plant at its full load, its full hundred per-cent capacity, all of the time.

THE READER'S ROSTRUM

Thief River Falls, Minn.,
March 26, 1935.

Editor Forum,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir—With the spring season just coming on I would like to use space in your paper to make an appeal to farmers and others who may have meadows or brush thickets that they expect to burn this spring to do their burning early before our game birds start their nests. While early burning may not be quite so easy or effective, you avoid the dangers of your fires getting out of control and doing damages to other property. That together with the advantage of not destroying nesting birds should be enough to compensate for the extra work of early burning.

We have spent considerable time and money to feed the birds during the winter in order to have ample breeding stock for the coming season and it is a shameful waste to destroy great numbers of these birds and their nests by careless spring fires. Give us your co-operation in this matter. Don't start any fires after the meadows and brush thickets have dried out, nor after the wild birds have started nesting. More birds means less grasshoppers.

Respectfully submitted,
W. H. QUIST,
State Game Warden.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

What of decency there is today is largely the product of a fine code of morals possessed by our forbears, a code now going a-glimmering.

It is time we realized that our morals, our ideals have undergone some deterioration during the past thirty years and we are headed to a situation when every effort of both church and government will be needed to turn the tide.

In the great tests that our children will have to face on economic, political and military battlefields, they will look back to the adults of today with a feeling of decided disguust for having given them an environment of no chores, doles, idleness, irresponsibility, indulgences, easy divorce, highly advertised drinking, smoking, jazzing and crime.

This environment to modern youth, creative of depending on somebody else, and getting it, is bad.

The providing or finding of something to do, the getting or creating of some responsibility, and the encouragement of personal initiative are three projects we will do well to stimulate in our children.

The Farmers' Union at Washington

On Tuesday of this week a subcommittee composed of Hones, Lewis, Anderson and Talbott, participated in a conference with the Chief of the Dairy Division of the AAA, the administrators and officiols of the Commodity Buying Division. A group of the Wisconsin Congressional delegation was ranged for the purpose of discussing the recent drop in dairy prices. During the conference the group was definitely assured that the dairy had twenty-five million dollars set aside for the purpose of stabilizing prices through the purchase of surplus dairy products. It was assured that a more speedy method would be devised for the purchase of the surplus so it would relieve the markets instantly.

The sub-committee and Congressmen vigorously protested the imports of dairy products, to keep the industry from securing parity price and pressed for a raise in tariff, and the orderly marketing of imports when they do come in.

This conference appointed Hones of the Northwest Group and Congressman Gehrman to work out tentative plans for a future program for the dairy industry with the Chief of the Dairy Division.

God and War

War Is A Business

Astonishing facts have been brought out recently, showing that the "munitions racket" is a well-organized business, with ramifications extending through our entire system. It has been shown that our Army and Navy have been used as demonstrators of new models of guns and ammunition, for use in selling them to some foreign country, Whenever a little hostility has broken out somewhere, munitions salesmen have rushed to the spot to demonstrate their superior killing devices. Army officers have been known to give testimonials for certain superior murder devices—confidentially, of course. And liberal commissions have been allowed army, navy and marine officers for placing orders for war materials.

In the light of all this, is it any wonder that the military is in favor of war? One could hardly believe that men were for war because of the honor involved—the honor of killing somebody off who presumably needed killing off in order to make the world safe for something or other—; now we know that they are for war because of the profits in war. This makes it a business—and Big Business, at that. As one said, combine Sherman's definition of war with the modern definitions, and you have, "War is a hell of a business."

IF YOU MUST DRINK

To the married man who cannot get along without his drinks, a subscriber suggests the following: Start a saloon in your own house. Be the only customer. You will have no license to pay. Go to your wife and give her $2 to buy a gallon of whiskey. Remember, there are 69 drinks in one gallon. Buy your drinks from no one except your wife. By the time the first gallon is gone she will have $8 to put in the bank and $2 to start business again. Should you live ten years and continue to buy booze from her, and then die with snakes in your boots, she will have money to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, marry a decent man, and quit thinking about you.—Ex.

According to a London, England, liquor paper, a Mr. Andre L. Simon, European wine salesman, recently spent some time in the United States with an elaborate scheme to "graduate at least 100,000 American boys and girls" into the ranks of confirmed wine users.

THE SONGS I'D LIKE TO SING by Lawrence Hawthorne

I'd like to write of humble things—
The common joys and cares of every day.
I'd like to tell a tale that brings
A brighter smile, or drives a tear away.
I'd like to paint a little scene
Of good old-fashioned comradeship and fun,
Where life is wholesome and serene,
And restful sleep is found when day is done.

I'd like to sing the simple songs,
That children might forsake their play to hear.
I'd like to talk to weary throngs
And have them heartened by my words of cheer.
I'd like to voice the happiness
That only humble folks can truly know;
And search for language to express
The beauty of contentment's kindly glow.

I'd like to chant love's tender lays;
And laud the charm of Nature everywhere.
I'd like to sing of childhood days,
Of home, and of a mother's faithful care.
I'd like to touch the wistful chords
Of memory, and somehow play again
That gentle music which affords
Unending pleasure to the hearts of men.

Oen's Exhibits Will Be A Treat for Housewives

Things that will gladden the heart of the modern housewife and lighten her labor will be exhibited by the Oen Mercantile company at the annual Spring Exposition which opens in the Auditorium on Wednesday, April 3rd.

Among the exhibits will be the Kitchenkook, which is described as the world's finest gasoline pressure stove. The stove has a number of outstanding features, Luther Haugen, who is in charge of the exhibits, states, and he invites the ladies to see it demonstrated at the exposition.

Other exhibits of note which will be featured by Oen's are the General Electric line of refrigerators and stoves. These stoves are of exceptional beauty, durability and economy, Mr. Haugen Electric company's guarantee of states, and of course, carry the General Electric company's guarantee of perfection just as do the refrigerators.

The Dexter Washing machine m The Dexter electric washing will also be on display, Mr. Haugen announces, and will give the housewives an opportunity to see a real modern, up-to-the-minute washer, having all the latest doodads for saving the housewife's time and temper. There is no Blue Monday when you have a Dexter, Mr. Haugen assures us.

Auto Tax Fight --

House Bill Amended

The Senate Motor Vehicle committee had amended the House measure to conform to the terms of a bill introduced in the Senate by Senator William L. Roepke, of Fairbault. This bill would cut the tax on cars of 2,000 pounds or less to 50 per cent of that prior to 1933, and that on cars over 2,000 pounds to 60 per cent of that prior to 1933.

Maria Erdman

Senator Roepke, who is chairman of the Motor Vehicles committee led off the argument with a plea for the adoption of his committee's report favoring the reduced license rate.

Senator Patrick Farnand of Hibbing, one of the liberal members, promptly arose to attack Senator Roepke's argument, saying that the "important question is that of revenue for the Minnesota Department of Highways."

The state is required to match federal aid road funds dollar for dollar. The United States government has allotted $7,000,000 to Minnesota for the next biennium on these conditions. Highway work will provide jobs for 14,000 men, Senator Farnand pointed out, and the state should raise sufficient revenue to avail itself of all possible federal aid road funds.

The car owner, Senator Farnand emphasized, pays no other tax on his car but his license fee and his tax on the 2.4 per cent basis is much lower than personal property tax on his car would be.

The Senate finally approved the continuance of the lower fees by a vote of 40 to 18, and the question now goes back to the House. The differences between the two houses are due to be thrashed out in conference. Senator Tungseth voted with the conservative majority.

KEEP TURKEY HENS FIT FOR LATE MAR. EGG PRODUDTION

Don't fret about too early egg production from turkey hens, but lend every effort to have the flock fit when laying time really comes. Minnesota turkey breeders who expect their hens to start laying seriously before late March are failing to reckon with the weather and Old Mother Nature, says Dr. W. A. Billings, extension turkey specialist, University Farm, St. Paul.

Eggs laid earlier than late March would be difficult to keep from getting chilled anyway, according to Billings. Late in March, when the sun is high and the breezes blow balmy from the south, turkey hens get ready to lay providing they are physically fit.

Hens should be placed on a laying ration about the middle of February. A ration as good as any and cheaper than many is the regular five-point ration, which is equal parts of ground corn, bran, middlings, oats and meat scraps. To each 100 pounds of the foregoing mixture should be added a quart of fresh cod-liver oil, about 5 pounds of pure bonemeal, and one pound of salt. This simple, basic mash may be altered to include some dried milk, alfalfa leaf meal, or other such feeds.

To avoid having hens badly cut up during the mating season, Dr. Billings suggests not using overlarge toms with young hens, outfitting the hens with blankets or saddles, and third, covering the toms' claws with short pieces of rubber tubing stuck fast with tire cement.

CONSUMER PAYS

The sales tax would be paid by the consumer . . . The argument that it would be borne by the one who directly pays it is falacious. There is no profit margin for the average merchant which is large enough to absorb the tax . . . Experience has shown that the prices of commodities would be raised much higher than the amount of the tax . . . .

Hank — Columbus wasn't so many! All he did was to discover America.

Frank — Yeah! And now see what repeal has done to it!

Pete: "Did you see that girl? She smiled at me."

Jake: "I laughed out loud the first time I saw you.'"

KEEP TURKEY HENS FIT FOR LATE MAR. EGG PRODUDTION

Don't fret about too early egg production from turkey hens, but lend every effort to have the flock fit when laying time really comes. Minnesota turkey breeders who expect their hens to start laying seriously before late March are failing to reckon with the weather and Old Mother Nature, says Dr. W. A. Billings, extension turkey specialist, University Farm, St. Paul.

Eggs laid earlier than late March would be difficult to keep from getting chilled anyway, according to Billings. Late in March, when the sun is high and the breezes blow balmy from the south, turkey hens get ready to lay providing they are physically fit.

Hens should be placed on a laying ration about the middle of February. A ration as good as any and cheaper than many is the regular five-point ration, which is equal parts of ground corn, bran, middlings, oats and meat scraps. To each 100 pounds of the foregoing mixture should be added a quart of fresh cod-liver oil, about 5 pounds of pure bonemeal, and one pound of salt. This simple, basic mash may be altered to include some dried milk, alfalfa leaf meal, or other such feeds.

To avoid having hens badly cut up during the mating season, Dr. Billings suggests not using overlarge toms with young hens, outfitting the hens with blankets or saddls, and third, covering the toms' claws with short pieces of rubber tubing stuck fast with tire cement.

AUTHORITY CLAIMS BEER CAUSE OF ALCOHOLISM

Dr. Holitscher Describes the Effects of Beer in Middle Europe

Since many of the states have written into their statute books the glaring fiction that 3.2 beer is not intoxicating, it is natural that interest in the beverage has grown rapidly. A recent statement by Dr. Holitscher of Czechoslovakia is, therefore, of double interest. His statements constitute a scientific discussion of results of the beverage in Middle Europe, where the people are supposed, by environment and heredity, to be largely immune from the evils of beer which are so glaring and so devastating in this country:

"The countries with the highest consumption of liquor, reduced to absolute alcohol," says the doctor, are not the spirits countries, but the wine and beer countries, such as France, Italy, Switzerland, and Germany.

"One might perhaps suppose that alcohol taken in the form of beer is less harmful than taken in the form of distilled liquors. Not at all. Alcohol remains alcohol under whatever form it is introduced into the organism. The great dilution of alcohol in beer may make it a little less harmful for the mucous membranes of the throat or stomach, but as soon as alcohol is absorbed into the blood, it is the quantity of liquor which has been taken and not its form that matters. Not only nations but individuals are in many countries bringing more absolute alcohol into their organism through beer than spirits drinking.

If we study critically all the diseases which are rightly attributed to alcohol, we see that they can be provoked as well by beer as by spirits. There are some diseases which attack beer drinkers in a greater proportion than spirits drinkers. In the inebriate asylums of middle Europe, most of the patients are almost exclusively beer or wine drinkers."

All these observations would apply equally well in America. Dr. Holitscher proceeds in words that exactly fit our conditions in the United States, when he says:

"The necessary fight against beer is made more difficult, because the brewers are powerful and possessed of considerable means with which they control the government, the parliament, and the press."

Pontiac Is Not A High-Priced Car

"Directly on the heels of the first public showing of the 1935 Pontiac improved straight eight and DeLuxe Six models a few weeks ago, a flood of wires and messages began pouring into the central offices of the company telling of a public reception unprecedented in the history of this popular car," T. M. Thronson, local Pontiac dealer, stated this week. "It is the most beautiful thing on wheels," is the expression frequently used, Mr. Thronson said, "and the satisfuying thing about it is that it is not a high priced car, much as this statement may upset the popular notions."

Pontiac gives America its second big thrill of the year with the presentation of a new standard Six identical in practically every essential detail with the DeLuxe Six, but priced as low as $615 f.o.b. Pontiac, Michigan.

Models of this Beautiful contribution to the motor world by Pontiac will be on display at the Auto Show which opens next week at the ew Municipal Auditorium, Mr. Thronson stated. He invites the public to see it and to ask for a demonstration so that they may judge for themselves the real motoring comfort this high class car provides.

Minnesota Sets New Record in Bangs Test

Minnesota state and federal government agencies cooperating in the control of Bang's disease, (contagious abortion) of cattle, set a new state record for numbers of cattle tested in a single month by testing 84,070 head in February. The best previous record, made in January, was 70,893 head.

Since last August, when the Bang's disease eradication program was started in this state, a total of 294,474 head of cattle, in 17,357 herds, have been tested. Of those, about 40,000 head, or 13.6 per cent of all cattle tested, have reacted to the test, indicating they were infected with this disease.

The majority of the diseased animals have been marketed (Bang's disease does not affect the food value of the beef carcass) in an effort to keep the disease from spreading to healthy cattle. Indemnities totaling $450,000 have been paid to owners who have disposed of cattle in compliance with their Bang's disease eradication contracts.

About 13,000 herds, for which testing agreements have been signed, remain to be tested, W. J. Frotz of St. Paul, in charge of the Bang's disease control for the federal government in Minnesota, announces. Many Minnesota cattle owners, in addition to those who have already signed testing contracts, have applied for testing contracts, he says, but acceptance of applications has been discontinued until the cost of indemnifying owners of herds now under contract can be more accurately determined.

Indemnities already paid by the government for diseased animals have averaged about $20 per head, Dr. Frotz asserts, but this average will be reduced for cattle yet to be tested if prices of cattle continue to rise. This is true, he explains, because the indemnity paid on each animal is the difference between its appraised value for breeding and production purposes and the return it brings on the market.

"Naturally the smaller the indemnity paid per animal," he explains, "the more owners can be indemnified. An additional appropriation by Congress would also permit the extension of this program to additional herds."

LONG HIRES EXTRA HELP

Huey Long, who gets more mail than President Roosevelt, now has a staff of about 40 employees, with about 75 per cent of them working on a day shift and 25 per cent on a night shift to try to keep up with the heavy inflow of mail from all parts of the country. On last Sunday, March 10, Senator Longs office received 15,019 letters and on the next day, Monday, the letter count was 31,211. The daily average lately has been running between these figures. Mr. Long spoke to 15,000 people in Philadelphia Thursday evening, March 14. As many more could not get into the auditorium.

Safety Is Important, Say Dodge Engineers

"Traffic accidents are as old as wheels," says Louis Borchert, of the Borchert and Johnson Motor Co., local Dodge and Plymouth dealers, "but, Dodge engineers have, from the very beginning, been fighting the accident by the development of engineering improvements that make for safer driving. Dependability and safety have been identified with Dodge cars as long back as any of us can remember. These factors have always been a strong motivating influence in their design and construction."

Mr. Borchert announces that Dodge cars, the Dodge truck, (which has caused a sensation among truck and fleet operators by its exceptional performance) and the Plymouth will be on display at the Spring Exposition at the auditorium next week and he invites those who attend this spring festivity to see these fine motor cars.

Mr. Borchert points out the sensational engine refinements of the new Plymouth with its new fuel and oil economy and durability. It is truly the first high-speed safety car, and it is styled without thought of price, he says.

RELIEF WORKERS LOOKOUT FOR HISTORIC FINDS

Cooperating with the University of Minnesota, Walter F. MacGregor, director of the work division, Minnesota SERA, has instructed all relief workers to be on the lookout for posible anthropological discoveries during work on SERA projects.

"In deep subsurface diggings there may be found, once in a while, important human bones, and stone, wood or copper implements made by ancient man, which are of great scientific value," it was pointed out by Dr. A. E. Jenks, head of the University anthropology department.

"Even small pieces of pottery, the size of a silver dollar, have their meaning to us in the study of the distribution of Indian culture in the state," he emphasized.

The state engineer has requested to be advised promptly by telephone or wire, should any of the above items be discovered. In such an event, the specimens either would be sent to the university fgor study, or the university would arrange to have experienced men complete the diggings in order that finds may be preserved.

UNIQUE STRUCTURE WILL HOUSE ST. PAUL ZOO

An $80,000 building designed according to conceptions of Noah's famous ark and intended as a shelter for St. Paul's municipal zoo will rise this spring in Como park as a joint relief project of the city and the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration).

The structure, 150 feet long and 40 feet wide, wil lprovide space for 22 cages, with an aquarium beneath each cage, and a large monkey house. In addition, the ark will contain a kitchen, a refectory and rest rooms. Manual craftsmanship will be exploited to the fullest in decorating and construction work.

Visitors to the zoo in the winter may view the animals from the interior of the building, and in the summer, by means of panels in the outer walls, the cages will be exposed to spectators from without.

More than 250 St. Paul relief workers will be given employment in the construction. Costs will be shared by the SERA and the city of St. Paul.

TRANSIENT LABORERS CLEAR WINONA POOL BASIN

Two hundred men from Minnesota transient camps will be at work, near Winona during the entire month of March, clearing the Minnesota side of the pool basin above the nine-foot channel dam No. 7 at the first project in a pool clearing program that may ultimately employ 5,000 persons, it is announced by L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator, Minnesota SERA.

A similiar number of men is furnished by the state of Wisconsin to clear the Trompeleau side of the pool. To clear the six dam sites in the Upper Mississippi, below the Twin Cities, army engineers estimate that 3,874 000 man-hours of labor will be required, with 3,600 man-months at Pool No. 7 alone.

The Rumanian Government has granted permission to Henry Ford to establish an automobile factory near Ploesti, Rumania. The Ford company plans to invest three billion lei ($30,000,000) in the new establishment which will produce annually 3,000 cars and give work to 6,000 men.

RELIEF WORKERS LOOKOUT FOR HISTORIC FINDS

Cooperating with the University of Minnesota, Walter F. MacGregor, director of the work division, Minnesota SERA, has instructed all relief workers to be on the lookout for posible anthropological discoveries during work on SERA projects.

"In deep subsurface diggings there may be found, once in a while, important human bones, and stone, wood or copper implements made by ancient man, which are of great scientific value," it was pointed out by Dr. A. E. Jenks, head of the University anthropology department.

"Even small pieces of pottery, the size of a silver dollar, have their meaning to us in the study of the distribution of Indian culture in the state," he emphasized.

The state engineer has requested to be advised promptly by telephone or wire, should any of the above items be discovered. In such an event, the specimens either would be sent to the university fgor study, or the university would arrange to have experienced men complete the diggings in order that finds may be preserved.

UNIQUE STRUCTURE WILL HOUSE ST. PAUL ZOO

An $80,000 building designed according to conceptions of Noah's famous ark and intended as a shelter for St. Paul's municipal zoo will rise this spring in Como park as a joint relief project of the city and the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration).

The structure, 150 feet long and 40 feet wide, will provide space for 22 cages, with an aquarium beneath each cage, and a large monkey house. In addition, the ark will contain a kitchen, a refectory and rest rooms. Manual craftsmanship will be exploited to the fullest in decorating and construction work.

Visitors to the zoo in the winter may view the animals from the interior of the building, and in the summer, by means of panels in the outer walls, the cages will be exposed to spectators from without.

More than 250 St. Paul relief workers will be given employment in the construction. Costs will be shared by the SERA and the city of St. Paul.

TRANSIENT LABORERS CLEAR WINONA POOL BASIN

Two hundred men from Minnesota transient camps will be at work near Winona during the entire month of March, clearing the Minnesota side of the pool basin above the nine-foot channel dam No. 7 at the first project in a pool clearing program that may ultimately employ 5,000 persons, it is announced by L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator, Minnesota SERA.

A similiar number of men is furnished by the state of Wisconsin to clear the Trompeleau side of the pool. To clear the six dam sites in the Upper Mississippi, below the Twin Cities, army engineers estimate that 3,874,000 man-hours of labor will be required, with 3,600 man-months at Pool No. 7 alone.

The Rumanian Government has granted permission to Henry Ford to establish an automobile factory near Ploesti, Rumania. The Ford company plans to invest three billion lei ($30,000,000) in the new establishment which will produce annually 3,000 cars and give work to 6,000 men.

AUTHORITY CLAIMS BEER CAUSE OF ALCOHOLISM

Dr. Holitscher Describes the Effects of Beer in Middle Europe

Since many of the states have written into their statute books the glaring fiction that 3.2 beer is not intoxicating, it is natural that interest in the beverage has grown rapidly. A recent statement by Dr. Holitscher of Czechoslovakia is, therefore, of double interest. His statements constitute a scientific discussion of results of the beverage in Middle Europe, where the people are supposed, by environment and heredity, to be largely immune from the evils of beer which are so glaring and so devastating in this country:

"The countries with the highest consumption of liquor, reduced to absolute alcohol," says the doctor, are not the spirits countries, but the wine and beer countries, such as France, Italy, Switzerland, and Germany.

"One might perhaps suppose that alcohol taken in the form of beer is less harmful than taken in the form of distilled liquors. Not at all. Alcohol remains alcohol under whatever form it is introduced into the organism. The great dilution of alcohol in beer may make it a little less harmful for the mucous membranes of the throat or stomach, but as soon as alcohol is absorbed into the blood, it is the quantity of liquor which has been taken and not its form that matters. Not only nations but individuals are in many countries bringing more absolute alcohol into their organism through beer than spirits drinking.

If we study critically all the diseases which are rightly attributed to alcohol, we see that they can be provoked as well by beer as by spirits. There are some diseases which attack beer drinkers in a greater proportion than spirits drinkers. In the inebriate asylums of middle Europe, most of the patients are almost exclusively beer or wine drinkers."

All these observations would apply equally well in America. Dr. Holitscher proceeds in words that exactly fit our conditions in the United States, when he says:

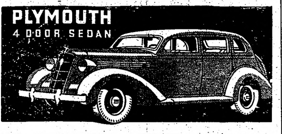
"The necessary fight against beer is made more difficult, because the brewers are powerful and possessed of considerable means with which they control the government, the parliament, and the press."

Pontiac Is Not A High-Priced Car

"Directly on the heels of the first public showing of the 1935 Pontiac improved straight eight and DeLuxe Six models a few weeks ago, a flood of wires and messages began pouring into the central offices of the company telling of a public reception unprecedented in the history of this popular car," T. M. Thronson, local Pontiac dealer, stated this week. "It is the most beautiful thing on wheels," is the expression frequently used, Mr. Thronson said, "and the satisfuying thing about it is that it is not a high priced car, much as this statement may upset the popular notions."

Pontiac gives America its second big thrill of the year with the presentation of a new standard Six identical in practically every essential detail with the DeLuxe Six, but priced as low as $615 f.o.b. Pontiac, Michigan.

Models of this Beautiful contribution to the motor world by Pontiac will be on display at the Auto Show which opens next week at the new Municipal Auditorium, Mr. Thronson stated. He invites the public to see it and to ask for a demonstration so that they may judge for themselves the real motoring comfort this high class car provides.



Minnesota Sets New Record in Bangs Test

Minnesota state and federal government agencies cooperating in the control of Bang's disease, (contagious abortion) of cattle, set a new state record for numbers of cattle tested in a single month by testing 84,070 head in February. The best previous record, made in January, was 70,893 head.

Since last August, when the Bang's disease eradication program was started in this state, a total of 294,474 head of cattle, in 17,357 herds, have been tested. Of those, about 40,000 head. or 13.6 per cent of all cattle tested, have reacted to the test, indicating they were infected with this disease.

The majority of the diseased animals have been marketed (Bang's disease does not affect the food value of the beef carcass) in an effort to keep the disease from spreading to healthy cattle. Indemnities totaling $450,000 have been paid to owners who have disposed of cattle in compliance with their Bang's disease eradication contracts.

About 13,000 herds, for which testing agreements have been signed, remain to be tested, W. J. Frotz of St. Paul, in charge of the Bang's disease control for the federal government in Minnesota, announces. Many Minnesota cattle owners, in addition to those who have already signed testing contracts, have applied for testing contracts, he says, but acceptance of applications has been discontinued until the cost of indemnifying owners of herds now under contract can be more accurately determined.

Indemnities already paid by the government for diseased animals have averaged about $20 per head, Dr. Frotz asserts, but this average will be reduced for cattle yet to be tested if prices of cattle continue to rise. This is true, he explains, because the indemnity paid on each animal is the difference between its appraised value for breeding and production purposes and the return it brings on the market.

"Naturally the smaller the indemnity paid per animal," he explains, "the more owners can be indemnified. An additional appropriation by Congress would also permit the extension of this program to additional herds."

LONG HIRES EXTRA HELP

Huey Long, who gets more mail than President Roosevelt, now has a staff of about 40 employees, with about 75 per cent of them working on a day shift and 25 per cent on a night shift to try to keep up with the heavy inflow of mail from all parts of the country. On last Sunday, March 10, Senator Longs office received 15,019 letters and on the next day, Monday, the letter count was 31,211. The daily average lately has been running between these figures. Mr. Long spoke to 15,000 people in Philadelphia Thursday evening, March 14. As many more could not get into the auditorium.

Safety Is Important, Say Dodge Engineers

"Traffic accidents are as old as wheels," says Louis Borchert, of the Borchert and Johnson Motor Co., local Dodge and Plymouth dealers, "but, Dodge engineers have, from the very beginning, been fighting the accident by the development of engineering improvements that make for safer driving. Dependability and safety have been identified with Dodge cars as long back as any of us can remember. These factors have always been a strong motivating influence in their design and construction."

Mr. Borchert announces that Dodge cars, the Dodge truck, (which has caused a sensation among truck and fleet operators by its exceptional performance) and the Plymouth will be on display at the Spring Exposition at the auditorium next week and he invites those who attend this spring festivity to see these fine motor cars.

Mr. Borchert points out the sensational engine refinements of the new Plymouth with its new fuel and oil economy and durability. It is truly the first high-speed safety car, and it is styled without thought of price, he says.

Ford V-8 Wins World's Speed Boat Title

Photo shows Harold Wilson of Ingersoll, Ontario, driving "Little Miss Canada the Third" powered with a Ford V-8 engine to win the first world championship in the new 225 cubic inch international power boat class at the Canadian National Exhibition. At his side is Miss Lorna Reid, his mechanic. Both are University of Toronto students.

Wilson's victory was on points under rules of the American Power Boat Association, and by reason of a slashing victory in the first heat and two close finishes in second place. Exhibition crowds were electrified in the third and final heat when Wilson, after losing scores of yards by reason of a delayed start, waged a valiant fight for the lead. With his engine roaring wide open he managed to flash past 6 competing boats but was unable to overtake the heat winner, finishing a scant 75 yards in its wake.

The Exhibition races mark the first running of an international championship in the new speed boat racing class which promises to become one of the most sporting of all power boat contests. Wilson's winning boat and 6 other original entries, all with Ford V-8 engines, were the only competing boats fitted with motors of automobile type. Others were powered with marine engines.

Three of the five leading point winners were driven by Ford V-8 engines. The others, besides Wilson's entry, being the "Wilmer Third," driven by Dr. C. H. Bagley, of Baltimore, Maryland, and the "Riptide," promoted by Al Schwarzler of New York City.

Gustafson and son Display a Variety Of Motor Products

Some of the most outstanding of the products of motordom will be displayed by C. Gustafson and Son at the Spring Exposition which opens in this city on Wednesday. In the Exhibit will be included, models of Chrysler cars, Plymouth cars, International trucks and the Farmall tractor.

"Many extra money-saving features are built into the handsome six-cylinder International 1½ to 2 ton Model C-35 truck," Mr. Gustafson stated this week. "This moderately priced truck with its V-type radiator, satin finish aluminum grille, and chromium-plated bumper is available in three wheelbases and is adapted to the mounting of bodies to meet every transportation requirement, in which trucks of this capacity are practical. Among the many desirable features are the six-cylinder valve-in-the-head engine with replacable cylinders; exhaust-valve seat inserts; pistons with four rings; heavy counterbalanced four-bearing crankshaft; rifle-drilled connecting rod bearings; vibration-dampened clutch and a multitude of other special features."

The Farm-all-12 tractor is built by McCormick-Deering and is an all-around general purpose tractor. It will do all the farm chores including plowing, disking, seeding, planting, mowing and cultivating. The tractor has adjustable tread, and exceptional clearance making it adaptable for a wide variety of uses. Included is a power-take-off, making it avilable for belt work.

The Chyrsler Airstream sixes and eights uphold every tradition of Chrysler leadership. Mr. Gustafson stated, and has the fine features which have always been characteristic of this high quality motor car. Streamline styling is very much in evidence on all models and there is an almost total absence of appendages which retard the car's progress thru the air. It is luxuriously appointed thruout.

The new Plymouth too, Mr. Gustafson says, is a car that must be seen and driven to be appreciated. If you get a demonstration of its fine performance, its floating power will just simply spoil you for any other car in the low priced field.

Forum subscription advances to $1.50 per year Effective April 1st.

George Swanson and son Allen and John Magenson and sons of Thief River Falls visited at John O. Swanson's Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, Deloris and Gordon of Fairbanks, Alaska, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Larson and son Raymond of St. Hilaire were dinner guests at the Emil Larson home Sunday. The Smith family remained for a longer visit.

Andrew Ortloff and Reuben Rux and Harold Lindbloom were Thief River Falls callers Tuesday.

Mrs. Annie Lindbloom spent the week end at Thief River with Mable Lindbloom.

Mrs. Emil Larson and Lillian were Saturday afternoon calers at the John O. Swanson home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Scholin and family were Sunday evening callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Scholin.

CLOVERLEAF

Mr. and Mrs. Iver Anderson and children visited with the Berg family in T. R. Falls Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lundgren motored to Henning Sunday.

Belle Tieman went to Fargo, N. D,. on Friday. She will take a course in beauty culture there.

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Skibicki spent the week end with relatives in Roseau.

Mr .and Mrs. Phinney Poppenhagen were business callers in T. R. Falls Wednesday.

School News

Those who had perfect attendance for March are Thelma, Lee Roy, Myrtle and Ovedia Anderson, Vincent and Clarence Skibicki, Doris, Evelyn and Eva Kotlan.

Honor roll pupils for March are Dorothy Skibicki, Doris Kotlan, Lee Roy and Delpha Anderson, and Earl Poppenhagen.

In spelling, Vincent Skibicki's pussy willow branch received the most "pussies."

The winner in the Automobile Race in Arithmetic were Lee Roy Anderson, Doris Kotlan, and Thelma Anderson, respectively.

Evelyn Kotlan is the owner of the greatest number of Golden Politeness Keys.

During Industrial Arts Friday, each pupil made an Easter Basket and a rabbit. The object is to see whose rabbit has the most eggs in his basket by Easter. An egg is put into the basket each time a pupil gets ninety or over in arithmetic.

Ford Dealers Promise An Unusual Exhibit

A decidedly "different" exhibit is promised those who attend the auto show at the auditorium next week by Lund and Tunberg, local Ford dealers. Discreet, questioning and persistent assurances that the public wants to know all about it and should be informed failed to shake any further information from Frank Tunberg, co-partner of the firm. He remained adamant, and insists that we must all "just wait and see." He is like that, sort of stubborn-like.

One thing we are assured of, however, is that the new 1935 Ford V-8 will be on exhibition and there will be a man who "knows his onions" on hand to tell the public all about its superior features.

ON OCEAN WAVES

Hubby—You're carrying altogether too much sail.

Wifey—Why should that worry you?

Hubby—Because I have to raise the wind.

What Some Lack

The physician was giving an informal talk on physiology. "Also," he remarked, "it has recently been found that the human body contains sulphur."

"Sulphur!" exclaimed the girl in the blue-and-white blazer. "And how much sulphur is there, then, in a girl's body?"

"Oh, the amount varies," said the doctor.

"Ah!" returned the girl. "And is that why some of us make better matches than others?"

BRIGHT LIGHTS

First Stude—What do you think is the biggest factor in making a genius?

Second Stude—Midnight oil, I think.

Tides In

Bobby (at the seaside)—When is high tide?

Old Salt—Five-fifty-five. I've told you a dozen times already.

Bobby—I know, but I like to see your whiskers wiggle when you say five-fifty-five.

ERIE

Marie Hoffman, who spent six weeks in Tabor visiting her sister and other relatives and friends, returned home Monday. She was accompanied home by Albert Vonasek and Mrs. William Arnold, and were overngiht guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Hoffman.

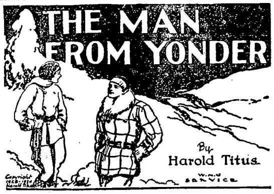
THE MAN FROM YONDER



By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

Buller could be heard bounding from his bed in the next room. Able lurched to the door to see Ben Elliott flying toward the mill-yard, silhouetted against the dull glow of angry flame which showed through cracks in the mill.

The wide doorways to the ground floor were rectangles of dull orange. The fire was in there, beneath the deck, under the carriage, eating into the very vitals of the mill.

A water barrel stood beneath the slide, its bucket dangling from a stick laid across the top, but the barrel was empty. Ben seized the bucket, smashed the thin ice that had formed over the hot pond, filled his pail and rushed through the open doorways into the smoke. He had a clear sense of Buller's voice crying the alarm and of answering shouts as the men began turning out of their blankets.

Ben soused his bucket of water into the heart of the burning area and it scattered the blaze with a wooshing sound. The flame did not go out; it only scattered. His eyes and his reason told him, then, what his nostrils had failed to register in his first excitement.

"Gasoline!" he panted as he ran out, colliding with Buller in the doorway. "Somebody touched her off! . . . Soaked with gasoline in there. . . . Look, it's spreading fast!"

Men were coming, shouting as they ran through the darkness. In all stages of partial dress they came, crowding close to Elliott and Buller.

"Stand still, you, and keep still!" Ben snapped. "You, McFee, and you and you,"—pointing to individuals. "Roll that barrel of salt up from the siding. Now! Snap into it!"

"You and you and you,"—indicating other men—"get every bucket in the place. Water buckets from the barrels in the yard and along the tramways, pails from houses, kettles, anything that'll hold and carry water.

"You, there; get me an ax and a shovel. Snappy, now!"

His voice had bite to it and as he toiled the men off for these explicit errands, they went on th run.

"Buller! Get upstairs and knock a hole in the floor, to the left of the saw. Couple of boards wide. So long,"—measuring with his spread hands. "We've got to get that flame drawing straight up instead of mushrooming all over the floor bottom. Form the rest of your men into a bucket brigade and pass water up the slide. . . . Fast as you can! Don't anybody think about anything but sending up full buckets and taking down empty ones. You stand by the hole, Buller, and knock her down as she comes through. Not so fast, now, that you spill water and drop pails. Hold your heads and your feet. It's our only chance to lick it. . . . Hike, now!"

Grunting and cursing, four huskies came lugging the barrel of salt and Ben, trying to still his excited breathing, snapped his fingers as he waited for their arrival.

"Gasoline!" he shouted to Able, seeing him for the first time. "Water won't touch it! We've got to smother it and we can't get sand handily and salt should do, if Buller can hold her when she sticks her head through the floor!

"Up here, boys! Close, now!" Ben heaved on the heavy barrel of salt himself, rolling it in to the doorway which led directly into the fire. "All right. . . . Jake! Into the bucket line, all of you!" He swung his ax on a wire hoop and the barrel popped open. He struck again to clear away staves and drove a dozen quick blows into the lumpy salt that spilled out, to pulverize it.

Next he grabbed up his shovel, scooped it full and disappeared into the smoke.

His eyes smarted but he took his time, blinked and surveyed the fire. Then he swung his shovel upward and sideways and sent its burden in a plastering, spattering smear at the center of a particularly hot spot. The blue-green-orange combination of living fire gave up at once to a saffron smudge.

Ben leaped into the open again, breathed deeply, filled his shovel and doing his best to hold his breath, edged back into the smoke. He drove that shovel of salt hard upon flame, too, and retreated at once. A dozen trips, and he had the flame down in an area the size of a blanket. He worked to the right, then going further into the mill, coughing and reeling, and when he emerged that time he retched painfully. He stood over his salt pile a moment, gulping fresh air while nausea shook him. He breathed quickly, forcing his lungs to pump deep and fast, sending clearing life through his arteries. His head steadied, he scooped up more salt and compressing his lips against the shaking coughs, ducked into the mill.

Faster and faster the buckets came up, some big, some small, now and then one that leaked away its precious contents. Fire found hold on the edges of the hole Buller had made in the floor. Little tongues of flame ate into the dry wood and curled upward. To Buller's right a finger of fire crept up between two boards; beyond it another appeared. In a dozen places fire was coming through the floor and Buller, swaying on his feet as he coughed, turned to the next man in dismay.

"He said . . . " he choked. "Got to have air! Move up!"

The line moved up. The man who had taken Buller's place soused a bucket of water across the floor, knocking down those tendrils that wormed through from below. Then he attacked the uprushing column of flame again.

Down below Ben Elliott had the heart of the burning litter a writhing mass of saffron smoke. He started out, fell and crawled to the entry, got his knees beneath him and retched again and again. His eyes smarted madly and streamed tears; he coughed as he vomited and it seemed as though he never would find strength to rise. But, he did after a moment and renewed his attack.

"Here, you! Three men. . . . Two buckets each!" Ben croaked as he ran out to the foot of the slide.

"Throw it high, and hard. So!" he cried hoarsely and flung the first water himself with a wide, sweeping, overhead swing. It knocked fire off the nigger, blotted out an orange panel on a heavy sill. "Now, you!" he cried to the next man.

They filled their own buckets and that duty took them into the fresh air, cleared their lungs, kept the nausea down, steadied both legs and heads. With hissing splashes the water from their pails went sloshing against the overhead woodwork and gradually the glare through the thick smoke subsided.

"Getting her!" Ben panted as Able tried to say something to him.

"Getting Her!"

"Getting her!' He coughed and his words had come in a half strangle but, even so, the exultation in his tone was unmistakable.

Living flame no longer leaped and roared through the hole in the floor. Thick smoke swept upward but that was all and as Ben ran up the icy slide for the first time and saw this he cried out:

"Good work, Buller! Over there, though: look!"

Fire had taken fresh hold in a greasy timber and was worming its way up beneath the trimmer saw. Buller dashed a half dozen pails of water on the spot and it went black.

"Keep going, Buller!" Ben cried. "I'll take half your men."

He went slipping down the slide and at the bottom called men from the bucket line.

"Stretch out the rest of you!" he called. "Now, this way, you lads; in here and mop her up, and make it fast!"

Stubborn flames ate into the litter on the ground floor. Again and again they broke out, but the driving heat was gone, roaring gases no longer gave impetus to the spread of destruction as the first need for speed became less imperative.

Not until the final curl of smoke had been subdued completely did Ben Elliott relax. Then, with lantern lighted, he entered the saw floor, completely ice glazed, charred in places, and surveyed the damage. As he swung his lantern and looked about, peering at timbers eaten half away, at burned belting, at other vital damage, he moved slowly, said little, as a man will who is thinking soberly.

He stopped beside Able Armitage finally.

"Well, the insurance'll cover it," the old justice said, as if trying to make the best of things.

Ben laughed shortly.

"But she's two weeks idle at the inside. And belting gone and a good many other things. If—

"Say, chum!"

It was the night watchman, sheathed in flakes of ice from his waist down, whom Ben hailed.

"Where were you?"

"Eating, when it broke out." Ben only nodded. The watchman, by long custom, went to the boarding house kitchen for his midnight meal where food was kept warm for him. "I went through the yard and the mill, just like you told me to do. I looked in at the boiler the last thing. I hadn't been out of here ten minutes before I just happened to glance through the window and see it."

"Yeah. Gasoline starts in a hurry."

"Gasoline!" the watchman croaked.

"Sure." Ben laughed drily. "The ground floor was drenched with it. They'd scraped rubbish into piles and soaked them, too. They almost did a good job. Almost five minutes' start, or if I hadn't happened to see a garage fire put out with salt once where nothing else was handy to smother it, and it'd have been all day with us."

He rubbed his chin, thoughtfully.

"Didn't see anybody? Or hear anybody?"

"Not a soul or a sound."

Elliott looked up. No snow was falling.

"Buller!" he called. The foreman, face blackened, eyebrows gone, came up at his hail. "Herd this crew in close. It snowed early in the evening. Maybe I'll want to do a job of trailing and I don't want tracks all over the country."

He did his job of trailing. The fresh tracks of a single man led away from the trampled snow about the mill toward decks of logs. The tracks went out along the siding toward town but Ben did not follow far. He stopped when he found a three-gallon demijohn badly concealed beneath the end of a log. He sniffed its neck and nodded grimly. The fuel of an incendiary had been carried to the mill in that container.

"And now," Able said, after he also had sniffed the bottle in Buller's house, "what's to be done?" He tried to smile but deep trouble was in his old eyes.

For the first time since he had come to Hoot Owl Ben Elliott shook his head dubiously as he dropped into a chair. He was both grave and troubled.

"They're getting the least bit rough," he observed.

"Rather rough, I'd say!" Able's face flared suddenly in righteous wrath. "D—n Nick Brandon! I'd give a good deal to hang this night's work on him!

"It'll take no less than a miracle now to pull us through. Two weeks to get the mill running? Benny, in that time we'll be busted wide open! They'll have a case against me, I'll be walked as administrator and the timber will be at Brandon's mercy."

"Yeah. . . . Wide open . . . and at his mercy."

Able rose and paced the small room, hands in his hip pockets. He came to a halt before Elliott and eyed him narrowly. He stood so a moment as if in debate with himself.

"We had a fire," he said. "Not the kind you fight with fire, exactly. . . . But old Don told Bird-Eye that you'd have to use fire to fight another kind with, didn't he?"

Ben smiled slowly.

"You're thinking of the old timer's letter, eh? . . . Well, maybe . . . But we're not licked yet. Something may turn up. No, I guess I won't use whatever it was Stuart gave me just yet!"

The old man shook his head and resumed his pacing.

"What can turn up to give us a fighting chance, now?" he muttered.

South Pole Once Warmer; Various Places Now Cold

There is evidence that while the gigantic dinosaurs of 150,000,000 years ago were wallowing in swamps where Rocky mountain peaks now pierce the sky the South pole was humid and subtropical. It is even seen as possible that under the great Antarctic ice cap may lie the fossilized bones of giant reptiles which once grazed the lush vegetation then growing where there is now nothing but ice, observes a correspondent in Pathfinder Magazine.

Fossilized plants and bones found near the South pole and in other sections of the world indicate that the earth during her long life has been subject to chills and fever. Regions now cold have alternately been hot and cold in past ages, and the tropics of today may have at some time been covered with polar ice sheets. Scientists are much interested in what future discoveries may reveal about the Antarctic continent.

Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

Buller could be heard bounding from his bed in the next room. Able lurched to the door to see Ben Elliott flying toward the mill-yard, silhouetted against the dull glow of angry flame which showed through cracks in the mill.

The wide doorways to the ground floor were rectangles of dull orange. The fire was in there, beneath the deck, under the carriage, eating into the very vitals of the mill.

A water barrel stood beneath the slide, its bucket dangling from a stick laid across the top, but the barrel was empty. Ben seized the bucket, smashed the thin ice that had formed over the hot pond, filled his pail and rushed through the open doorways into the smoke. He had a clear sense of Buller's voice crying the alarm and of answering shouts as the men began turning out of their blankets.

Ben soused his bucket of water into the heart of the burning area and it scattered the blaze with a wooshing sound. The flame did not go out; it only scattered. His eyes and his reason told him, then, what his nostrils had failed to register in his first excitement.

"Gasoline!" he panted as he ran out, colliding with Buller in the doorway. "Somebody touched her off! . . . Soaked with gasoline in there. . . . Look, it's spreading fast!"

Men were coming, shouting as they ran through the darkness. In all stages of partial dress they came, crowding close to Elliott and Buller.

"Stand still, you, and keep still!" Ben snapped. "You, McFee, and you and you,"—pointing to individuals. "Roll that barrel of salt up from the siding. Now! Snap into it!

"You and you and you,"—indicating other men—"get every bucket in the place. Water buckets from the barrels in the yard and along the tramways, pails from houses, kettles, anything that'll hold and carry water.

"You, there; get me an ax and a shovel. Snappy, now!"

His voice had bite to it and as he tolled the men off for these explicit errands, they went on the run.

"Buller! Get upstairs and knock a hole in the floor, to the left of the saw. Couple of boards wide. So long,"—measuring with his spread hands. "We've got to get that flame drawing straight up instead of mushrooming all over the floor bottom. Form the rest of your men into a bucket brigade and pass water up the slide. . . . Fast as you can! Don't anybody think about anything but sending up full buckets and taking down empty ones. You stand by the hole, Buller, and knock her down as she comes through. Not so fast, now, that you spill water and drop pails. Hold your heads and your feet. It's our only chance to lick it. . . . Hike, now!"

Grunting and cursing, four huskies came lugging the barrel of salt and Ben, trying to still his excited breathing, snapped his fingers as he waited for their arrival.

"Gasoline!" he shouted to Able, seeing him for the first time. "Water won't touch it! We've got to smother it and we can't get sand handily and salt should do, if Buller can hold her when she sticks her head through the floor!

"Up here, boys! Close, now!" Ben heaved on the heavy barrel of salt himself, rolling it in to the doorway which led directly into the fire. "All right . . . Jake! Into the bucket line, all of you!" He swung his ax on a wire hoop and the barrel popped open. He struck again to clear away staves and drove a dozen quick blows into the lumpy salt that spilled out, to pulverize it.

Next he grabbed up his shovel, scooped it full and disappeared into the smoke.

His eyes smarted but he took his time, blinked and surveyed the fire. Then he swung his shovel upward and sideways and sent its burden in a plastering, spattering smear at the center of a particularly hot spot. The blue-green-orange combination of living fire gave up at once to a saffron smudge.

Ben leaped into the open again, breathed deeply, filled his shovel and doing his best to hold his breath, edged back into the smoke. He drove that shovel of salt hard upon flame, too, and retreated at once. A dozen trips, and he had the flame down in an area the size of a blanket. He worked to the right, then going further into the mill, coughing and reeling, and when he emerged that time he retched painfully. He stood over his salt pile a moment, gulping fresh air while nausea shook him. He breathed quickly, forcing his lungs to pump deep and fast, sending clearing life through his arteries. His head steadied, he scooped up more salt and compressing his lips against the shaking coughs, ducked into the mill.

Faster and faster the buckets came up, some big, some small, now and then one that leaked away its precious contents. Fire found hold on the edges of the hole Buller had made in the floor. Little tongues of flame ate into the dry wood and curled upward. To Buller's right a finger of fire crept up between two boards; beyond it another appeared. In a dozen places fire was coming through the floor and Buller, swaying on his feet as he coughed, turned to the next man in dismay.

"He said . . ." he choked. "Got to have air! Move up!"

The line moved up. The man who had taken Buller's place soused a bucket of water across the floor, knocking down those tendrils that wormed through from below. Then he attacked the uprushing column of flame again.

Down below Ben Elliott had the heart of the burning litter a writhing mass of saffron smoke. He started out, fell and crawled to the entry, got his knees beneath him and retched again and again. His eyes smarted madly and streamed tears; he coughed as he vomited and it seemed as though he never would find strength to rise. But, he did after a moment and renewed his attack.

"Here, you! Three men. . . . Two buckets each!" Ben croaked as he ran out to the foot of the slide.

"Throw it high, and hard. So!" he cried hoarsely and flung the first water himself with a wide, sweeping, overhead swing. It knocked fire off the nigger, blotted out an orange panel on a heavy sill. "Now, you!" he cried to the next man.

They filled their own buckets and that duty took them into the fresh air, cleared their lungs, kept the nausea down, steadied both legs and heads. With hissing splashes the water from their pails went sloshing against the overhead woodwork and gradually the glare through the thick smoke subsided.

"Getting her!" Ben panted as Able tried to say something to him.

"Getting Her!"

"Getting her!' He coughed and his words had come in a half strangle but, even so, the exultation in his tone was unmistakable.

Living flame no longer leaped and roared through the hole in the floor. Thick smoke swept upward but that was all and as Ben ran up the icy slide for the first time and saw this he cried out:

"Good work, Buller! Over there, though: look!"

Fire had taken fresh hold in a greasy timber and was worming its way up beneath the trimmer saw. Buller dashed a half dozen pails of water on the spot and it went black.

"Keep going, Buller!" Ben cried. "I'll take half your men."

He went slipping down the slide and at the bottom called men from the bucket line.

"Stretch out, the rest of you!" he called. "Now, this way, you lads; in here and mop her up, and make it fast!"

Stubborn flames ate into the litter on the ground floor. Again and again they broke out, but the driving heat was gone, roaring gases no longer gave impetus to the spread of destruction as the first need for speed became less imperative.

Not until the final curl of smoke had been subdued completely did Ben Elliott relax. Then, with lantern lighted, he entered the saw floor, completely ice glazed, charred in places, and surveyed the damage. As he swung his lantern and looked about, peering at timbers eaten half away, at burned belting, at other vital damage, he moved slowly, said little, as a man will who is thinking soberly.

He stopped beside Able Armitage finally.

"Well, the insurance'll cover it," the old justice said, as if trying to make the best of things.

Ben laughed shortly.

"But she's two weeks idle at the inside. And belting gone and a good many other things. If—

"Say, chum!"

It was the night watchman, sheathed in flakes of ice from his waist down, whom Ben hailed.

"Where were you?"

"Eating, when it broke out." Ben only nodded. The watchman, by long custom, went to the boarding house kitchen for his midnight meal where food was kept warm for him. "I went through the yard and the mill, just like you told me to do. I looked in at the boiler the last thing. I hadn't been out of here ten minutes before I just happened to glance through the window and see it."

"Yeah. Gasoline starts in a hurry."

"Gasoline!" the watchman croaked.

"Sure." Ben laughed drily. "The ground floor was drenched with it. They'd scraped rubbish into piles and soaked them, too. They almost did a good job. Almost five minutes' start, or if I hadn't happened to see a garage fire put out with salt once where nothing else was handy to smother it, and it'd have been all day with us."

He rubbed his chin, thoughtfully.

"Didn't see anybody? Or hear anybody?"

"Not a soul or a sound."

Elliott looked up. No snow was falling.

"Buller!" he called. The foreman, face blackened, eyebrows gone, came up at his hail. "Herd this crew in close. It snowed early in the evening. Maybe I'll want to do a job of trailing and I don't want tracks all over the country."

He did his job of trailing. The fresh tracks of a single man led away from the trampled snow about the mill toward decks of logs. The tracks went out along the siding toward town but Ben did not follow far. He stopped when he found a three-gallon demijohn badly concealed beneath the end of a log. He sniffed its neck and nodded grimly. The fuel of an incendiary had been carried to the mill in that container.

"And now," Able said, after he also had sniffed the bottle in Buller's house, "what's to be done?" He tried to smile but deep trouble was in his old eyes.

For the first time since he had come to Hoot Owl Ben Elliott shook his head dubiously as he dropped into a chair. He was both grave and troubled.

"They're getting the least bit rough," he observed.

"Rather rough, I'd say!" Able's face flared suddenly in righteous wrath. "D—n Nick Brandon! I'd give a good deal to hang this night's work on him!

"It'll take no less than a miracle now to pull us through. Two weeks to get the mill running? Benny, in that time we'll be busted wide open! They'll have a case against me, I'll be walked as administrator and the timber will be at Brandon's mercy."

"Yeah. . . . Wide open . . . and at his mercy."

Able rose and paced the small room, hands in his hip pockets. He came to a halt before Elliott and eyed him narrowly. He stood so a moment as if in debate with himself.

"We had a fire," he said. "Not the kind you fight with fire, exactly. . . . But old Don told Bird-Eye that you'd have to use fire to fight another kind with, didn't he?"

Ben smiled slowly.

"You're thinking of the old timer's letter, eh? . . . Well, maybe . . . But we're not licked yet. Something may turn up. No, I guess I won't use whatever it was Stuart gave me just yet!"

The old man shook his head and resumed his pacing.

"What can turn up to give us a fighting chance, now?" he muttered.

South Pole Once Warmer; Various Places Now Cold

There is evidence that while the gigantic dinosaurs of 150,000,000 years ago were wallowing in swamps where Rocky mountain peaks now pierce the sky the South pole was humid and subtropical. It is even seen as possible that under the great Antarctic ice cap may lie the fossilized bones of giant reptiles which once grazed the lush vegetation then growing where there is now nothing but ice, observes a correspondent in Pathfinder Magazine.

Fossilized plants and bones found near the South pole and in other sections of the world indicate that the earth during her long life has been subject to chills and fever. Regions now cold have alternately been hot and cold in past ages, and the tropics of today may have at some time been covered with polar ice sheets. Scientists are much interested in what future discoveries may reveal about the Antarctic continent.

Seed House, Thief River Music Company, Oen Mercantile, Lyman Fossum, Plumbing, Thief River Grocery, and the Red Lake Ice and Fuel Company.

Friday and Saturday nights at eight o'clock a feature vaudeville show lasting one hour and forty-five minutes with 28 members in the cast will be presented. Following the vaudeville performance there will be dancing to the music of Abbie Andrews and his orchestra. And on Saturday night, following the dance, a Chevrolet car is to be given free.

Mistress of ceremonies for this show is Marie Early, of Fargo, N. D., who is highly recommended as being one of the best in the Northwest, Mr. Paulson stated. Other members of the show are: The Early Steppers, a chorus of eight girls featuring soft shoe and tap dancing; the Early Stepperettes, a chorus of young girls between the ages of 6 and 9; the vocalist is Lenore Henley; an Acrobatic Dancer Supreme as Billerette is billed: Audry and Remme, character singers; Spanish dancer, Elsie Ryan; a Blues Singer, Mary Hen McKeene; a specialty tap dancer, Phyllis Fortine. All these are booked out of Fargo, N. D., according to the chairman. Those from the Orpheum Circuit are: Lester Raymond, a master comedian and novelty juggler; the Erhardt brothers, musical and dancing entertainers; and Johnson and Dean, one of the best colored dance teams in the world and originators of the "Cake Walk." This latter team has toured the world a number of times and while in Sidney, Australia, were held over three weeks to satisfy the crowds who wished t- see them.

No admission will be charged in the afternoons or morning but the building will be cleared at 6 p. m., Friday and Saturday to make ready for the shows.

SOLDIERS' BONUS PAST FIRST HOUSE

split their ranks wide open, 347 Democrats and 61 Republicans favorable and 55 Democrats and 35 Republicans against the measure. All the Minnesota Congressmen, excepting Christianson, voted for the bill.

The Patman bill provides for the cancellation of any interest due and the payment of the adjusted compensation certificates in cash by the direct issuance of Treasury notes, totalling an estimated $2,300,0000,000 backed by the gold and silver reserve in the treasury vaults. The Vinson bill would have required the issuance of interest bearing tax exempt bonds for the necessary currency.

Congressman Buckler, who was a co-author of the Patman Bill, made a strong appeal for the bonus payment in a seven minute speech Wednesday afternoon. When he made the statement "you had better pay the veteran now for the last war instead of spending money to get into another war like you are trying to do at this time," he was interrupted by the applause of House members and packed galleries.

If the bonus bill eventually becomes a law, the payments to the veterans in Pennington county would be about $195,467.20. The payments in nearby counties would be:

Red Lake, $128,366.80.
Marshall, $316,918.92.
Polk, $671,358.15.
Roseau, $235,242.82.
Kittson, $180,574.64.

Review of the Legislature

By A. I. Harris

Conservatives Seek Tax Relief for Wealthy; Governor Olson Will Oppose Tax on Poverty.

Both administration and conservative forces in the Legislature are girding themselves for the impending battle on taxes. If the former wins tax revision will be based on the principle that those who can afford will be called upon to bear the bulk of government costs; if the latter wins, the basic tax in Minnesota will be a tax on poverty, which means that the masess will foot the bill.

Governor Olson and Farmer-Labor and liberal groups have presented a tax revision program which shifts the burden from real estate to wealthy corporations and individuals. The various bills to carry out the program are slumbering in conservative-controlled committees.

The special interests of the state, however, have declared for a sales tax, and their representatives in the Legislature have brought out a $24,000,000 omnibus bill, the chief feature of which is the tax on the necessities of life, a sales tax. In this bill, which is recommended to pass by a joint Senate and House sub-committee, they included a few features of Governor Olson's tax revision program, undoubtedly as a sop to the Governor to induce him to sign it.

When it became quite apparent, from statements issued by the Governor, that under no condition will he sign a bill which is a tax on poverty rather than wealth, tactics were adopted by the conservatives to bluff him into it. This is being done by the declaration that unless Governor Olson signs the bill, the responsibility for failure to accomplish tax revision and relieve real property will be placed at his door.

At this writing it apepars virtually certain that the omnibus bill will pass; and it appears equally certain that the Governor will veto it and that the veto will be sustained in the House. Whether this will result in a special session is difficult to predict. The Governor is anxious that tax revision be accomplished in the present legislative session to relieve the tax load on the home owner and farmer. But under the sales tax proposal, this burden will continue to be not only as great but even greater. The sales tax will bring tax relief only to the wealthy.

The conservatives also profess a desire to accomplish tax revision but their sincerity is questioned by liberal members. From the beginning of the session, the Governor indicated quite plainly that he would veto a sales tax. Despite that fact, the conservatives have proceeded to mold their entire tax revision program about the sales tax, with knowledge that it cannot be accomplished. This, it is pointed out, shows that they are shedding crocodile tears for the home owners.

The omnibus bill provides for a retail sales tax of 2 per cent; a 20 per cent tax on soft drinks and fountain syrups; a 10 per cent tax on candies, cosmetics and amusements; a 20 per cent tax on cigarettes; a 10 per cent tax on cigars and tobacco; and a 2 per cent tax on gas, electricity and telephone bills. The sop to the Olson program is an increase in the maximum income tax rate to 8 per cent, an increase in inheritance taxes and in gross earnings taxes on telephone companies.

An analysis of the program reveals that the taxes aimed primarily at wealthy individuals and corporations would raise only $2,700,000 while the taxes which would be borne by the masses would raise $18,300,000. The retail sales tax, for example, would raise about $12,000,000, while an increased income tax, the higher gross earnings tax on telephone companies, the corporate excess tax and the increased inheritance and gift taxes would raise a total of only $1,466,000.

Senator Orr, St. Paul reactionary, was assigned the ticklish task of "explaining" to the Senate tax committee the so-called omnibus program. Orr claimed that the taxes were not unfair to the poor people because "luxury taxes" compensated for the admittedly unfair retail sales tax of 2 per cent. Can the tax on candy of 20 per cent be regarded as a luxury tax? Is an amusement tax a luxury tax? Or a tobacco tax and a cigarette tax? Are soft drinks classed as luxuries? Orr went on to say that while he hated to tax the "child buying a lollypop," there was nothing else they could do.

Breaking a lance for the vested interests, he asserted that the taxes on railroads and mining companies cannot be increased because these industries are already "flat as a pancake." This statement caused a Twin City newspaper writer to remark that the tax program would probably have the effect of making children's stomachs "flat as pancakes." Orr had the hypocrisy to defend the iron companies in spite of the fact that the proposed constitutional tax limitation on real property, as amended by the steel trust, would substantially lower their taxes.

Another thing that sponsors of the sales tax prefer to forget is that it leaves the door wide open to racketeers. If the retailer adds a penny to the price of a 5 cent article, the consumer pays a 20 per cent tax, although the legal sales tax may be only 2 per cent. If a penny is added to a 10 cent article the tax would be 10 per cent and so on. In this way the poor are forced by the sales tax racket to pay 2, 3, and even 4 times as much as the tax fixed by the government, as Governor Olson pointed out.

Mark Nolan liberal House leader, characterized the conservative proposed tax revision measure, with the sales tax as its base, as follows: "An attempt to shift the taxes from the wealthy, who can afford to pay, to the poor, who haven't enough to live on as it is."

Senator William Roepke of Fairbault said that he based his campaign for re-election on the continued reduction of automobile license fees. Last week the Senate rewarded his untiring efforts to cripple the highway department and deprive the state of $7,000,000 of federal funds by passing a bill that would continue the license reduction even on new and expensive automobiles.

With the Carley sleuth investigation having reached the stage of insipidity, and the proceedings of the past week hardly worthy of report, somebody has to be made the "goat,"—and all hands agree that the "goat" is Senator Carley. Although the Senator richly deserves the condemnation he is receiving for the unfair, unsportsmanlike, and downright dishonest conduct of this investigation, he nevertheless elicits a measure of sympathy from those who hate to see an elderly man jobbed.

Senator Carley was induced to undertake this investigation after Republican wheelhorses like Senator Rockne told him there would be plenty of stuff furnished him to discredit the Olson administration. Senator Carley evidently believed it and at once had grandiose pictures of a second Walsh and Wheeler of Teapot Dome fame.

Senator Carley has been sorely disappointed because the amount of dirt against the Olson Administration which the Republicans promised to furnish him has not been forthcoming. He had expected dirt by the carloads but what they gave him would not be sufficient to make an undersized load for a youngster's coaster wagon.

When the promised dirt from Republican sources did not materialize, Senator Carley placed his hopes in an army of stool pigeons, but the stool pigeons failed to deliver. Being a conservative politician, of the old school, Senator Carley proceeds on the assumption that there must be dirt in Government. It has never occurred to him that it is posible that an administration can be clean.

Senator Carley could perform a real service to the citizens of Minnesota by announcing that the investigation has thus far proven that with the inauguration of the Farmer - Labor Administration, Minnesota passed from an era of bad government into an era of good government. No one, however, would expect Senator Carley to measure up to that standard of bigness and honesty.

LEGAL NOTICES

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided however, that State land- purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

Seed House, Thief River Music Company, Oen Mercantile, Lyman Fossum, Plumbing, Thief River Grocery, and the Red Lake Ice and Fuel Company.

Friday and Saturday nights at eight o'clock a feature vaudeville show lasting one hour and forty-five minutes with 28 members in the cast will be presented. Following the vaudeville performance there will be dancing to the music of Abbie Andrews and his orchestra. And on Saturday night, following the dance, a Chevrolet car is to be given free.

Mistress of ceremonies for this show is Marie Early, of Fargo, N. D., who is highly recommended as being one of the best in the Northwest, Mr. Paulson stated. Other members of the show are: The Early Steppers, a chorus of eight girls featuring soft shoe and tap dancing; the Early Stepperettes, a chorus of young girls between the ages of 6 and 9; the vocalist is Lenore Henley; an Acrobatic Dancer Supreme as Billerette is billed; Audry and Remme, character singers; Spanish dancer, Elsie Ryan; a Blues Singer, Mary Ilen McKoone; a specialty tap dancer, Phyllis Fortine. All these are booked out of Fargo, N. D., according to the chairman. Those from the Orpheum Circuit are: Lester Raymond, a master comedian and novelty juggler; the Erhardt brothers, musical and dancing entertainers; and Johnson and Dean, one of the best colored dance teams in the world and originators of the "Cake Walk." This latter team has toured the world a number of times and while in Sidney, Australia, were held over three weeks to satisfy the crowds who wished t- see them.

No admission will be charged in the afternoons or morning but the building will be cleared at 6 p. m.. Friday and Saturday to make ready for the shows.

SOLDIERS' BONUS PAST FIRST HOUSE

split their ranks wide open, 347 Democrats and 61 Republicans favorable and 55 Democrats and 35 Republicans against the measure. All the Minnesota Congressmen, excepting Christianson, voted for the bill.

The Patman bill provides for the cancellation of any interest due and the payment of the adjusted compensation certificates in cash by the direct issuance of Treasury notes, totalling an estimated $2,300,0000,000 backed by the gold and silver reserve in the treasury vaults. The Vinson bill would have required the issuance of interest bearing tax exempt bonds for the necessary currency.

Congressman Buckler, who was a co-author of the Patman Bill, made a strong appeal for the bonus payment in a seven minute speech Wednesday afternoon. When he made the statement "you had better pay the veteran now for the last war instead of spending money to get into another war like you are trying to do at this time," he was interrupted by the applause of House members and packed galleries.

If the bonus bill eventually becomes a law, the payments to the veterans in Pennington county would be about $195,467.20. The payments in nearby counties would be:

Red Lake, $128,366.80.
Marshall, $316,918.92.
Polk, $671,358.15.
Roseau, $235,242.82.
Kittson, $180,574.64.

Senator William Roepke of Fairbault said that he based his campaign for re-election on the continued reduction of automobile license fees. Last week the Senate rewarded his untiring efforts to cripple the highway department and deprive the state of $7,000,000 of federal funds by passing a bill that would continue the license reduction even on new and expensive automobiles.

With the Carley sleuth investigation having reached the stage of insipidity, and the proceedings of the past week hardly worthy of report, somebody has to be made the "goat,"—and all hands agree that the "goat" is Senator Carley. Although the Senator richly deserves the condemnation he is receiving for the unfair, unsportsmanlike, and downright dishonest conduct of this investigation, he nevertheless elicits a measure of sympathy from those who hate to see an elderly man jobbed.

Senator Carley was induced to undertake this investigation after Republican wheelhorses like Senator Rockne told him there would be plenty of stuff furnished him to discredit the Olson administration. Senator Carley evidently believed it and at once had grandiose pictures of a second Walsh and Wheeler of Teapot Dome fame.

Senator Carley has been sorely disappointed because the amount of dirt against the Olson Administration which the Republicans promised to furnish him has not been forthcoming. He had expected dirt by the carloads but what they gave him would not be sufficient to make an undersized load for a youngster's coaster wagon.

When the promised dirt from Republican sources did not materialize, Senator Carley placed his hopes in an army of stool pigeons, but the stool pigeons failed to deliver. Being a conservative politician, of the old school, Senator Carley proceeds on the assumption that there must be dirt in Government. It has never occurred to him that it is posible that an ad ministration can be clean.

Senator Carley could perform a real service to the citizens of Minnesota by announcing that the investigation has thus far proven that with the inauguration of the Farmer - Labor Administration, Minnesota passed from an era of bad government into an era of good government. No one, however, would expect Senator Carley to measure up to that standard of bigness and honesty.

LEGAL NOTICES

State of Minnesota, Office of Commissioner of Conservation

St. Paul, Minnesota
February 15, 1935

Notice is hereby given that on April 8, 1935 at 10:00 A. M., at Thief River Falls, Minn., in the office of the County Auditor, at Pennington County, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the State by reason of non-payment of interest.

Terms of Sale:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest being at the rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid at any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber and improvements must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch and road taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before re-sale to an actual purchaser. Lands sold after January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of Chapter 39, Laws Extra Session 1933.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided however, that State land purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority

Appraisers' reports showing quality and kind of soil are on file in the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, 14, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Lists, giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Director of Lands and Minerals at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the County Seat.

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOLUME THREE, NUMBER 52 | THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA. | THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1935

H. S. BASEBALL TEAM PLANNED THIS SPRING

Four Schools Plan to Have Teams: Plummer, Warren, Crookston, T. R. F.

TENNIS WILL BE STARTED

Tennis and Track to Round Out Spring Activities for High School

Coach Dooley of the Lincoln High school announced today that at a recent meeting of the District Athletic Association held on March 26, that it was decided that baseball would be played in the various high schools in the district this spring. Schools that announced their willingness to try to form a team are: Plumer Warren, Crookston, and Thief River Falls. These plans are tentative, Mr. Dooley stated, but it is fairly certain that teams will be organized. Because the local high school is the only school in this district that has had a track team during the past few years there has been little or no inter-school activity and therefore baseball was suggested to the group, according to Mr. Dooley.

The local high school will continue having a track team as it has in the past but a tournament between the classes will decide who is to be on the team. The regional tournament, which has been held in this city during the past few years will be held in Bemidji this spring, Mr. Dooley announced.

Tennis will be taken up more seriously this spring than heretofore and an elimination tournament will be staged to decide who are to represent Lincoln High at the tournament which is being planned for this spring in Crookston. Some of the more ardent tennis fans are already having daily workouts in the high school gym, Mr. Dooley said, but it has been found the quarters are too cramped to give the players much benefit.

There will be no spring football this year, Mr. Dooley explained, as all the football equipment has been sent in to a factory to be rejuvenated. The ecuipment was in a very bad repair, the coach said, and the next years' team should look a lot better and be more efficient after the uniforms have been repaired.

A. H. CROMBIE SENTENCED TEN YRS., FORGERY

Was Hired During Last Campaign by Republicans Against F-L

(Story from Minn Leader)

Alfred H. Crombie, Republican campaigner during the last election, and one of the bitterest opponents of the Farmer-Labor plank for free school-books for school children, was convictel and sentenced to serve ten years in the state prison by District Judge Hugo O. Hanft for forgery. Mr. Crombie, often referred to as "Rev." Crombie during the last campaign, was once a minister but was unfrocked by the church while holding a pastorate at White Bear, Minnesota.

A. H. Crombie offered his services to E. L. Regnier, state campaign manager for the F-L party, during the last campaign, but was turned down after which he was hired by the Republicans to campaign against the Farmer-Labor candidates, according to an article in the Minesota Leader.

Crombie was captured in Detroit last week and brought to St. Paul on orders of the Ramsey County Attorney, M. F. Kinkhead, and confessed a trail of forgeries dating back to 1933. Some of the places where he passed forged checks are: Chevrolet Motor Co., Mpls.; Northwest Nat'l Bank, Mpls. (a Republican campaign aid); Daytons, Standard; Powers; Sears Roebuck & Co.; and the Mineapolis Gas Company. He was described as a good lecturer, a captivating speaker. In Minneapolis he told the people that the State Board of Education had laid deep, dark plots to turn the school system of the state over to the communists and to raise havoc with public education, according to reports from F-L headquarters.

He posed, in his letters to the voters of the State, as a lobbyist for uncorrupted schools. He continually made false statements against various members of the board of education which since have been proven false.

Attention Veterans!

"Saturday, April 16th, the Veterans Farm-Labor Association of the State of Minnesota will hold their annual convention at 2909 Portland Avenue South, Minneapolis, Minnesota," A. G. Cooper, state chairman, announces.

The doors will open for registration at 9:00 A. M.; committee announcements at 10 A. M.; business session at 1 P. M. Governor Floyd B. Olson is scheduled to address the convention at 3 o'clock P. M. Other prominent Farmer-Laborites wil lalso speak, including Thos. E. Latimer, F-L candidate for mayor of Minneapolis.

The convention has been called for the purpose of perfecting a State-wide organization of Veterans-Farmer-Labor clubs. We urge you to attend this convention and bring as many comrades as you can with you. Veterans Legislation and the Farmer-Labor Program will be discussed. There will also be an election of additional officers to complete the set-up that was started a year ago in St. Paul.

I.U.A.W. to Hold Regular Meeting at Warren Sun.

The Independent Union of All Workers will hold their next regular monthly meeting at Warren, Minnesota, next Sunday afternoon at the city hall, H. Kjos, secretary of the local, announced today. P. A. Harris has been invited to speak at this meeting, on unions. All members are urged to be present.

Local Business Men to Hire Professional Baseball Team of Gary, This Summer

Interested town pepople gathered at the Masonic hall last Friday evening and decided to bring a professional baseball team into this city this coming summer. Mr. Donnigan and Mr. Thordahl of Fertile, members of the team, were present at the meeting and assured the group that the team being hired is in the same class as the teams of the Northern League.

The team to be imported is from Gary, Minnesota, and will play a game in the city every Sunday during the summer. A colored pitcher by the name of Freeman is said to be one of the best found in any of the Minnesota circuits, Mr. Roy Lambert stated.

Work on the diamond will get under way as soon as the weather permits and a game is being planned for Decoration Day; Mr. Lambert stated that he is now working on a game with the Crookston team, which is a member of fthe Northern League, sometime before this date.

Local baseball players who wish to try out for the team may do so, Mr. Lambert stated, and anyone wishing to should get in touch with Mr. Lambert or directly with "Shorty" Dekko of Gary, Minn.

L O' L Attendance Contest Was Won By Four Towns Creamery

Officers of the 17th District, Land O' Lakes Creameries, recently announced that the Four Towns Co-op. Creamery won first prize in the attendance contest conducted in connection with the annual meeting held in Thief River Falls March 6th. Ilus Magnusson is the operator.

Second prize went to the Cloverleaf Coop. Creamery, Spooner, Minn. Ted Strothschein, operator. Third prize was won by the Karlstad Coop. Creamery, N. L. Urdahl, operator.

The contest is based on the number of patrons attending, miles traveled, and amount of butter manufactured.

State Seed Loan Bill Asked to be Recalled By Gov.

A bill has been introduced in the state legislature in one of the last days rushes to repeal the $2,000,000 Seed Loan Bill which was rushed through the legislature by the conservatives shortly after the drought stricken farmers marched on the Capitol. This bill has been found to act as a detriment to the state in securing federal aid, according to A. J. Rockne, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and should be repealed. The federal government notified the legislators that if their bill was to stand then it would be necessary for the Federal loans to be cut by the amount the state put into the fund.

County Auditor, H. L. Fowler, stated today that Pennington county had not made any plans to accept any of the state money but that many of the drought stricken counties had already started loaning money that the state was to supply for the purpose of purchasing seeds. All this work will now have to be recalled and set-ups will have to be torn down, Mr. Fowler said. Many of the western counties immediately took advantage of the state seed loans because the federal set-up seemed to be delayed and farmers were in acute danger of seed shortage during the planting time, the county auditor stated as a reason why work already done has to be started over again at a loss of time and money.

RIVER CONTROL GROUP MEET AT POLK CO. SEAT

Representatives From Seven Counties Meet to Discuss Problems

N. D. GEOLOGIST SPEAKS

Committee Will Draft Plans For Projects to Present To Congress

Approximately a hundred representatives from all parts of Northern Minnesota gathered at the council chamber in the city hall at Crookston last evening in a water control and conservation meeting. ERA district engineer Frisbie delivered his report on water control work and exhibited two short films depicting work done by the CCC boys in the river channel project last fall. A speech by Dr. Simpson, state geologist of North Dakota dealing with the recorded rainfall thruout the Middle West and Northwest over the past several decades was heard with a great deal of interest by the gathering and several resolutions addressed to the authorities and dealing with the subject of water control were passed. Mayor Kirkwood of Crookston presided.

Mr. Frisbie stated in his opening talk that he had learned that

All-Stars Bowl 3-Game Series Friday Night

In a game between two picked teams on the local alleys Friday night the "Ulrich All-Stars" defeated the "Mann All-Stars" 2452 pins to 2430, in a three game series. Mann's team won the first two games but the Ulrich men came back strong in the final game to finish with a higher total score. Lyle Lanning of Ulrich's All Stars had high score for his team with 196, while Wally DuChamp of the Mann team had high score with 225.

The six man teams were picked from all bowlers in the tournament and those twelve with the highest averages were split up so that by adding their average there were only three pins difference in the teams before they started, according to W. Du Champ, manager of the local alleys.

Seed Loans Available At Co. Agents Office

Seed loans are now available to farmers of Pennington county at the office of county agent R. M. Douglass in the basement of the Auditorium. Farmers asking for $200 or more for seeds must have a rejection slip from R. Lund of the Production Credit Corporation before their application will be considered, according to Mr. Douglass. This is important and in order to save time for the applicant it is advised that this slip be procured. Mr. Douglass stated.

Wages Increasing Says H. Davidson

The present figures of the National Re-employment office located in this city show that there are 314 active applications for work in Penington county. During the past week two names have been put on the list as employable and twelve have received jobs. Of these twelve getting work, ten are working on farms, and two were placed in domestic work.

It was reported by Howard Davidson that there was an increasing demand for farm help and that there seems to be an upward trend in wages offered for farm help. The present pay for farm help averages twice that offered last spring at this same time. It was specifically state by Mr. Davidson that the NRS makes no direct nor indirect effort to raise wage scales, but that they were always informed as to the wages the prospective employer is willing to pay.

Shipping Assoc. Appoints Nelson Brothers Managers

The Thief River Falls Shipping Association held a meeting last Thursday afternoon at which time they appointed the Nelson Brothers as managers of the business. The manager will call for and pick up stock in Pennington county if the seller calls or leaves a notice for them at the Union State bank in this city. The stock sold to this association is hauled directly from the producing area to St. Paul, where it is slaughtered.

St. Hilaire Women's Club Wins One-Act Play Contest Sat.

At the One-Act play contest held in this city Saturday evening under the auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary and sponsored by the SERA, the St. Hilaire Women's club won first place out of five entering teams from Pennington and the eastern half of Marshall counties. The winning play was entitled, "Squaring it With the Boss," with the following in the cast: E. Johnson, A. Skattum, Mrs. M. Jackson, M. Jackson, Mrs. E. Reiersgord and G. Schantzen.

The Middle River Women's club gave the play which won second place in this sub-district contest with the play "Corn-Fed Babies." These two teams will enter the tournament at Warren, Minesota, next Saturday night which will be held in the high school auditorium. Two teams from the western half of Marshall county will also be entered in the district meet. Winners of this contest will be entered in the regional contest which will probably be held at Crookston the following week, Mrs. Verna Becker Purcell announced.

RED MELVE VS STRAND HEADS CARD TUESDAY

Next Athletic Program Features High Class Wrestlers

The next wrestling card to be put on by the local Athletic Club will be held Tuesday, April 9th, in the Old Elks' hall starting promptly at eight o'clock, p. m. The main go, between Red Melve and Erling Strand required a lot of promoting to arrange, according to Bill LaFave, manager of the local troup of wrestlers. Because of the fine showing made by Melve at his last match here an opponent for him was very difficult to find and it was only after going to Ada that they were able to get this match arranged, he stated. The main go will be the best two out of three falls.

A masked match will be put on in which the identity of neither opponent will be made known. Mr. Messenger, booking agent for the club, stated that these two men will be good and that there will be plenty excitement for those attending.

Other matches that have been carded are Mark Olson vs. Bob Christie, tw o out of three falls at 144 pounds; Dale Johnson vs. Albin Peterson, one fall finish match at 157 pounds; Gaynor Ide vs. Harold Stroble, one fall finish match at 140 pound; Martin Wedul vs. Sailor Canfield, one fall at 150 pounds. Several other matches are to be put on and a well rounded card has been booked and Mr. LaFave promises an exciting evening to fans.

DOOM OF AAA PROGRAM SEEN

Foreseeing the posible doom of the AAA emergency program, the House Agriculture committee has agreed to amend the farm license bill by authorizing use of the old McNary-Haugen equalization fee or export debenture plans of farm relief.

The decision, subject to reconsideration but expected to stand, marks the first fundamental change in the present program approved by a congressional committee.

'Depression Causes' Topic At Plummer Study Club

The Plummer Adult Study Club hell a meeting Tueslay evening at which time R. M. Aalbu, who was invited to speak, discused economic depressions, both past and present. Mr. Aalbu pointed out how the past economic turmoils have finally consumed themselves and dissolved into eras of prosperity without governmental interference with private industry. He then went on to explain why it was unlikely that, even though there are a number of people who seem to think that it will, this present encnomic disturbance would ever revert into an era of good times for all unless some drastic economic changes are made.

Annual Auto Show and Spring Exposition Opens Today; Many Interesting Features

Cut-Away Views of Motors and Chassis Reveal Masterly Engineering Skill

Local Girl Appears in Dance Specialty Act Friday and Saturday

The municipal auditorium was, once again, the scene of concentrated activity as the Eighth Annual Auto Show and Spring Exposition opened yesterday noon. For the past two days automobile dealers have been busily engaged in setting up their cars for display purpose and many other local concerns have been arranging their displays to best catch the eyes of the consuming public.

Twenty-seven automobiles have been placed on the main floor in addition to exhibits of nine other local concerns. The mechanical workings of some of the models are shown by cut-away views of the engines and the chassis. While other models speak for themselves by their eloquent body-lines and smooth sounding engines, the cut-away views make the exhibit more interesting to those who understand the working parts of an engine.

O. C. Paulson, general chairman in charge of the Auto Show, announced today that as a special added attraction on the vaudeville program Friday and Saturday nights, Miss Jewell Helen Warner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Warner, will be on as a specialty dancer. Miss Warner has been taking dancing lessons in Grand Forks for the past year and a half and reports say that she is a finished dancer, Mr. Paulson said. This local attraction will be on the program in addition to Marie Early's "Springtime Revue" which has a cast of 28 singers and dancers. In this troupe of vaudeville stars there are colored dancers, young girls' chorus, jugglers and singers.

A 1935 Chevrolet Coach will be given away Saturday night following the dance to the holder of the ticket having the winning number which will be drawn from a large box of numbers, Mr. Paulson stated. This car is one from the stock of the Northern Chevrolet Company of this city. At a special drawing the local Ford dealers will give an auto radio away to the holder of the wining ticket. Tickets for the free car are being sold by local people while tickets on the radio are being distributed by the Lund and Tunberg Company.

Forum Staff and Friends Will Celebrate Birthday

This issue marks the end of the third year since the Thief River Fals Forum was established and in commemoration of the event members of the staff and friends will gather in the courtrooms at the court house for a "birthday party" Friday evening, April 5th. A program of music and short talks has been arranged and a lunch will be served.

OMNIBUS BILL ENDORSED BY TAXPAYERS

Few Minor Changes Asked in The Sales Tax Bill by Ass'n.

The Pennington County Taxpayers' Association held their annual meeting in the Civic and Commerce rooms of the Auditorium Tuesday afternoon at which time they elected officers for the coming year. R. J. McKercher was re-elected president; W. H. Quist, secretary, and M. Theige reelected treasurer. All members of the board of directors were re-elected to serve another year and Mr. Lockrem was elected to the Board to replace C. Christianson who died during the past year. Members of the board are Vic Melin, Louis Nelson, Bernard Knudsen and A. K. Lockrem.

The so-called Omnibus bill, which is now being discussed as the new tax law for Minnesota, was read by W. H. Quist and a discussion followed of the merits of the bill. It was finally decided that no other form of taxation was likely to pass this legislature and that the wise thing to do would be to make this bill as good as possible for a bill of this kind, Mr. Quist said. The Omnibus bill was then endorsed by the group with changes so that in addition to food-stuffs being exempt from the tax the cheaper grades of clothing and of farm machinery be also exempt.

After deciding that no membership fee would be required to finance the organization for the coming year the meting adjourned at four o'clock.

Junior Class Play Well Attended Fri.

A large crowd of local people enjoyed the class play presented by the Junior Class of Lincoln high school at the auditorium last Friday evening. The play "Growing Pains," was exceptionally well coached and all characters portrayed their parts in a most vivid style.

Special tribute must be given to Jack Booren, Jean Gustafson, and Vivian Ward who played the principal parts in the play, and whom, according to persons present, registered very well in the parts they were selected to play.

Between acts music was furnished by a Reed quartet and a Brass Quartet under the direction of S. P. Orwell. A bouquet of flowers was presented to Miss Victoria Edberg, director of the play, by the Junior class as a token of appreciation. Costumes and the furniture used in the play were furnished by the J. C. Penney Co., and the Oen Merc. Co.

Court Session Is Held Fri. Mar. 26

District Judge M. A. Brattland was in the city Friday of last week to hear certain civil cases that were on the calendar but could not come up before the court during the February term of court. Two cases were heard with the judge handing down a decision on one of them.

The case of Hicks and Company vs. R. O. Gordon and John Doe was settled in favor of the plaintiff, the former. The defendants in this case did not appear but the situation was cleared after the Judge had heard the facts from the defense counsel and the Hicks Company. The argument was over the ownership of hay on the property of Hicks & Company, which, through an error, was removed by the defendant. The plaintiff was allowed $12 a ton for the hay removed, and costs.

A decision has been promised today on the other case heard, that of H. J. Wood vs. Geo. Brossoit and Phil Doucet in which a mix-up of hay occurred while these men were shipping last fall. Other cases will be heard by Judge Brattland at a later date.

Constitution Adopted by W. P. A. Monday

The Workmen's Protective Asoicstaion adopted the new constitution of the body unanimously after President Douville explained several of the the articles which were being criticized and discussed. A series of letters written by the association urging the legislators to pass certain bills were read and approved by the members.

Letters showing the faulty administration, political graft, corruption and "rotten" politics in the relief offices were read; instances of neglect were given showing the necessity for action of some kind by the body. Discussion of this subject was heard and several members had a great deal to say on the matter.

Two questions were put up for discussion by Wm. Douville: "Where are we drifting?" and "What are we going to do for the Youth of Today?" The questions touched the imagination of all present and there was some controversy as to the answers to these questions. R. M. Aalbu expressed the opinion that we not drifting, but that we are being steered; steered towards a Fascist Dictatorship, and then went on in detail to show why he made such statements. Theo. Quale stated that he was reluctant to answer a question such as the first as there was no clear indication as to what the final outcome would be. The discussion of these timely topics held the attention of the audience and much discussion was heard from those present.

4-H Club Leaders to Meet in Auditorium

The adult leaders of the Pennington county 4-H clubs will meet in the Commercial Club rooms of the Auditorium Friday evening, April 5th. All members of this group are urged to attend; H. A. Phlughoeft of the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston has been invited to speak at this meeting and he has some important material to discuss, Mrs. Purcell states.

State is Districted to Aid Conservation And Facilitate the Control of Wild Life

To further wild life management plans in Minnesota, the state has been divided into nine conservation districts, E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conservation, announced. Conservation districts were established according to dominant game species and environmental factors after a thorough study of conditions by Division of Game and Fish. Division of the state into districts received approval of the Minnesota Conservation Commission.

Pennington county is included in Conservation District 7. Other counties in this district are Polk, Red Lake, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau and Lake of the Woods.

It was pointed out by Erling Swenson, game and fish director, that "Minnesota is a big state and conservation problems effecting southeastern Minnesota would not necessarily apply to the northwestern part of our state." Individual problems will be considered in each of the nine respective conservation districts so that "wild life management as well as public opinion can be directed along more constructive and intelligent lines," he said.

"Efforts of interested conservation organizations within each of the nine conservation districts can be better coordinated so that increased cooperation may be given to the State Game and Fish division which will result in a better understanding of the needs in each of the respective districts," Director Swenson stated.

"The large number of bills dealing with game and fish regulation which appear at each session of the legislature and the divergent opinions they represent, are impressive indications of the manner in which people from different sections of the state react differently to the same laws and how regulations which satisfy one section fail utterly to meet conditions in other communities. This diversity of opinion sugests a sectional rather than a state-wide

LIBERALS GAIN MEMBERSHIP IN LOWER HOUSE

Adopt 16-Point Legislative Program Aiming For Social Justice

Showing more fight than ever and an increased membership since the attack on their organization by Congressman Fuller, conservative chairman of the Democratic patronage committee, the newly formed "all-party" House "Liberal" block, in their second meeting, have adopted a 16-point legislative program, which called for assurance "that economic and social justice shall be accorded all of the people."

The "Liberal" bloc program follows:

1. Federal regulation of credit and currency. 2. Abolishment of the issuance of tax-exempt securities. 3. Increased inheritance, income and gift taxes on a graduated basis. 4. Refinancing of farm debts on a long term basis at 1½ per cent interest. (Frazier-Lemke Bill). 5. Reduced interest rates on home loans. 6. Guarantee to farmers of the average cost of production plus "a reasonable profit." 7. Limitation of the hours of labor in industry. 8. Insurance to labor of "its inherent right to bargain collectively." 9. Public works appropriation "In amounts adequate to provide employment for those in need of employment at a wage sufficient to maintain a decent standard of living." 10. Adequate Federal aid to education. 11. "Government ownership of all natural resources and monopolies vested with a public interest." 12. Deprofitizing of war. 13. Avoidance of "foreign entanglements." 14. "Adequate provisions for the payment of sickness, old age and unemployment benefits." 15. Protection of freedom of speech and the press. 16. A liberalization of House rules.

To make the movement completely non-partisan, the group has agreed to alternate the chairmanship at each week's meeting hereafter between members who nominally belong to the four parties represented

TOLEDO LABOR UNITES AGAINST 'NEW DEAL'

Toledo.— Following the walk-out of 1500 FERA workers on various projects in Lucas county two weeks ago, a wave of strikes has swept the county. They include the milk drivers, journeyman tailors, pile drivers and dock builders, metal wheel workers, and the teamsters are expected to walk out tonight.

A joint committee, composed of all the striking groups, has combined with the Relief Workers' League, which is conducting the FERA strike, to co-ordinate all strike activities.

This is the first time in the history of the city that the unorganized and organized, the employed and the unemployed have combined mutually to aid each other in the struggle of labor for decent wages and working conditions.

Fight Pauper Wage

Over 2,000 workers assembled in a mass meeting on the lawn of the Vocational school here and voiced a mighty protest, not only against the starvation diet fed those on relief, but against the attempt of the administration to pauperize the entire labor movement through reducing of wages of both the employed and unemployed to less than a subsistence level.

Following a demand by the Relief Workers' League, through its president, J. C. Taylor, and secretary, E. E. Ledford, who, together with the Central Labor Union, the Building Trades Council and the Lucas County Unemployed League, preferred a series of charges against the relief administration, the state legislature has ordered a special committee to investigate the entire relief set-up here.

The Relief Workers' League also presented a report to the county relief administrator, the state administrator and to the federal administrator showing that relief in Toledo is less than one-half that given in other cities in the country and demanding an immediate increase in food allowance.

Win Many Supporters

The county administrator, C. E. Darby, agreed to ask for an increased sum of money for his April budget to cover the additional food allowances asked for in this report. The county commissioners and the city council also supported by resolution the demands of the League.

The League, in cooperation with the other organizations, has made additional demands upon the federal government in regard to wages and hours on all FERA projects, as follows:

65c an hour for common labor, with a minimum of 32 hours a week.

80c an hour for semi-skilled labor with a minimum of 24 hours a week.

80c an hour for all clerical and office workers, with a minimum of $20.00 a week.

Prevailing union wages for all skilled workers, with a minimum of 24 hours a week.

TURNOVER TAX REDUCES PURCHASING POWER

The Turnover tax would raise the prices of vital necessities, and would constitute another step towards the pauperization of those who already have virtually nothing. . . It would have the effect of reducing the purchasing power of those who are now living from hand to mouth or who actually are on relief . . . It would require the people to pay a large part of the revenue that corporations are now paying in the form of taxes on real property. . . We cannot solve our economic ills by forcing the poor to stand the cost of government . . . Our economic system cannot endure on a basis of ever-widening inequalities . . .

ALABAMA VOTES AGAINST REPEAL

By W. G. Calderwood

The defeat of the attempt to repeal state prohibition in Alabama at the recent election was a surprise to the wets. And it gives new interest to the speculation about the swing of the tide of sentiment back toward prohibition.

In 1933 Alabama voted for repeal of the 18th Amendment by a majority of 31,242. While official returns for the late election are not yet available, the press reports show a majority of about 2,500 against repeal. That at least suggests a resurge of dry sentiment in that state.

In connection with that it is well to remind ourselves that, in spite of the fact that national repeal carried by a majority of almost three to one, yet it was carried by a fewer number of votes in 1933 than Hoover received in 1932. Yet Hoover was the worst defeated presidential candidate in the nation's history. Here are the figures as shown in the 1934 World Almanac, in which Hoover is credited with 15,761,841 votes, while the vote for repeal was only 15,279,216. That shows that repeal was carired by nearly half a million votes fewer than Hoover polled when he went down to a record defeat.

The explanation of this strange phenomenon is simple. In spite of the flaming propaganda of the administration and the press, the people simply did not take interest enough to go to the polls and vote. There were doubtless millions of drys who were dazzled by the glittering promises of reduced taxes, balanced budget, abundance of work for all, restoration of prosperity, elimination of the bootlegger, a world safe for youth and other blessings, so that they were dissuaded from voting dry although not persuaded to vote wet. So they did not vote at all.

It is believed that these voters in increasing numbers are swinging back to their normal dry conviction. They seem to form the van of the new dry army of "reoccupation."

MINNESOTA NATIONAL FORESTS ENLARGED

Addition of 5,230.84 in the Chippewa National Forest and of 1,869 acres in the Superior National Forest in Minnesota were announced by Grover Conzet, state forester. Owners of this forest land were paid the sum of $22,150.31, when options recently obtained were taken up by the United States Forest Service.

SERA To Conduct Safety Contest Again This Year

A safety contest will be conducted again this year by the SERA in an effort to reduce, the number of accidents and automobile fatalities in the state during 1935. The Governor of Minesota will award plaques emblematic of the best records based on traffic accidents per hundred thousand of population in the following classification:

Group "A," counties having 20,000 or more population.

Group "AA," counties having 10,000 or more population.

Group "AAA," counties having less than 10,000 population.

Group "B," cities of the first class, Mpls., St. Paul, etc.

Group "C," all other cities of 10,000 or more population.

Group "D," all cities having population of from 5,000 to 10,000.

Reports will be made in detail every month to state headquarters and tabulations will be made with a spot map of accident locations maintained.

SPRING SEASON MOST IMPORTANT TO GAME

With the official arrival of spring, Erling Swenson, director of the Division of Game and Fish, warned Minnesota residents that this time of the year is most important from the standpoint of game. This is the season when game birds mate and raise their broods of young, Mr. Swenson said. He pointed out that a "favorable season means large healthy broods and that an unfavorable one with prolonged wet cold weather spells disaster for countless young quail, pheasants, grouse and wild ducks."

"Every effort must be made to curtail the spring burninng of sloughs, marshes and grass fields. Brush fires are particularly harmful to wild life. It has been proven that soil is harmed rather than benefitted through spring burning."

"Farmers can help during this important time by leaving as much suitable nesting cover as possible on ground that will be least affected by heavy rains or floods."

"If grass and brush burning must be done, it should be accomplished early enough so that new growth of grass may start early and be tall in time to supply nesting cover and protection for the young birds against natural enemies."

U. S. URGES LARGER ROAD MAINTENANCE EXPENDITURES

Minnesota should increase its maintenance expenditures on the original trunk highway system by more than $1,000,00, Thomas MacDonald, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, had advised N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

A letter from Mr. MacDonald to Mr. Elsberg states that $630 a mile should be allowed for maintenance on the 6,700 mile federal aid system, compared with $495 a mile spent in 1934.

The highway department budget for 1935 has been revised in accordance with Mr. MacDonald's request, approximately $4,000,000 being set up for maintenance of the old trunk routes, Mr. Elsgerg said. However, he expressed the belief that the roads can be kept in satisfactory condition for less than the amount recommended by the federal bureau.

Mr. MacDonald expressed the opinion that for best maintenance results, Minnesota should spend $7,000,000 on its whole 11,000 mile trunk system in 1935. This compares with about $5,000,000 spent in 1934.

Lincoln Admits That He Made a Fool of Himself

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Abraham Lincoln chose April Fool's Day to recall a ludicrous love affair in which he himself admitted he was "the biggest fool of all," according to Dr. Louis A. Warren, Director of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company Museum here. On April Fool's Day, 1838, Lincoln wrote a letter about his adventures to a close friend, using this date as the proper one to tell in his whimsical way how he was "made a fool of."

Jokingly he had promised a friend who was going on a visit to Kentucky that he would marry her sister if she would bring her back with her to Illinois. The girl came, Lincoln thought too willingly; but when he proposed to her, fearing she would accept, she refused him flatly. He concluded the written account of this happy ending in these words:

"Others have been made fools of by the girls but this can never with truth be said of me. I most emphatically, in this instance, made a fool of myself."

TEN MILLION BOOKS BORROWED IN STATE

Minnesota's book-minded public borrowed a total of 10,040,805 volumes from the state's public libraries in 1934, the department of education announced today. Aggregate expenditures for public libraries in 1934 were $1,020,731, which went to serve a population of 1,519,756, the figures showed. Circulation in the three largest cities totaled 8,176,335 books in Mineapolis, 1,369,199 in St. Paul and 621,928 in Duluth.

FARMER-LABOR PRESS SERVICE

By
H. G. Teigan

The press of the country a few days ago carried the story that the King of Norway had just called John Nygaardsvold, socialist president of the Norwegian Storting (Parliament) to the office of premier. Nygaardsvold thus becomes the third Socialist premier in Scandinavia.

The previous ministry was headed by Johann L. Mowinckel, liberal. Mr. Mowinckel has held the office of prime minister for a number of years, notwithstanding the comparative weakness of the liberal party which he represents.

The laborites, or Socialists as they are usually called, have been the strongest party in Norway for the past ten years. Due, however, the the radical program advocated by the labor party all opposition parties have managed to sink their differences in order to retain control. That explains why the Mowinckel ministry has been continued in power since the elections in October 1933, when the laborites scored a sweeping victory over their reactionary opponents.

Socialists Strong

In that election the results were as follows: Socialists 69; Conservatives 31; Liberals, 24; Agrarians, 23; Independents, 3. The previous Storting contained 47 Socialists, 44 Conservatives, 34 Liberals, and 25 Agrarians.

This is the second Socialist government of Norway, the first having lasted twelve days. In January, 1928, following the elections of the previous fall that resulted in the election of 59 Socialists to 90 Liberals, Moderates and Conservatives (and one Communist), Christian Hornsrud was called upon as the Leader of the largest group in Parliament, to form a government. The Norwegian Socialists had not yet completely thrown off the Communist influence that had split their party less than a decade before, and they brought in a program that they knew could not be passed in the then make-up of the Storting. They were defeated and ousted in less than two weeks, and at the following election they lost 12 seats.

Laborites Radical

The labor party of Norway is the most radical political party in Europe, with the exception, of course, of the Communist party of Russia. As indicative of its radicalism, it may be mentioned that the Norwegian trades union movement, which forms the backbone of the political movement, has continued to be on good turns with the so-called "red" trades unions movement of Russia. Moreover, the fact that the King has declined to call the party to power notwithstanding its overwhelming plurality over all opposition parties goes further to prove the radical character of the labor party.

Scandinavians for Peace

The three Scandinavian governments will now be able to co-operate in a joint disarmament and peace program. Militarism has been on the decline in all of the Scandinavian countries since the ascendency of the Socialists in politics. Only recently at a huge Socialist gathering in Copenhagen the leaders of the three Scandinavian Socialist movements pledged themselves to unity for freedom, democracy and socialism. Mr. Nygaardsvold, Norway's new premier, spoke at that meeting, saying among other things:

"The developments of the past few years have created a situation in which no country is able to master its frightful difficulties by itself. We must unite all our energies for Scandinavian and for international solidarity."

Other speakers at the meeting were Premiers Per Albin Hansson of Sweden and Thorvald Stauing of Denmark.

Nygaardsvold has been an unskilled laborer, a former member of the socialist party of the United States and of the I. W. W., in the days before the war.

CROW CONTEST TO BE FEATURED BY SPORTSMAN

As an inducement for increased activity on the part of Minnesota's sportsmen, a crow contest is being featured by officials of the Northwest Sportsmen's show which will be held in the Minenapolis Auditorium the week of April 20 to 17. This is the first crow shoot of its kind ever attempted, according to C. K. Odekirk, co-manager.

Three trophies will be awarded winners with the close of the shoot scheduled for April 15. No entrance or prize fees are necessary. Points will be determined from young and old crows killed and crow eggs destroyed.

James G. Mott, Worthington, is chairman of the crow shoot contest. Complete information is available to all sportsmen's organizations interested in participating in the contest.

Approval of Mortgage Takes Less than Week

Washington, D. C., March 30.—Reports from the 63 insuring offices of the Federal Housing Administration throughout the country show that an average of less than a week is required for the approval of an application for insurance of a home mortgage, either for refinancing or for new construction, according to an announcement by the Administration.

One of the quickest approvals on record was made within a day and a half in the District of Columbia office in Washington, but it was pointed out by Administration officials that the circumstances were exceptional. The credit report, for instance, was immediately available while usually three days are required to obtain this information.

Four of the main causes of delay, it was stated, are (1) when the property is located at a remote distance from the insuring office, (2) when new material or novel design are involved in the construction of the house, (3) when the property is located in a new development, or (4) when the advice of Washington headquarters is needed in an exceptional case.

While every effort is being made by the insuring offices to handle applications for insurance with the utmost speed, Administration officials stated, thoroughness and accuracy are never sacrificed. The procedure follows:

"If the property owner has already made arrangements with the bank or other lending institution for the mortgage loan, the institution makes the application for insurance of the mortgage to the nearest office of the Federal Housing Administration. If the property owner has not yet found a lender, he may make the application himself.

"In the insuring office the application is first examined to check up obvious errors. It is then turned over to the Architectural and Valuation Sections, which make a dual inspection and appraisal of the property.

"Each of these sections makes a separate report to the chief underwriter, who is in direct charge of underwriting activities. After a complete review, he makes his recommendation as to the risk and classification of the mortgage to the director.

"If everything meets with the approval of the director, a commitment for insurance is issued. This commitment is final if the property owner has already arranged with the lending institution for the mortgage loan. It is tentative if a lender has not yet been found, but requires only a few minutes to be made final when arrangements for the loan have been completed with an approved lending institution."

The average time required for approval of the insurance applications is said by Housing Administration officials to be about the same in Nevada as in New York. The chief reasons for this uniformity are said to be the fact that the staffs of the insuring offices received uniform training in the Federal Housing School for underwriters, and that their duties and procedure are defined clearly and fully in the Underwriting Manual. While the great distance of the properties from the insuring offices in some states slows up the process, more time is required in crowded sections of the country, for actual valuation of the property.

"One Drink Drunks" Cause of Accidents

The National Safety Magazine has discovered the tragic highway slaughter chargeable to the "one drink drunk." Dean Kendig of the Temple University, Philadelphia, states that one drink of whiskey or one pint of beer will increase the "reaction time" of a driver, meaning the time elapsed between the appearance of danger and the driver's reaction to it. by as much as 400 per cent.

"A radical is one who goes to the root—(radix: root) of things. It is necessary at this stage of our evolution that we go to the root of things. An institution has outlived its usefulness. This institution—the open market or profit system—no longer fosters technical progress and improvements of life's ways, but has arrested progress and is condemning the Western World to unnecesary poverty."—Harold Loeb.

"To protect our citizens in the retention of their properties I recommend the continuation of the Mortgage Moratorium Act until May 1, 1937. . . "—Excerpt from Governor Floyd B. Olson's Third Inaugural Message to the Minesota Legislature, delivered Wed., Jan. 9, 1935.

"The direction of the Governor's leadership was very definite in this message, which was not a speech which he would have used in the campaign. He was opposed to further moratoriums and tax bargainings."—Excerpt from letter by Senator E. L. Tungseth in the Thief River Falls Times of Jan. 24, 1935.

WHO WILL PROFIT FROM A REDUCTION?

Much has been said during the recent weeks by our worthy contemporary about the necessity for a reduction in the electric current rates in this city. Several instances have been cited to show that private companies are supplying current at t lower cost to the consumer. We believe that a survey will show that on the average, the private companies' charges are higher in more communities than they are lower than our own. Whether we are right in that assumption or not, the fact remains that municipally owned plants charge no more than they must, and private companies charge all they can get.

Lower rates would mean that the current consumption would increase greatly and would necessitate an addition to the power plant, and it seems to us that it is presumptious for those to toy with rate revisions who opposed an addition to the plant less than one and a half years ago, at a time that the federal government stood anxious and willing to pay one-third of the cost.

A reduction of rates would mean a reduction of the profits which accrue to the city from its power plant, for there is no possibility of the profit being held up through increased volume; the plant is at the limit of its capacity on peak loads now. Enlarging the plant would mean that every penny of the profits from increased volume, and more, would have to go towards paying for the addition.

The profit reported by the water and light department this year was $32,000.00, all of which has gone into the city's general fund and been used for city purposes. The average tax levy has been $40,000 per year for city purposes. If the light and power rates are reduced and the plant is left with what might be considered a safe working margin of $12,000 profit, it would mean that $20,000 which are now being paid into the city's coffers from the electric light and power department would have to be raised from direct taxation. We wonder how many property owners would like to have an increase of 50 per cent in their city taxes. The average householder pays about $25 to $30 or less per year for lights. If this was even cut in half by a reduction in rates, would that compensate for a fifty per cent increase in their city taxes.

It seems to us that a few mercantile establishments in the city which own no property except their stock of merchandise would be the largest gainers from a reduction in rates and their gain would be saddled on the property owners in increased taxes.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

The world is facing and already going thru tremendous social, economic and political changes. There is much suffering by innocent members of society who have no control of the r destiny, nor even of their daily lives. Is this the birth pains of of a new era? Is the capitalist system actually on its deathbed and will a new social order emerge out of the chaos of the present generation?

What do you think about it? If you haven't thought about it, it is time that you start. If you have given it some thought, what conclusions have you arrived at?

It seems to us that there is a battle to the death going on between two schools of thought; between two philosophies of government; between two theories of economics that are incompatible with each other. One or the other must be wrong. One or the other must survive and the other must perish.

Of course, the Forum has its mind pretty well made up as to which is right and which is wrong. But we are only one of many. We may be wrong. What do you think?

The time has come when it behooves all of us to speak up in meeting and lend our voice and our council to the discussion. Can this system of rugged individualism; this so-called Capitalist system, be made to function smoothly and in the interest of humanity, or must it be scrapped and another system built?

The capitalist system has been a virile economy. Altho its rules have been harsh and inexorable, thru its agency this country has been built from a primeval wilderness to a great empire, dotted with cities; bustling with activity; spanned with ribbons of steel and broad trails of concrete. Can it be made to continue to function?

Some people believe that while the capitalist system has been a "good old wagon," it has broken down and can't be repaired. Others believe that all that is necessary is to put on a new wheel or two and she will be as good as new. Still others think that the wagon is just alright if we get a good driver and then let him alone and kick some of the backseat drivers into outer darkness.

We are living in America, the land of free speech and a free press. We all have a right to express our opinions. In fact, if we are good citizens we will consider it a duty to express our opinions. For from open discussion and taking council with each other progress springs.

We want to impress upon our readers that the columns of the Forum are open to you. You are not only invited to write your views, but you are urged to do so. Write your views on social, economical or political issues, local, state or national and send them to the Forum. Make them as short and brief as your subject will allow. Use your name, or, if you prefer, you can use a pen-name. Remember your views do not necessarily have to coincide with ours. You can be a "so-and-so-this-and-that old- fossil," and still air your views in this paper, for we are publishing just what the name implies: the FORUM; a place where people may freely express their opinions.

HUMAN NATURE

It is because men are prone to be partial toward those they hate, servile towards those above, arrogant towards those below them, and either harsh or over-indulgent to those in poverty and distress, that it is so difficult to find anyone capable of exercising sound judgment with respect to the qualities of others.

Therefore it is the part of wisdom to withhold judgment and immerse ourselves in our own affairs in order that others may attend to theirs.—Confucius.

THAT CROMBIE PERSON

(Union Advocate, St. Paul)

Monday's St. Paul Dispatch carried a brief story under an inconspicuous head on an inside page to the effect that one Albert H. Crombie had been sentenced to serve up to 10 years in the Stillwater penitentiary for passing more than $200 worth of forged checks on Twin City department stores. The story said Crombie had been "lecturing" over the state, and that he had been unfrocked as a minister of the gospel following a doctrinal dispute.

The St. Paul Dispatch failed to state that this man Crombie was the same Crombie who had been hired by the Republicans in 1934 to go about the state to misrepresent the free text-book plank in the Farmer-Labor platform. The Dispatch was fully aware of Crombie's work because it never failed to give prominent publicity to anything Crombie had to say about communism in the Farmer-Labor proposal.

Crombie first came into prominence when he approached State Senator Emil Regnier, manager of the state Farmer-Labor campaign, and asked for a job as a campaigner for the party. Regnier refused to hire him. He then went over to the Republican camp where he had no difficulty in getting a job. He spent the late summer and up to the night before the 1934 election campaigning against the Farmer-Labor ticket.

When the republicans quit paying him he evidently felt that forgery was not much lower or more contemptible than doing the dirty work for the republicans, so he began to pass forged checks.

One can imagine what the St. Paul Dispatch and the Pioneer Press would have said about this case if Crombie had been employed by the Farmer-Labor party to throw mud against the republican candidates in the last election. But it so happens that Crombie was on the payroll of the republican party. Hence—a very obscure notice on an inside page and with no mention made of the kind of "lecturing" Crombie was doing.

And no doubt the editor of the St. Paul Dispatch actually wonders at times why he is held in such healthy contempt by thousands of his own readers. Some editors are that way.

CIVIL SERVICE

(St. Louis Co. Independent)

With the depression at its height and thousands of men seeking work, is there any wonder that those who have a job, even of the most menial character, are making every effort to retain their jobs by attempting to establish civil service thru acts of the legislature. There are bills now before the legislature that would place employes of the sheriff's office under civil service, and another that would place school employes under the same rule. The men who are thus employed cannot be blamed for making every effort to protect their jobs. Many of them have, no doubt, given many years of service in their present position and are entitled to some consideration, but with politics playing such an important part in securing positions civil service seems to be the only thing that these employed men and women can turn to to protect themselves against being "ousted," and the job given over to some political favorite. Why not include village and township employes under the civil service rule? If this act was then adopted it would make the average voter a little more conscious of the economic changes needed, and perhaps bring about a change for the better for everyone.

TOM THE CHISELER

(Austin American)

Minnesota is still making the headlines thruout the nation as being the state which sent the Senate's most ardent chiseler to Washington. It recently befell the duty of the postoffice department to censor Senator Thomas Schall for abuse of the franking privilege. Ever since Schall has been in the Senate, complaints have been heard about his use—or, if you prefer, his misuse of postage. Just prior to and during political campaigns this complaint is loudest, largely because it is then that he makes the most use of his franking privileges for the purpose of defeating opponents.

In other words, he's just a plain chiseler. If he managed to get by with something bigger than postage stamps, there'd be another word for it. But the fact that he takes more stamps than many persons contend he should makes him nothing but a petty chiseler.

This naturally reflects on the state of Minnesota unfavorably. Minnesota has the reputation of sending a chiseler to the senate not only once, but twice in succession. Fortunately, the chiseler's term expires in 19366 and then citizens of this state will have a chance to make a much needed cha ...

HELPING THE FARMER

(Bismarck, N. Dak., Leader)

Help the farmers? Yes, by all means help the farmers. But don't forget his trouble is not overproduction. His trouble is in the empty bellies of millions of American people. Fill those bellies as they should be filled and the farm problem is solved. However, this cannot be done under the profit system. So long as the producers receive only enough pay to purchase part of their product there will be over production, which is but another noise for under-consumption.

Helping the farmers means changing the whole system. It means production for use instead of production for profit. It means the U. S. incorporated; each citizen one share and one vote, having no other purpose in view than to give to everyone of its working shareholders the best living the corporation can afford. The rest is moonshine.

Men in the United States have bought on the average four-tenths of a suit of clothes a year since 1929. Let us hope it was the pants fraction.—The Boston Evening Transcript.

Every economic move has some sort of political expression.—Simmons.

BISHOP CANNON PREDICTS RETURN OF PROHIBITION

Present day conditions "call in thundertones for return of national prohibition," declared Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in a ringing challenge to the wet forces, issued this week in Washington, D. C. Bishop Cannon is on his way from Florida to California.

Speaking for the legislative committee of the Anti-Saloon League, he said:

"Fifteen months after the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, the country now has opportunity to face and to pass judgement on the tragic results which have followed that repeal. Unpdecedented increases in drunkenness of men and women, boys and girls, appalling increases in deaths and maiming from drunken drivers and drunken pedestrians, and the debauchery of girls and women; such facts, undeniably proclaim the absolute failure of repeal, and call in thundertones for return to national prohibition."

Reign of Terror in the South

News dispatches tell of a veritable "reign of terror" in the south, a nightmare of brutality that rivals the reign of a Mussolini or a Hitler. Cotton landlords and their allies, made malignant by the recent sharecropper publicity, are determined to frighten their tenants back into the twilight of servile ignorance. The danger is that this naive method of stemming the tide of progress may work.

The trouble started when a small group of organizers went out among the sharecrop tenants to help form the Sharecroppers Union. Under the crop sharing plan, the landlord receives fifty per cent of the crop, in return for allowing the tenant to use his land and take off feed for his horses and mules and perhaps a few vegetables, if he can raise them. Unscrupulous landlords often demanded more than their share, in times of a poor crop, knowing full well that the tenant could not strike back. The Union was determined to remedy all this, but organizers of the movement received jail sentences, clubbings, and near lynchings, and meetings were broken up with the most primitive methods.

There is a fifty-fifty chance that the landlords and their henchmen will fail to shoo the sharecropper back into the cave of fear from which he has just merged.

A Bag of Gags

"There's nothing new under the sun," sighed the Preacher in Eclestiastes approximately 2500 years ago. "Something's rotten in the State of Denmark," Hamlet added a few centuries ago. I quote these by way of introduction to this witticism of Sydney Smith: "Heat, ma'am! it was so dreadful here that I found nothing left for it but to take off my flesh and sit in my bones!"

Even Mae West is not original, for we have a Virginian novel of the 17th century in which the heroine admonishes the hero, "You must come up and see me some time."

Toward a Third Party

There is considerable agitation for the formation of a Labor Party in the United States to elect men favoring public ownership of utilities, social and unemployment insurance, and higher income taxes in the upper brackets—things that play a part in the evolution of a new order.

It so happens that Communists see in such a party an opportunity to educate the average American in the real issues of the present, which is almost impossible beneath the pink haze of the red scare which hangs fire at the moment. Reactionary right-wingers of the Socialist Party are disinclined to help such a movement, while certain left-wingers like Oscar Ameringer, Powers Hapgood, and Norman Thomas are disposed to help it along.

The general attitude is that there will be a labor party sooner or later. It is the duty of the people to form a rank-and-file organization before the Father Coughlins, Huey Longs, and others with fascist tendencies create a rank, filthy one—just another party of politicians. Acquiring "leadership" from above is too dangerous. The failure of the Labour Party in England may be ascribed directly to this, and should warn Americans not to be swayed by demagogy. Control should come from below, where power originates.

Although the chances are very slim, indeed, for a Labor Party to gain its aims by the ballot, the fact remains that such a movement brings us that much nearer to Der Tag.

More Sayings

John A. Dix said in 1861, "If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him down!" Dr. Samuel Johnson countered in 1790, with the remark, "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel." Joseph Addison, the referee, poured oil on troubled waters in 1699 with the pacifying rejoinder that "Much may be said on both sides."

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

"Change and decay
Is all around I see."

An arresting hymn from the beautiful hymn, "Abide With Me."

Change and decay are inherent in our developing world.

By these processes the world advances. And they should be no more peculiar in religious interpretation than in industry, science, politics, nationalism, or transportation.

Change is not necessarily harmful; it holds hope and opportunity. What a stagnant world this would be if it was a static world. No progress, advance, venture, experiment, wonder or daring.

To stand where our fathers stood is nothing to our credit. Oaks and oysters or monkeys may do that, not men. To possessing of nothing more than more years old may be the possesing of nothing more than withered husks.

Change marches on!

Change is the constant presence of the resurrection spirit of the pioneer. The age of the pioneer is never over. We are right in the midst of it this very day.

OLD MAN RIVER

(Excerpt from "Old Man River" by Stuart Chase in the New Republic of March 27, 1935.)

Old Man River, the midriff, the very bowels, of the nation. It comprises five great drainage basins, the Upper Mississippi, the Ohio, the Missouri, the Southwest, the Lower Mississippi. The Missouri Basin alone exceeds the area of Germany, France and Italy combined. Forty-nine million Americans live in the Great Valley, on 1,235,000 square miles of land—when not under water floods. Here grow the great staple crops: wheat, corn, cotton, rye; here hogs and beeves are fattened for a continental market; here are huge deposits of coal, iron ore, copper, oil; a forest coverage once vast, now dwindling. One can grow giddy with the statistical wealth of the Mississippi Basin. But a conversation I had the other day with an old-timer from St. Louis is a good specific for giddiness. "No, sir, I wouldn't go back there again. I can't stand it; it breaks me all up. Last time was the last. Why, I remember when that valley was a paradise; fat farms, bursting barns, neat, painted houses, smiling people, prosperous, happy. It was a pleasure to go up and down from state to state with a horse and wagon. Now what do you find? Misery, unpainted houses, no more smiles, floods, pollution, erosion, patched fences, pep meetings by tin-horn Chambers of Commerce. Sure, there are more roads, automobiles, radios, and movie palaces, but what are they? A lick of paint on a rotten flooring. That valley used to be rich. Rich for people to live in, common folks. Now it may be rich for some Easterners, but its poor to live in. I wouldn't be found dead in it; the heart's gone out of it. Something has made a hell out of what was paradise once."

Voters' Negligence Brought Reactionary Legislature

By Oliver A. Cabot

I witnessed the mass demonstration of the unemployed at the capitol and heartily endorse their aims and demands. A million times the praise heaped upon William Bennet and his H. F. 120, providing for employment and social insurance and an old age pension, would never compensate him for his struggles on behalf of the working class. The Farmer-Labor party is made up of men such as he.

However, I cannot pile enough criticism upon those who were there, and all employed—and the whole working class for that matter—in the method they are now employing to secure justice for the workers.

Last November they had their golden opportunity. They could have packed the house and senate with Bill Bennetts, Farmer-Laborites who were running on a platform which conforms in every respect with the present demands now being made. Under the leadership of Governor Olson, legislation would have been the law long before this, performing the miracles now demanded and much more.

Had they expended as much energy to elect such men, as they are now using in their futile demonstrations, they would have Bennetts and Bellmans in every seat in the house and senate.

Sidney, Australia (TIS)—Mass distribution of Nazi literature just before the recent Australian elections has served to call attention to the propaganda activities of the German consulates in Australia. Despite an official denial of the German authorities, it is well established that the Consulates have been active in financing and supporting propaganda of an extremely vicious anti-Semitic character. A governmental investigation has been announced.

In 1916 (wet) the alcoholic death rate in Chicago was 10.8 per 100,000 population. In 1930 (dry) the rate had dropped to 2.7—a decline of 75 per cent.

The Farmers' Union at Washington

Washington, D. C.
March 28, 1935

In the closing hours of the debate of the Senate Saturday, Senator George of Georgia introduced the following amendment to the President's four billion, eight hundred and eighty million dollar Relief Bill: "The funds made available by this joint resolution may be used, in the discretion of the President, for the administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, during the period of twelve months after the effective date of this act."

This amendment immediately drew the fire of the members of the Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee, who fear this amendment will rob impoverished agriculture of its rightful share of the Relief Bill. In collaboration with M. W. Thatcher, Washington representative of the Farmers National Grain Corporation, a telegram opposing the George amendment was dispatched to twenty-seven Senators and to twenty-three Congressman. The text of the telegram read: "It is unbelievable that the Senate adopted without a qualm the amendment to the huge relief bill offered during the last moments of Saturday's session by Senator George. Has not the powerful textile lobby and others sent to Congressional conference a piece of joker legislation capable of robbing agriculture of its direct share of the relief bill by having that share used as bounty payments in lieu of further imposition of processing taxes? If so the triple A is emasculated and agriculture is again sold down the river. Please investigate and protect what little farmers have left.

Respectfully,
M. W. THATCHER,
Washington Representative,
Farmers National Grain Corporation and Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee."

The Relief Bill has now passed the House and Senate and is in Conference. According to the Congresisonal Record of March 26, the George Amendment may meet enough opposition in conference to be eliminated from the relief bill.

The Legislative Committee today rededicated itself to a strenuous effort to secure the passage of H. R. 6199, better known as the parity amendment. As a matter of legislative strategy H. R. 6199 has been appended to H. R. 5585 which is an administration measure seeking to give the Secretary of Agriculture the right to license processors and dealers in agricultural commodities, if and when over 50 per cent of the producers have entered a marketing agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture. For example, if H. R. 5585 becomes law, the Secretary of Agriculture, can among other things, ask Swift & Co. to explain how in 1934 that company could report a profit of more than eleven million dollars, while the farmers producing those commodities, without exception, went into the red.

When asked today to justify parity income the committee replied that the farmer cannot furnish $5.00 board for $3.00, as stated by M. W. Thatcher, at the recent hearings before the House Agricultural Committee. The proposed method of figuring parity applies to all commodities on which benefit payments are made. In terms of wheat at present prices the amendment if passed into law means to North Dakota wheat farmers increased payments over the present method of calculation of about $66,067,000, to Minnesota wheat farmers about $791,000, to Montana wheat farmers about $2,660,000, to South Dakota wheat farmers about $2,129,000, and to Kansas wheat farmers about $10,013,000. Farmers producing other basic commodities on which benefit payments are made will also be substantially benefitted under this proposed method of arriving at parity.

In further reviewing legislative and administrative action pertaining to agriculture, the committee took a great deal of satisfaction in noting that the FERA will cooperate with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to the effect that farmers unable to finance themselves, will get their seed grain immediately on their notes, if last Fall and Winter they placed seed orders through their county drought committees.

Kiruna: A Workers' Utopia

(From Christian Science Monitor)

KIRUNA, Sweden. — Electricity is enabling Sweden to realize its dream of developing its vast natural resources within the Arctic Circle.

Harnessing the countless mountain lakes and streams has made possible the taming of this wild region of intense cold, continual snow and midnight darkness half the year.

North of the Arctic Circle, lying between two of the richest iron mines in the world, lies Kiruna, founded only 25 years ago. Today it has 10,000 inhabitants and is called a "workers' paradise."

The majority of thei inhabitants are miners and their families. The local government has long been under the control of the workers. Local institutions and enterprises have been adapted to the needs and largely to the free use of the workers and their families. Wages per workers are said to be the highest in Europe with correspondingly high living conditions.

Below Frost Level

A water plant at Porjus with underground galleries far below the frost level has made it possible for Kiruna mines to be worked the year round, 24 hours a day, flooded by electric lights. Also the miners' homes are heated cheaply and cleanly by electricity. The children attend schools warmed and lighted by the same dependable power.

The boys of the town have built a radio station of their own. Technical engineers installed the electrical apparatus. Throughout the winter they broadcast their own local programs furnished entirely by home talent. Practically every household has its own dial telephone. Trolley cars take the workers to and from work free.

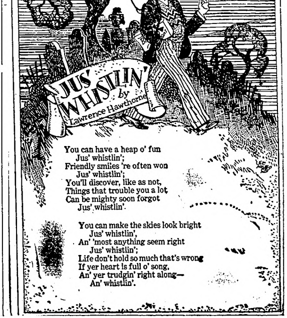
The underlying revolution responsible for all the minor moderninzing changes begins in the industry itself—first, with the floodlights that make the two iron mountains stand out like jewels of the night with a thousand sparkling facets, and, second, with the invention of electrical drills, mine-exploders, giant crushers and hoists. The latter not only saved labor, but increased output many times, requiring more and more men to handle the enormous quantity of mined ore that has touched 6,000,000 tons a year.

Electricity Everywhere

Finally, the electrification of the railway line, equipped with powerful locomotives and an automatic block system, has facilitated the handling of the long trains of iron ore that pull out of Kiruna daily toward the smelters in Sweden, or to Narvik on the Norwegian coast whence it is shipped abroad.

Perhaps only in Kiruna, apart from the United States, does one see a percentage of workers going to and from their work, or taking a holiday in their own motorcars. But in Kiruna a miner earns as much as 100 crowns, about $260 a month. He may be only a drill sharpener. But in accordance with the Swedish system whereby a worker participates in the profits of other workers to whom his skill directly contributes, the drill sharpener gets a percentage on all iron mined with the tools he has sharpened.

The miner leaves his street clothes in his individual locker, to which he returns after eight hours of labor, to enjoy a hot bath, followed by a cold shower. He returns to a clean, electrically-regulated household—with rentals from about $10 a month. Most of the workers and their families spend long winter evenings reading in the libraries found in almost every house, attending lectures or listening to the radio.



JUS' WHISTLIN' by Lawrence Hawthorne

You can have a heap o' fun
Jus' whistlin';
Friendly smiles 're often won
Jus' whistlin';
You'll discover, like as not,
Things that trouble you a lot
Can be mighty soon forgot
Jus' whistlin'.

You can make the skies look bright
Jus' whistlin',
An' 'most anything seem right
Jus' whistlin';
Life don't hold so much that's wrong
If yer heart is full o' song,
An' yer trudgin' right along—
An' whistlin'.

APRIL

Brings a Delightful Newness

NEW. . .new. . .new. . .everything new for Spring. Fresh in every respect. Our minds are led into new channels of thot, our clothes are of the latest design and pattern for the Easter Parade, and Nature bursts forth in a blaze of radiant spring glory. Truly, the Spring season brings with it a new found joy in the art of living.

Behind all of this newness and brightness lie many months of definite planning. The sermon has been in preparation for many weeks, Nature has been running its cycle with regularity ever since time began, Spring ever following on the heels of Winter. The newest in Easter fashions comes only as a result of months of viewing, selecting, and buying on the part of local merchants. It is their primary objective to buy wisely and well for the community which they serve. Their goal, that of every Thief River Falls merchant, is to give better service to those who rely upon them.

It is the earnest wish of the signers of this page that you realize the true joys of this Spring season. If you do, then their efforts will have been rewarded to no small degree.

Gave New Zealand Name

Just about the time when Vikings may have been exploring Labrador, Nova Scotia and the coast of Maine, there lived in Ra'iatea, an island of what is now the Friendly Group, a Polynesian navigator called Kupe. He was known for his intrepidity in a community where the virtue was common. Kupe paid a visit to Rarotonga, 500 miles from his home, and there decided to see what lay to the south. There are no details of that voyage of discovery. All that is known is that on a November morning Kupe's wife saw the clouds over the land to the north of Auckland, and from that came the Maori name for New Zealand—Aotea-Roa (the long, white cloud).

TOMATOES

WHY not make tomorrow a red letter day by including a dish reddened with tasty tomatoes in your breakfast? It will look good, it will taste good, and, with the proper accompaniments, it will start the day off right. Here is a suggestion for such a breakfast menu:

Orange Juice
Oatmeal with Cream
Poached Eggs in Tomato Sauce
Toast Coffee

Poached Eggs in Tomato Sauce: Press the contents of a No. 2 can tomatoes through a sieve, and bring to boiling in a skillet. In this hot liquid poach four eggs, lifting them out when done onto buttered toast on a hot platter. Meanwhile have one small chopped onion sautéing in two tablespoons butter. Add two tablespoons flour, stir smooth and as soon as the eggs are out of the tomato juice, add it slowly to the tomato juice, stirring until smooth and creamy. Season to taste and pour over the eggs. Serves four.

That Old Debate

There is an old debate as to what is the best part of breakfast, but everyone agrees that good or bad coffee makes or breaks it. Tastes differ as to the palatability of various coffee blends, but everyone is agreed that you can't make good coffee out of any blend unless it is strictly fresh.

So why not have it fresh? The way to do that is so exceedingly simple that it is no more of a problem to a bride than it is to a veteran housekeeper. There are many blends and brands of coffee now packed in vacuum cans and they all stay strictly fresh till they are opened. Be sure that the words "vacuum packed" are on the can of coffee you buy, and you will have solved that part of your coffee problem.*

Some Basic Soups

IN shivery weather like this, sizzling hot savory corn is one of the best bases for salubrious soups. That's good alliteration, but not half as good as some of the soups which we are going to suggest. Here they are:

Cream of Corn Supreme: Simmer the contents of one can corn, one-half cup celery, one slice onion and two cups water together for twenty minutes. Rub through a sieve. Add to two cups thin white sauce and season highly with salt and pepper. Just before serving, add one slightly beaten egg mixed with one cup cream, and heat in double boiler. Serve in bouillon cups with a spoonful of whipped cream on top. Serves eight.

Corn and Lettuce Soup: Sauté one cup shredded lettuce in two tablespoons butter until it starts to brown. Add one cup creamy canned corn and cook gently for five minutes more. Add three cups scalded milk to one cup hot mashed potatoes, add to corn, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Bind with a little flour if desired thicker. Serves six.

Made with Mushrooms

Cream of Corn and Mushroom Soup: Cook the contents of an 11-ounce can corn, three cups milk, one large sliced onion, one small stalk celery and one bay leaf in a double boiler for fifteen minutes, then strain. Cut fine the mushrooms from a 4-ounce can, and sauté them in two tablespoons flour, and stir smooth. Add the mushroom liquor slowly, stirring till thick and creamy. Add to the hot milk mixture and cook again till smooth and creamy. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and add one-half cup cream. Serve in cups. Serves six.*

Some Basic Soups

IN shivery weather like this, sizzling hot savory corn is one of the best bases for salubrious soups. That's good alliteration, but not half as good as some of the soups which we are going to suggest. Here they are:

Cream of Corn Supreme: Simmer the contents of one can corn, one-half cup celery, one slice onion and two cups water together for twenty minutes. Rub through a sieve. Add to two cups thin white sauce and season highly with salt and pepper. Just before serving, add one slightly beaten egg mixed with one cup cream, and heat in double boiler. Serve in bouillon cups with a spoonful of whipped cream on top. Serves eight.

Corn and Lettuce Soup: Sauté one cup shredded lettuce in two tablespoons butter until it starts to brown. Add one cup creamy canned corn and cook gently for five minutes more. Add three cups scalded milk to one cup hot mashed potatoes, add to corn, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Bind with a little flour if desired thicker. Serves six.

Made with Mushrooms

Cream of Corn and Mushroom Soup: Cook the contents of an 11-ounce can corn, three cups milk, one large sliced onion, one small stalk celery and one bay leaf in a double boiler for fifteen minutes, then strain. Cut fine the mushrooms from a 4-ounce can, and sauté them in two tablespoons flour, and stir smooth. Add the mushroom liquor slowly, stirring till thick and creamy. Add to the hot milk mixture and cook again till smooth and creamy. Season to taste with salt and pepper. and add one-half cup cream. Serve in cups. Serves six.*

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V

STILL, something did turn up.

Just at breakfast time, while Ben was prowling the mill, admitting to himself that perhaps it was time to look at his hole card—the letter that the old cruiser had sent to him with its intriguing inscription—a stranger behind a light driving team swung into the mill-yard, stopped and tied his horses.

"Well, you had a fire!" he said as Ben approached. "See you've still got a mill standing, though?"

"Standing, yes. But that's all you can say for it."

"That's tough!" The man eyed him in genuine concern. "Are you by any chance Ben Elliott?"

"I am."

"Elliott, my name's Blackmore. Glad to see you! I was in here and talked with Harrington week before last and he was saving out some veneer logs for me. I'm with the Veneer Exporting corporation and we're in the market for quite a few cars of stuff. Wonder if I could interest you in a deal. Market's right good and we're in need of some more stuff to fill out a shipment. Maybe with your mill shut down you might be interested."

"That's a close guess. Shoot!"

"I'll pay you a hundred and twenty dollars a thousand for bird's eye maple and ninety dollars for veneer birch; standard specifications and delivery inside of two weeks on, say, thirty thousand. I know you're busy, so I name the top and pass any dickering."

A hundred and twenty. . . . And ninety for birch! Ben's heart leaped but he gave no outward indication of the great relief that surged through him.

"Two weeks?" he asked.

"Yes, and less. Let's see. . . . I'll have to have thirty thousand delivered in just eleven days to be safe in getting 'em to Montreal on time. I'll take fifty thousand at the price but the thirty will have to be loaded on track first."

"That'll be fast production."

"All of that! But if I can't get the stuff from you I can from Brandon by going up a few dollars a thousand. My cards are on the table, Elliott. Can we deal?"

Ben considered, rubbing his chin with a knuckle. He looked up the road which led toward camp to see a man approaching with that quick, space devouring stride of the woodsman.

"Had breakfast?" he asked.

"No."

"Blanket your team and go eat. I'll have an answer for you by the time you're through."

As the veneer buyer entered the boarding house Bird-Eye Blaine—the traveler from camp—had reached the mill-yard.

"For the love av—" he began, turning his amazed stare from the mill to Elliott.

"Yes, a fire, Bird-Eye. Never mind that now. Where'd you get your name? I mean 'Bird-Eye.' Why do they call you that?"

"Oh, that! Why, I looked veneer stuff from Brandon for years until I got sick with disgust fer th' mon."

"I see. And you've been on the Hoot Owl for three years, haven't you? Know the timber pretty well?"

"I know ivery quarter stake by its first name!"

"How much bird's-eye and veneer birch is there within draying distance of the steel? Let's get down to cases. Do you think there's ten thousand? Or fifty?"

"Fifty? Naw! Tin?"—twisting his head. "Twict that, annyhow. 'Nd on twinty-three the' 's another bunch av ut. Scattered all through, too, but bunched, Misther Elliott, loike ye don't see ut frequent. That makes ut easy to git out."

"What I'm getting at is this: With the crew I've got could we get thirty thousand out in ten days?"

Bird-Eye shrugged.

"Domn, b'y, but that's a chore! With this crew av hay tossers?" He shook his head. "Mebby you could . . . you 'nd Paul Bunyan. Most men couldn't even so much as start."

"Wait here. I'll see you in a few minutes."

He entered Buller's house where Able Armitage sipped coffee gloomily, neglecting the food on his plate.

"This is the nineteenth," Ben said. "With what bank balance we have, how much must we get together to meet the payroll, that one note that you think can't be renewed and interest on others that'll be due? My figures are all up at camp."

Able considered at length.

"Three thousand might let us out. Why?"

He put that question dryly.

"I just wondered." Ben turned to Buller. "How many men will you need to get the mill in shape? I mean, how many can you use and not have them falling over each other?"

"Oh, four or five besides myself."

Ben nodded. "That'll give me fifteen of the mill crew to throw into the woods." His eyes snapped as he looked back at Able. "A half hour ago I was feeling about half licked. I'll make the three thousand by the first or break my neck!"

"What are you getting at, Benny?" Able demanded.

"This." Ben hitched his chair close to the table and with a relish which indicated the love of battle, sketched his plan.

By noon that plan was in partial operation. Bird-Eye Blaine, his duties as barn boss temporarily delegated to another, and Ben Elliott cruised through the timber north of camp, belt axes in their hands. And in the morning the camp crew, augmented by fifteen men from the mill, left off the work of felling timber in strips, scattered through the woods and dropped marked trees. Swampers were with them, clearing the way for teams that followed close on the sawyers' heels and drayed these high quality logs out to the railroad.

"But it's a man's sized job to keep your eye on such an operation!" Ben declared to Able. "I've got to watch Buller and the mill, too. I've got to think about markets so we'll be all set when we commence to saw again. And the devil of it is I'm only one hand and there are only twenty-four hours in a day!" He grinned. "Where's this good man you told me about? Jeffers? Is that his name?"

"Tim Jeffers? Over in the next town! But I doubt he'll even listen. He hasn't wanted a job in three years."

"Doubting isn't knowing," Ben said grimly and the next afternoon drove hard for Jeffers' little farm clearing.

The old logger met Elliott with an eye that seemed at first to be hostile but which on closer observation proved to be only one of severe appraisal.

"So you're after a camp foreman," he said. "No, I've quit the timber for good, Elliott. I'm through. A man has trouble enough without hunting it. I'm not a young man, son. I've no years nor strength any more to put into another man's losing fight."

"We won't lose. Brandon's tried everything up to and including fire and he hasn't got me licked yet. Come along with me, Tim Jeffers, and we'll run him into his hole!"

But the man was obdurate and Ben left him, chagrined and a bit angered at his failure.

"Brandon's got a crimp in the whole country," he muttered as he drove on toward camp. "And here I am, trying to do four men's work. Tough nut? I'll tell the world!"

In Tincup he drove to the express office to inquire for the new piston head for the locomotive which was due. He wanted to start loading his veneer logs and getting them out to the siding as rapidly as they came from the woods. He had signed a contract with the time for delivery specified and wanted to run no chance of delay.

But the repair part was not there.

"Got the bill of it," the station agent said. "But it hasn't shown up. Ought to be along tomorrow."

However, the next day did not bring the repairs and the driver of Ben's supply team reported the fact to him.

[illegible]nt, he wants to see [illegible] the man added enigmatically.

"Didn't that piston head come yet?" Ben demanded angrily of the supply teamster after the man's next trip to town.

"I told you the agent wanted to see you."

The other's manner was doggedly mysterious and Elliott, without further questioning, harnessed and drove to Tincup.

The agent shook hands cordially and drew him inside the tiny ticket office. He spoke in a cautious tone, although they were alone.

"The messenger on the train says he put that engine part off for me the night the bill came through. It ain't here and I'm takin' a chance of losing my job just telling you even that much."

Ben frowned.

"What are you driving it? It's not here and you'll lose— You mean, the express company'll hold you responsible for an article lost out of the depot?"

"That don't worry me. The shipment came in and I never saw it and if I was to tell you that the only thing that could've happened was that it was taken off the truck while I was handling baggage it wouldn't be a bad guess. But if certain parties knew I told you that much the railroad would get such a complaint about me that I'd be out of a job between days and don't you forget it!"

"Oh, I see." Ben looked at a calendar. "It took them five days to get it back to me. Can't wait that long. Give me a telegraph blank. I'll have 'em notify me by wire when they ship and if I have to meet trains myself . . . why, I can do that, too."

The other nodded and gave Ben a worried look.

"I sort of liked the way you did up Duval in that log rollin'; and I heard about the trimmin' you gave him at camp. And I'm . . . Well, I've seen enough raw stuff go on around this man's town to feed me up. I'll help you all I can but I've got kids to think about."

Ben made a wry face.

"Even children don't seem safe," he said. "Some of us have got only our dander invested in the particular fracas I'm mixing in, but everything the little McManus girl has got is at stake."

"Yup. You're— Little girl?"

"Yes. The McManus girl. She owns the Hoot Owl."

"Oh," the agent said with a queer look.

The following morning, a half hour after the men had gone to the woods, a sawyer came running toward the camp office just in time to catch Ben before he left for the mill.

"Hi, Elliott!" he called. "Hold on a minute!"

He came breathlessly up to the sleigh.

"Somebody cut three inches offen the measures last night. Thought you ought to know. Logs three inches short might be thrown out."

"Somebody cut— How'd you find that out?"

"Well, we left the measuring stick layin' on a tree we'd dropped last night. I'd marked it myself, figurin' on making one more log before we quit and then we decided not to. It snowed just a mite durin' the night. I laid the measure down again this morning and made another mark, forgetting about the first which was covered up with snow, you see. When I marked, it knocked the snow off the log, showing up my first one three inches off. I thought that was funny so I measured again. Somethin' was wrong, sure. We looked her over and found where a piece had been cut off the stick and then we saw where tracks—"

"Be with you pronto," Ben muttered as he turned his team back toward the barn.

He found five of the saw gangs with shortened measures. Fortunately, the discovery was made early in the day and only a few under-length logs had been made. However, it proved to Ben that menacing influences struck in unexpected ways and from all quarters. An unexplained snowshoe trail was found which led in from the north and none knew who had made it. The visitor evidently had gone out by road in the dead of night.

Shortly after dinner on the following day, Ben Elliott set out to investigate a story of a trappers' camp on Squaw lake, which lay to the northward of Hoot Owl.

Things were going swimmingly on the job. He was a bit ahead even of the stiff schedule of production he had set for himself and if the weather held reasonably good and he could frustrate these attempts to slow him up, he would turn the trick which engaged him for the present.

It was a good six miles to Squaw lake but he did not follow the most direct route. Swung right and left now and then, smiling when he came on a particularly fine piece of timber. Certainly, the Hoot Owl stuff looked better every time he went through it. Money standing on end for an orphan girl if he, Ben Elliott, should be strong enough to outlast Nicholas Brandon's ruthlessness and persistence! He wondered about Dawn McManus, known and marked as the daughter of a murderer. Tough, he told himself, for a child to grow up under a cloud like that.

He started back after a fruitless investigation, and had not gone more than half-way to camp when he came suddenly upon a fresh snowshoe trail. He stopped short with a little thrill. Another prowler? The one who had shortened his measures yesterday? The tracks were only moments old, he knew by the way the freshly falling snow lay in them.

Ben went faster, breaking into a jog trot where the going was good. A half hour later he saw the moving figure before him. Ben saw him turn about, looking upward, stare into the wind which blew from the northwest and swing to go with it. Not completely lost, as a greenhorn might be; not floundering in panic and traveling meaningless circles, but still far from certain in directions.

Ben felt a tightening in his throat. This, the chances were, would be an encounter with one of the men who, most certainly acting on Brandon's orders, sought to hamper and hamstring him. A savage anticipation ran his veins with that; to meet this prowler would be a greater satisfaction, even, than throwing Bull Duval out of his camp had been.

Elliott pushed on, moving faster than the other, cutting down the distance between them as the thickening gloom made it impossible for him to see clearly at any distance.

The man before him stopped suddenly and faced about. Elliott hesitated, wondering whether he had been seen or not. If not, he wanted to trail secretly; if so—

He dipped into a sharp ravine, climbed the other slope . . . and came face to face with the most lovely girl he could then or afterward remember having seen in his life.

Water Flows Uphill

Owing to marked variations in atmospheric pressure, the surface of Lake Geneva, Switzerland, is not infrequently 5 or 6 feet higher on one side of the lake than on the other. The phenomenon is known as "the seiche," and it causes the lake to swing back and forth for periods upwards of an hour.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a logbirling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V

STILL, something did turn up.

Just at breakfast time, while Ben was prowling the mill, admitting to himself that perhaps it was time to look at his hole card—the letter that the old cruiser had sent to him with its intriguing inscription—a stranger behind a light driving team swung into the mill-yard, stopped and tied his horses.

"Well, you had a fire!" he said as Ben approached. "See you've still got a mill standing, though?"

"Standing, yes. But that's all you can say for it."

"That's tough!" The man eyed him in genuine concern. "Are you by any chance Ben Elliott?"

"I am."

"Elliott, my name's Blackmore. Glad to see you! I was in here and talked with Harrington week before last and he was saving out some veneer logs for me. I'm with the Veneer Exporting corporation and we're in the market for quite a few cars of stuff. Wonder if I could interest you in a deal. Market's right good and we're in need of some more stuff to fill out a shipment. Maybe with your mill shut down you might be interested."

"That's a close guess. Shoot!"

"I'll pay you a hundred and twenty dollars a thousand for bird's eye maple and ninety dollars for veneer birch; standard specifications and delivery inside of two weeks on, say, thirty thousand. I know you're busy, so I name the top and pass any dickering."

A hundred and twenty. . . . And ninety for birch! Ben's heart leaped but he gave no outward indication of the great relief that surged through him.

"Two weeks?" he asked.

"Yes, and less. Let's see. . . . I'll have to have thirty thousand delivered in just eleven days to be safe in getting 'em to Montreal on time. I'll take fifty thousand at the price but the thirty will have to be loaded on track first."

"That'll be fast production."

"All of that! But if I can't get the stuff from you I can from Brandon by going up a few dollars a thousand. My cards are on the table, Elliott. Can we deal?"

Ben considered, rubbing his chin with a knuckle. He looked up the road which led toward camp to see a man approaching with that quick, space devouring stride of the woodsman.

"Had breakfast?" he asked.

"No."

"Blanket your team and go eat. I'll have an answer for you by the time you're through."

As the veneer buyer entered the boarding house Bird-Eye Blaine—the traveler from camp—had reached the mill-yard.

"For the love av—" he began, turning his amazed stare from the mill to Elliott.

"Yes, a fire, Bird-Eye. Never mind that now. Where'd you get your name? I mean 'Bird-Eye.' Why do they call you that?"

"Oh, that! Why, I looked veneer stuff from Brandon for years until I got sick with disgust fer th' mon."

"I see. And you've been on the Hoot Owl for three years, haven't you? Know the timber pretty well?"

"I know ivery quarter stake by its first name!"

"How much bird's-eye and veneer birch is there within draying distance of the steel? Let's get down to cases. Do you think there's ten thousand? Or fifty?"

"Fifty? Naw! Tin?"—twisting his head. "Twict that, annyhow. 'Nd on twinty-three the' 's another bunch av ut. Scattered all through, too, but bunched, Misther Elliott, loike ye don't see ut frequent. That makes ut easy to git out."

"What I'm getting at is this: With the crew I've got could we get thirty thousand out in ten days?"

Bird-Eye shrugged.

"Domn, b'y, but that's a chore! With this crew av hay tossers?" He shook his head. "Mebby you could . . . you 'nd Paul Bunyan. Most men couldn't even so much as start."

"Wait here. I'll see you in a few minutes."

He entered Buller's house where Able Armitage sipped coffee gloomily, neglecting the food on his plate.

"This is the nineteenth," Ben said. "With what bank balance we have, how much must we get together to meet the payroll, that one note that you think can't be renewed and interest on others that'll be due? My figures are all up at camp."

Able considered at length.

"Three thousand might let us out. Why?"

He put that question dryly.

"I just wondered." Ben turned to Buller. "How many men will you need to get the mill in shape? I mean, how many can you use and not have them falling over each other?"

"Oh, four or five besides myself."

Ben nodded. "That'll give me fifteen of the mill crew to throw into the woods." His eyes snapped as he looked back at Able. "A half hour ago I was feeling about half licked. I'll make the three thousand by the first or break my neck!"

"What are you getting at, Benny?" Able demanded.

"This." Ben hitched his chair close to the table and with a relish which indicated the love of battle, sketched his plan.

By noon that plan was in partial operation. Bird-Eye Blaine, his duties as barn boss temporarily delegated to another, and Ben Elliott cruised through the timber north of camp, belt axes in their hands. And in the morning the camp crew, augmented by fifteen men from the mill, left off the work of felling timber in strips, scattered through the woods and dropped marked trees. Swampers were with them, clearing the way for teams that followed close on the sawyers' heels and drayed these high quality logs out to the railroad.

"But it's a man's sized job to keep your eye on such an operation!" Ben declared to Able. "I've got to watch Buller and the mill, too. I've got to think about markets so we'll be all set when we commence to saw again. And the devil of it is I'm only one hand and there are only twenty-four hours in a day!" He grinned. "Where's this good man you told me about? Jeffers? Is that his name?"

"Tim Jeffers? Over in the next town! But I doubt he'll even listen. He hasn't wanted a job in three years."

"Doubting isn't knowing," Ben said grimly and the next afternoon drove hard for Jeffers' little farm clearing.

The old logger met Elliott with an eye that seemed at first to be hostile but which on closer observation proved to be only one of severe appraisal.

"So you're after a camp foreman," he said. "No, I've quit the timber for good, Elliott. I'm through. A man has trouble enough without hunting it. I'm not a young man, son. I've no years nor strength any more to put into another man's losing fight."

"We won't lose. Brandon's tried everything up to and including fire and he hasn't got me licked yet. Come along with me, Tim Jeffers, and we'll run him into his hole!"

But the man was obdurate and Ben left him, chagrined and a bit angered at his failure.

"Brandon's got a crimp in the whole country," he muttered as he drove on toward camp. "And here I am, trying to do four men's work. Tough nut? I'll tell the world!"

In Tincup he drove to the express office to inquire for the new piston head for the locomotive which was due. He wanted to start loading his veneer logs and getting them out to the siding as rapidly as they came from the woods. He had signed a contract with the time for delivery specified and wanted to run no chance of delay.

But the repair part was not there.

"Got the bill of it," the station agent said. "But it hasn't shown up. Ought to be along tomorrow."

However, the next day did not bring the repairs and the driver of Ben's supply team reported the fact to him.

"[illegible] nt, he wants to see [illegible]" the man added enigmatically.

"Didn't that piston head come yet?" Ben demanded angrily of the supply teamster after the man's next trip to town.

"I told you the agent wanted to see you."

The other's manner was doggedly mysterious and Elliott, without further questioning, harnessed and drove to Tincup.

The agent shook hands cordially and drew him inside the tiny ticket office. He spoke in a cautious tone, although they were alone.

"The messenger on the train says he put that engine part off for me the night the bill came through. It ain't here and I'm takin' a chance of losing my job just telling you even that much."

Ben frowned.

"What are you driving it? It's not here and you'll lose— You mean, the express company'll hold you responsible for an article lost out of the depot?"

"That don't worry me. The shipment came in and I never saw it and if I was to tell you that the only thing that could've happened was that it was taken off the truck while I was handling baggage it wouldn't be a bad guess. But if certain parties knew I told you that much the railroad would get such a complaint about me that I'd be out of a job between days and don't you forget it!"

"Oh, I see." Ben looked at a calendar. "It took them five days to get it back to me. Can't wait that long. Give me a telegraph blank. I'll have 'em notify me by wire when they ship and if I have to meet trains myself . . . why, I can do that, too."

The other nodded and gave Ben a worried look.

"I sort of liked the way you did up Duval in that log rollin'; and I heard about the trimmin' you gave him at camp. And I'm . . . Well, I've seen enough raw stuff go on around this man's town to feed me up. I'll help you all I can but I've got kids to think about."

Ben made a wry face.

"Even children don't seem safe," he said. "Some of us have got only our dander invested in the particular fracas I'm mixing in, but everything the little McManus girl has got is at stake."

"Yup. You're— Little girl?"

"Yes. The McManus girl. She owns the Hoot Owl."

"Oh," the agent said with a queer look.

The following morning, a half hour after the men had gone to the woods, a sawyer came running toward the camp office just in time to catch Ben before he left for the mill.

"Hi, Elliott!" he called. "Hold on a minute!"

He came breathlessly up to the sleigh.

"Somebody cut three inches offen the measures last night. Thought you ought to know. Logs three inches short might be thrown out."

"Somebody cut— How'd you find that out?"

"Well, we left the measuring stick layin' on a tree we'd dropped last night. I'd marked it myself, figurin' on making one more log before we quit and then we decided not to. It snowed just a mite durin' the night. I laid the measure down again this morning and made another mark, forgetting about the first which was covered up with snow, you see. When I marked, it knocked the snow off the log, showing up my first one three inches off. I thought that was funny so I measured again. Somethin' was wrong, sure. We looked her over and found where a piece had been cut off the stick and then we saw where tracks—"

"Be with you pronto," Ben muttered as he turned his team back toward the barn.

He found five of the saw gangs with shortened measures. Fortunately, the discovery was made early in the day and only a few underlength logs had been made. However, it proved to Ben that menacing influences struck in unexpected ways and from all quarters. An unexplained snowshoe trail was found which led in from the north and none knew who had made it. The visitor evidently had gone out by road in the dead of night.

Shortly after dinner on the following day, Ben Elliott set out to investigate a story of a trappers' camp on Squaw lake, which lay to the northward of Hoot Owl.

Things were going swimmingly on the job. He was a bit ahead even of the stiff schedule of production he had set for himself and if the weather held reasonably good and he could frustrate these attempts to slow him up, he would turn the trick which engaged him for the present.

It was a good six miles to Squaw lake but he did not follow the most direct route. Swung right and left now and then, smiling when he came on a particularly fine piece of timber. Certainly, the Hoot Owl stuff looked better every time he went through it. Money standing on end for an orphan girl if he, Ben Elliott, should be strong enough to outlast Nicholas Brandon's ruthlessness and persistence! He wondered about Dawn McManus, known and marked as the daughter of a murderer. Tough, he told himself, for a child to grow up under a cloud like that.

He started back after a fruitless investigation, and had not gone more than half-way to camp when he came suddenly upon a fresh snowshoe trail. He stopped short with a little thrill. Another prowler? The one who had shortened his measures yesterday? The tracks were only moments old, he knew by the way the freshly falling snow lay in them.

Ben went faster, breaking into a jog trot where the going was good. A half hour later he saw the moving figure before him. Ben saw him turn about, looking upward, stare into the wind which blew from the northwest and swing to go with it. Not completely lost, as a greenhorn might be; not floundering in panic and traveling meaningless circles, but still far from certain in directions.

Ben felt a tightening in his throat. This, the chances were, would be an encounter with one of the men who, most certainly acting on Brandon's orders, sought to hamper and hamstring him. A savage anticipation ran his veins with that; to meet this prowler would be a greater satisfaction, even, than throwing Bull Duval out of his camp had been.

Elliott pushed on, moving faster than the other, cutting down the distance between them as the thickening gloom made it impossible for him to see clearly at any distance.

The man before him stopped suddenly and faced about. Elliott hesitated, wondering whether he had been seen or not. If not, he wanted to trail secretly; if so—

He dipped into a sharp ravine, climbed the other slope . . . and came face to face with the most lovely girl he could then or afterward remember having seen in his life.

Water Flows Uphill

Owing to marked variations in atmospheric pressure, the surface of Lake Geneva, Switzerland, is not infrequently 5 or 6 feet higher on one side of the lake than on the other. The phenomenon is known as "the seiche," and it causes the lake to swing back and forth for periods upwards of an hour.

River Control Group Meets at Crookston

there is no federal survey being made on the Little and Big Fork rivers at the present time and stated that there is apparently little hope of any early action on any proposed water diversion project from that direction. He stressed the need of some action being taken, however, to raise the water level in the ground and in the lakes if this entire territory is not going to suffer untold damage in the next few years from water shortage.

Dr. Simpson stated that the area composed of North and South Dakota and Minnesota is known as the Area of Distress in the Bureau of Weather Statistics and the geoloigcal survey at Washington because of the alarming rate at which the rainfall has decreased thruout this territory over the period of half a century. According to Dr. Simpson's charts, this area has lost more in rainfall during the past thirty years than any other area in the United States. From 1908 to the present this continued decline in rainfall has bee alarmingly marked, he stated. A chart covering records kept over the past one hundred years shows that the Northwest has had two wet peaks. The chart starts out with a period of drouth, another came after about fifty years following a wet peak, and was again followed by a wet peak from which it has declined to the present low moisture levels. Moorhead district reports that the rainfall deficiency for that area has now reacehd 46½ inches. Results of surveys of ground water levels made thru well drillers shows that during the past eighteen years the ground water levels have receded as follows: North Dakota, 16 feet; Eastern South Dakota, 17 feet and Minnesota 13 feet. It will take many years of more than normal rainfall to restore the ground water level, he said.

Discussing plans under way in North Dakota, looking towards a systematic restoration plan, he said that a survey project will be started to get a quarter section report on ground water levels from the entire state. This is estimated to cost about $100,000. Ditches will be damned and every possible method will be used to hold the surface water on the land, he stated, so that it may get a chance to soak into the ground. He declared that North Dakota is ready to cooperate with this state in every way possible to restore the water and lake levels thruout the entire Red River Valley.

Discussion developed that there will be concerted action by every community in the entire Northern part of the state to concentrate local, state and federal attention on the acute water situation in this part of the Northwest. A resolution was drafted and passed requesting that the legislature pass the Conservation Department's Water Control Bill now before it. This Bill would empower the conservation to close ditches and construct dams where it may deem necessary to stem the water flow-off.

Another resolution was addressed to Governor Floyd B. Olson, the Executive council, the board of control and ERA administrator Zimmerman requesting them to aid in locating conservation and control projects to meet the emergency which exists in the valley.

A committee on which P. O. Myhrom represents this city will proceed to, in collaboration with Mr. Frisbie, outline some program of permanent policy and projects to submit to the next meeting of the group, to be held possibly on the fifteenth of this month or shortly thereafter. This program is to embody water conservation and control work covering the entire Minnesota side of the Red river from Crookston and north and will include Cross Lake, Maple lake, and Red Lake restoration. The program decided upon will be laid before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress which convenes in Washington in May.

Representatives from this city present at the meeting were Walt Jung, P. O. Myhrom, W. H. Quist and R. M. Aalbu.

State Conservation Districts Formed

treatment of wild life to more closely approach a satisfactory administration of our game and fish resources.

"Never before in the history of conservation has there been evidenced a greater public interest in matters pertaining to the game and fish division than at the present time. Much of this interest has been due to the rapid growth and spread of conservation organizations, national, state-wide, regional and local.

"The effectiveness of these organizations is not measured by their numbers and membership rolls nor whether they are local, state or national in scope, but by the functions they perform as a media through which cooperative and conservative ideas may receive expresison. A closer coordination of activities of those confronted with similar conditions and problems would make their efforts and conclusions bearing on such problems much more valuable. This is true particularly concerning information sought by the division of game and fish.

"The value to the division of suggestions and recommendations based on intelligently conceived and coordinated consideration of the problems in each of the proposed conservation districts, in the light of all the facts, is at once apparent and can be made the means of a much needed and ardently desired closer cooperative relationship between the sportsmen on the one hand and administrative agencies on the other.

"It is therefore suggested that all sportsmen's groups and other interested organizations, no matter how large or small and regardless of affiliations with other larger groups, organize within each of these districts so as to enable them to participate actively in the solution of their respective sectional problems affecting game and fish. The plan to be followed in creating a clearing house for all conservation organizations within a district will be left to the groups in each district.

"It is believed important, howl ever, that all of the groups should create a small representative executive committee or board which would be authorized to deduce and transmit to the department of conservation the composite needs and wishes of the district so far as this can be done. If interested organizations will seize this opportunity to be directly represented under the conservation district plan, it should, if nothing else, yield an expression of collective sentiment to the Division of Game and Fish which has hitherto been non-existent."

Pennington Students Play Prominent Parts At Nortnwect School

Three Pennington county students played a prominent part in the commencement week exercises held at the Northwest School of Agriculture last week. Morris Engelstad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Engelstad, Thief River Falls, graduated from the three-year course with honors in scholarship and debate. He was a member of the debate teams during the past two years and was an important factor in winning the inter-school debate championship this year. He was also advertising manager of the school annual, member of the honor "A" club, 4-H club and Pepster organization. As a result of his two years' work in debate, Morris was presented with a gold charm set with a ruby. Morris was a second generation student, his father and mother having graduated from the Northwest School in 1916.

Laura Hanson, Thief River Falls was the highest ranking girl as a freshman and junior in scholarship and general progress She played a leading role in the senior classplay "Smilin' Through," and was a member of the Pepster organization, girls' glee club, mixed chorus, class basketball team and Aggie Board.

Irene Holst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Holst, established an enviable records in the study of piano and was selected to appear on several programs during commencement week. She was also a member of the mixed quartet, senior class play, girls' glee club, mixed chorus, class basketball team and the 4-H club.

James Weckwerth, Hazel junior, won second place in the extemporaneous speaking contest in competition with representatives from each of the four classes. James also represented his class and delivered the principal address at the Junior-Senior banquet held during the closing month of the term.

The commencement address was delivered by Honorable Duncan Marshall, minister of Agriculture, Ontario, Canada. Mr. Marshall is one of the foremost agriculturists of the continent and has long been known as the father of the School of Agriculture movement in Canada. Ninety-one students were presented diplomas by Superintendent A. A. Dowell, thus bringing the total number of graduates to over one thousand.

STEADY DEAL FOR SWINE

Better 180-300lb. $8.75-8.90—Cattle Trade Slow to Develop—Best Here This Week $12.00—Lambs Higher.

South St. Paul, Minn., April 2, 1935: (U.S.D.A.)—Hog trade held mostly steady on recent days, bulk 180-300 lb. cashing at $8.75-8.90, most lightweights $8.00-8.75, good sows largely $8.10, pigs mainly $7.75 down.

Cattle trade has been very slow to develop this week, but trade undertone is bullish. Better grade steers sold at $10.75-12.00, much of the crop consisting of plainer grades going at $7.00-10.25. Medium to good heifers earned $7.50-9.50, beef cows $4.50-7.25, cutters and low cutters $3.25-4.25, weighty sausage bulls $4.85-5.40, good to choice vealers $6.00-7.50, cull and common $3.00-4.50.

Common and medium stock steers cashed at $5.00-6.50, with some better grades at $7.00-8.00. Good strongweight young dairy cows sold at $57.-67.50 per head.

Slaughter lambs opened higher today, a few good natives selling at $7.50-7.75, with best fed westerns at $8.15. Common to medium grades brought $5.50-6.75, plain, to fairly good clipped lambs $5.00-6.50. Good to choice slaughter ewes sold at $4.00-5.00.

River Control Group Meets at Crookston

there is no federal survey being made on the Little and Big Fork rivers at the present time and stated that there is apparently little hope of any early action on any proposed water diversion project from that direction. He stressed the need of some action being taken, however, to raise the water level in the ground and in the lakes if this entire territory is not going to suffer untold damage in the next few years from water shortage.

Dr. Simpson stated that the area composed of North and South Dakota and Minnesota is known as the Area of Distress in the Bureau of Weather Statistics and the geoloicgal survey at Washington because of the alarming rate at which the rainfall has decreased thruout this territory over the period of half a century. According to Dr. Simpson's charts, this area has lost more in rainfall during the past thirty years than any other area in the United States. From 1908 to the present this continued decline in rainfall has been alarmingly marked, he stated. A chart covering records kept over the past one hundred years shows that the Northwest has had two wet peaks. The chart starts out with a period of drouth, another came after about fifty years following a wet peak, and was again followed by a wet peak from which it has declined to the present low moisture levels. Moorhead district reports that the rainfall deficiency for that area has now reacehd 46½ inches. Results of surveys of ground water levels made thru well drillers shows that during the past eighteen years the ground water levels have receded as follows: North Dakota, 16 feet; Eastern South Dakota, 17 feet and Minnesota 13 feet. It will take many years of more than normal rainfall to restore the ground water level, he said.

Discussing plans under way in North Dakota, looking towards a systematic restoration plan, he said that a survey project will be started to get a quarter section report on ground water levels from the entire state. This is estimated to cost about $100,000. Ditches will be damned and every possible method will be used to hold the surface water on the land, he stated, so that it may get a chance to soak into the ground. He declared that North Dakota is ready to cooperate with this state in every way possible to restore the water and lake levels thruout the entire Red River Valley.

Discussion developed that there will be concerted action by every community in the entire Northern part of the state to concentrate local, state and federal attention on the acute water situation in this part of the Northwest. A resolution was drafted and passed requesting that the legislature pass the Conservation Department's Water Control Bill now before it. This Bill would empower the conservation to close ditches and construct dams where it may deem necessary to stem the water flow-off.

Another resolution was addressed to Governor Floyd B. Olson, the Executive council, the board of control and ERA administrator Zimmerman requesting them to aid in locating conservation and control projects to meet the emergency which exists in the valley.

A committee on which P. O. Myhrom represents this city will proceed to, in collaboration with Mr. Frisble, outline some program of permanent policy and projects to submit to the next meeting of the group, to be held possibly on the fifteenth of this month or shortly thereafter. This program is to embody water conservation and control work covering the entire Minnesota side of the Red river from Crookston and north and will include Cross Lake, Maple lake, and Red Lake restoration. The program decided upon will be laid before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress which convenes in Washington in May.

Representatives from this city present at the meeting were Walt Jung, P. O. Myhrom, W. H. Quist and R. M. Aalbu.

State Conservation Districts Formed

treatment of wild life to more closely approach a satisfactory administration of our game and fish resources.

"Never before in the history of conservation has there been evidenced a greater public interest in matters pertaining to the game and fish division than at the present time. Much of this interest has been due to the rapid growth and spread of conservation organizations, national, state-wide, regional and local.

"The effectiveness of these organizations is not measured by their numbers and membership rolls nor whether they are local, state or national in scope, but by the functions they perform as a media through which cooperative and conservative ideas may receive expresison. A closer coordination of activities of those confronted with similar conditions and problems would make their efforts and conclusions bearing on such problems much more valuable. This is true particularly concerning information sought by the division of game and fish.

"The value to the division of suggestions and recommendations based on intelligently conceived and coordinated consideration of the problems in each of the proposed conservation districts, in the light of all the facts, is at once apparent and can be made the means of a much needed and ardently desired closer cooperative relationship between the sportsmen on the one hand and administrative agencies on the other.

"It is therefore suggested that all sportsmen's groups and other interested organizations, no matter how large or small and regardless of affiliations with other larger groups, organize within each of these districts so as to enable them to participate actively in the solution of their respective sectional problems affecting game and fish. The plan to be followed in creating a clearing house for all conservation organizations within a district will be left to the groups in each district.

"It is believed important, however, that all of the groups should create a small representative executive committee or board which would be authorized to deduce and transmit to the department of conservation the composite needs and wishes of the district so far as this can be done. If interested organizations will seize this opportunity to be directly represented under the conservation district plan, it should, if nothing else, yield an expression of collective sentiment to the Division of Game and Fish which has hitherto been non-existent."

Pennington Students Play Prominent Parts At Nortnwect School

Three Pennington county students played a prominent part in the commencement week exercises held at the Northwest School of Agriculture last week. Morris Engelstad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Engelstad, Thief River Falls, graduated from the three-year course with honors in scholarship and debate. He was a member of the debate teams during the past two years and was an important factor in winning the inter-school debate championship this year. He was also advertising manager of the school annual, member of the honor "A" club, 4-H club and Pepster organization. As a result of his two years' work in debate, Morris was presented with a gold charm set with a ruby. Morris was a second generation student, his father and mother having graduated from the Northwest School in 1916.

Laura Hanson, Thief River Falls was the highest ranking girl as a freshman and junior in scholarship and general progress She played a leading role in the senior classplay "Smilin' Through," and was a member of the Pepster organization, girls' glee club, mixed chorus, class basketball team and Aggie Board.

Irene Holst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Holst, established an enviable records in the study of piano and was selected to appear on several programs during commencement week. She was also a member of the mixed quartet, senior class play, girls' glee club, mixed chorus, class basketball team and the 4-H club.

James Weckwerth, Hazel junior, won second place in the extemporaneous speaking contest in competition with representatives from each of the four classes. James also represented his class and delivered the principal address at the Junior-Senior banquet held during the closing month of the term.

The commencement address was delivered by Honorable Duncan Marshall, minister of Agriculture, Ontario, Canada. Mr. Marshall is one of the foremost agriculturists of the continent and has long been known as the father of the School of Agriculture movement in Canada. Ninety-one students were presented diplomas by Superintendent A. A. Dowell, thus bringing the total number of graduates to over one thousand.

MUD LAKE LAND CONDEMNATION IN DIST. COURT

Acquisition of 52,700 Acres Sought for Federal Govt. Conservation Project

$3 PER ACRE FOR LANDS

Land Must Be Acquired for a Price the Government Will Pay

A petition has been filed in district court at Warren for the acquisition by condemnation of 52,700 acres of land in the Mud Lake area to be purchased and managed by the United States Bureau of Biological Survey as a Federal migratory wild fowl refuge. The Minnesota Conservation Commission and the Department of Conservation are cooperating with the federal government in this action.

Authority for the proceedings was granted by a special law passed by the present state legislature so as to enable such lands to be condemned for the United States government.

E. V. Willard, Commissioner of Conservation, said that "it was found necessary to condemn rather than to try to acquire title through negotiations with the owners because of the manner in which titles to the lands are involved by reason of tax delinquencies and other forms of indebtedness."

"An appraisal was made to determine the value of these lands and improvements at the time titles to the lands were examined," Mr. Willard said. "This appraisal shows the lands averaging $3.00 per acre."

"As a condition to the federal government's purchase of the area the State of Minnesota was required to tender the federal government the lands at a definite price as sub-marginal lands. The price at which these lands were

Sons and Daughters of Sweden Postpone Meet

The Meeting of the American Sons and Daugghters of Sweden which was set for Friday, April 12th, has been postponed indefinitely, Mr. Lorentson stated yesterday. Because of too many conflicting things it was thought by the committees that the turnout would not be representative of the group, F. Lorentson said.

THI RI FA MU CONCERT WELL RECEIVED MON.

Rendition of Norse Classics Greeted Enthusiastically By Large Audience

A packed house greeted the concert presented by the Thi Ri Fa Mu Club at the Sons of Norway hall on Monday evening. The presentation, which featured Scandinavian music was further enhanced by the fact that the performers in a majority of the numbers wore Scandinavian cosuumes.

The program opened with a song by a boys' chorus singing "Come to Me In My Dreams," excellently rendered, and displaying fine training in vocal harmony for performers so youthful. Piano solos were rendered by Eileen Rolland, Vivian Ward, Helen Rice, Jean Gustafson, Angeline Havel, and Robert Douville.

Twelve girls in Norse costume presented a "Mountain Walk" folk dance with Eileen Rolland accompanying at the piano. Mrs. Chester Myhrom rendered a soprano solo, Violet Rhodegard accompanying at the piano. A medley of folk dances was presented by four youthful couples, Helen Granum accompanying at the piano, and a whirlwind tap dance was presented by Yvonne Peterson, of Oslo Minnesota, impersonating a mountain maiden.

Selections were rendered by the Land O' Lakes quartet and the Women's Chorus. Justus Larson and Gordon Overland played a violin duet, "The Mountain Maid's Sunday," by Bull, arranged for two violins by Mrs. Thelma Holm Erickson. Mrs. Erickson accompanied at the piano.

The entire program was exceptionally well presented and well rendered by those taking part and the audience was generous in its applause and enthusiastic comment. A display featuring Norse heirlooms and other articles, was viewed with interest by the audience following the close of the program.

DAY TO SPEAK AT F-L MEETING FRI., APRIL 19

Ch'm'n. Anderson Announces Committee Appointments For Year of 1935

W. E. Day of Bagley, former representative in the legislature from this district, will be a guest of the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor Club at their next regular meeting in the court house Friday evening, April 19th, acording to A. G. Anderson, chairman of the local club. Mr. Day stated that he would try to have Mr. Lewis, his attorney in the recent election contest case, and Mr. Prestemon, one of the referees in the case, come with him to this meeting at which time the story of how he was "framed" and his seat in the legislature stolen from him, will be told. Mr. Day had been invited to attend the last meeting but was unable to do so because of a previous engagemena but he assured the local club members that he would be at the next meeting. Members are urged to attend this meeting so that they may gain first hand information on how a legislative seat may be stolen from the elected person, R. M. Aalbu, chairman of the program committee, stated.

A. G. Anderson, who will take office at the meeting as chairman for the coming year, announced today, his selection for members of the standing committee as follows: Resolutions Committee, C. E. Hellquist, chairman, Carl Anderson and P. A. Harris; Membership and Credentials Committee, H. Halland, chairman, Otto Rehm and A. M. Johnson; Program and Entertainment Committee, R. M. Aalbu, J. Burrell, O. F. Halldin and L. Harris. These committees will hold office for the ensuing year and their duties will start beginning with the meeting of April 19th, Chairman Anderson announced.

R. Brown Speaks on Federal Housing Plan at C & C Noon Lunch

Robert D. Brown, special representative of the Federal Housing Administration, addressed the Civic and Commerce Association at their noon luncheon today on the plans of the Administration and explained the function of it. He explained to the group how applications may be made and how home owners and property owners are benefitted by the loans granted through these plans.

Mr. Brown stated that for the past several years, homes all over the United States have been steadily going down hill and that many property owners have been unable to pay for normal upkeep and repairs on their homes. He stated that the National Housing Act was designed to help those people to improve their property and increase its value through a simple and reasonable system of financing.

Action of the Civic and Commerce Association had not been taken, but the next issue of the paper wil lcarry an acocunt of the Association's attitude toward this matter.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Vad of Highlanding spent Friday here visiting friends.

ANNUAL AUTO SHOW SUCCESS SAYS PAULSON

Large Volume of Business Is Reported by Thief River Falls Business Men

L. E. PETERSON WINS CAR

Local Man Wins New Chevrolet in Drawing Held Saturday Night

O. C. Paulson, chairman of the Auto Show committee, stated that the most successful Auto show ever to be held in this city was the status of the show held in the city last week. A conservative estimate of the number of people attending the show during the four days was placed at 12,000, and on the last night of the show, Mr. Paulson stated, approximately 5,000 people from outside the city were in for the celebration.

Business places reported nearly double the volume of Saturday business of any Saturday this year and some of the cafes reported sell-outs before midnight on Saturday, Mr. Paulson said. From a financial standpoint the city was very much benefitted by the eighth Annual Auto Show and Spring Exposition, according to reports of the various places. Automobile dealers who exhibited at the show expressed the opinion that they were very well satisfied with the success of the show, and the results it produced.

L. E. Peterson, of Thief River Falls, was declared the winner of the new Chevrolet car which was given away Saturday night, by the Auto Show committee. Judges in the drawing were Alner Lysaker, of Twin Valley; Henry Gibson of Ulen; T. M. Thoreson of Crookston; Freeman Olson of Argyle; and L. A. Hermanson of Ada. The winner of the car radio which was given away by the local Ford dealers, Lund and Tunberg, was Harold Asp, of Thief River Falls.

Mr. Paulson announced that the audience and spectators were very well pleased with the performance of the vaudeville stars, which was the best this city has had in recent years, he said. Plans are already under way for the show next year, and are being discussed as to how it can be made even better than the last, Chairman Paulson said. The Auto Show is sponsored every year by the Elmer J. Ecklund Post of the American Legion, an annual city Spring Opening.

Geo. Lee Named H.S. Coach by Board Mon.

Contracts for all present teachers in the local schools were approved by the school board at the regular April meeting held last Monday night, with the exception of the contracts of Mr. Dooley and Miss Pearson, who are not coming back next year. The contracts of Mr. Chalmers and Mr. Orwoll were not taken action on because these two men were not certain that they would be back next year.

George E. Lee was appointed by the school board as head coach and athletic director for the local high school for the coming year. Mr. Lee is at the present time the coach at the Walsh County Agricultural College in Park River, N. Dak., where he has been for the past four years. During his four years as coach at this college Mr. Lee has turned out three district championship basketball teams and one regional championship team and in the state tournament this year his team won the consolation game in the class "B" tournament.

Mr. Lee is a graduate of International Falls high school and of Concordia College at Moorhead, Minnesota. While attending Concordia College he played as a regular on the basketball, football, and basketball teams for four consecutive years. He has played on a basketball team that won the Minnesota Conference title and on a football team that also won the title. Mr. Lee won honors by being named as an end on the All-Conference football team and as a guard on the All-Conference basketball team.

The School Board discussed a plan to add an agricultural department to the curriculum of the high school and Mr. Bye was asked to make a report on the matter at the regular May meeting of the board for their consideration. A resolution was passed favoring S. F. 1135 which proposes to revise State Aid measures; this bill was introduced in the house and senate by members of the committee on education, and was prepared by the State Dept. of Education. Another resolution was adopted favoring the continuation of appropriations by the legislature for Teachers' Training Departments in various high schools throughout the state.

Man Drowns When Car Tips in Water Filled Ditch

Mr. Olaf Sletten, of Grygla, Minnesota, while driving with his sister last Sunday afternoon on a side road three miles west and one mile north of Alvarado, swerved off the road with his car and turned over in the ditch. Before help could arrive Mr. Sletten was drowned in the ditch, which was nearly full of water. His sister escaped with only minor injuries. The body was taken to Warren where the coroner and doctors attempted to revive him but with no success.

MELVE THROWS STRAND OF ADA TWO STRAIGHT

"Bill" LaFave and "Masked Marvel" Throw Referee Three Straight

Red Melve of Viking threw Erling Strand of Ada two straight falls in the wind-up match at the athletic show in the Elks hall on Tuesday evening. The first fall with a cross body lock came after 18 minutes of hard wrestling and the second after only one minute when Strand attempted to break a full Nelson with a somersault and landed in a bodylock with his shoulders neatly pinned. Melvin weighed 178 and Strand 180 pounds. Both boys appeared to have lots of wind and are fairly well experienced in the game.

Mark Olson of Thief River Falls pinned Bob Christie of Angus with what was called a headlock but looked much like a chokehold after 27 minutes of the fastest and hardest battling of the evening. Olson's tremendous endurance told as the time wore on, altho Christie appeared to be the strongest of the two at the outset. Olson weighed 143 pounds and Christie 142 pounds.

Gordon Saunders, 184, of Frazee, substituting for A. Peterson of this city, threw Jack Johnson of Thief River Falls, 160, in seven minutes with a cross bodylock and a half Nelson. Several good preliminaries were staged which show some promising material for future seasons among the younger boys.

The riot of the evening was a match between Bill LaFave, a masked marvel, and Harry Johnson, referee. It looked for a while as tho Johnson would be pinned, but past experience in the game saved him and he escaped with a badly chewed ankle and half a shirt after being heaved out of the ring from three different angles. At one point Bill went beserk and threw the masked marvel against the ropes causing him to bounce back across the ring and out into the audience while Bill stood the referee on his head and clamped a set of firm white teeth in his instep. The marvel climbed back into the ring and threw them both out after which he stood on his ear while he pinned Bill with an armlock, body scissor and a full Nelson.

A comparatively small crowd attended the show.

Sangerfest Benefit Supper At C & CRooms Fri. P. M.

A benefit supper is being given by the Brage Chorus in the Civic and Commerce rooms of the Auditorium Friday afternoon starting at five o'clock. Receipts from this supper are to be used to raise funds for the Sangerfest which will be held here in June. The Sangerfest (Song Festival) will bring people from all over the United States and it is estimated that approximately 1500 persons will be in the city for this event, Dr. Vistaunet stated.

Frank A. Rinkel Named as Mayor at Meeting of City Council on Tuesday

STATEMENT TO THE PUBLIC

Thief River Falls as a growing community is confronted with many difficult problems. The continued progress of our city will depend largely on the manner in which we, the citizens of this community, approach the solution of these problems. As mayor of Thief River Falls it will be my aim to encourage a spirit of harmony and cooperation among our citizens and to lend my support to those projects and activities which will best serve our community.

In accepting the appointment to fill the vacancy in the office of mayor I assume the responsibility of the office with a full realization, not only of the difficulties to be faced but also of my own shortcomings. All I can promise is that I will do my best to give Thief River Falls the kind of service in this office which our good city deserves.

FRANK A. RINKEL
Mayor.

Appointed Mayor of The City

F. A. RINKEL

Co-Partner of Northern Chev. Company Appointed by 5 to 1 Vote

COUNCIL MEETINGS TO BE HELD ONCE A MONTH

Final Reading of Amendment Changing Frequency of Meetings, Tues.

Frank A. Rinkel was appointed mayor of this city by the city council at the regular meeting last Tuesday evening to fill the unexpired term of the former mayor, E. L. Tungseth. Mayor Rinkel came to this city in 1928 at which time he took over the Chevrolet agency in this territory and later became affiliated with Chris Rinkel and Wm. Sandeen in operating the Northern Chev. Company in this city and also operating garages in Crookston, Middle River, Greenbush and Gonvick. Mayor Rinkel has been an active leader in civic affairs since he started in business here late in 1928.

The mayor's office has been vacant since the latter part of January this year when the former mayor, E. L. Tungseth, handed in his resignation to the council because of his election to the state senate from this district. At the time Sen. Tungseth resigned the city council tried to get together on a choice to fill the post, but were unable to do so because two-thirds of the members could not be gotten to back any one man. At that time Mayor Rinkel received three of the five votes cast while at the last meeting five of the six votes cast were for the new mayor.

Vital Statistics for 1934 Shows Increase In Number of Births in Pennington County

Vital statistcis for Pennington County during the year 1934 were received last Friday by Adolph Ecklund, clerk of court, from A. Chesley, Secretary of the Minnesota State Board of Health and State Registrar of Vital Statistics.

The figures for 1934 show an increase of 63 births in this county over the number which occurred in 1933, or a total of 290 births in 1934 compared with 227 births in 1933. This increase of the population is partly offset by a small increase in the number of deaths; the figures being for 1933, 132, and for 1934, 140. This leaves an actual increase of 55 in the population of Pennington county on the basis of vital statistics.

The Township of Highlanding showed a high increase, having 12 births and no deaths during 1934, while Rocksbury showed the largest decrease, recording four births and twelve deaths for a net loss of eight. The city of Thief River Falls reported 182 births in 1934 as compared with 136 in 1933; deaths occurring in the city were 92 in 1934 as compared with 64 in 1933.

A registrar in each township sends in a monthly report to the State Bureau for which he receives a fee of twenty-five cents for every report made, Mr. Ecklund stated. Births and deaths are reported immediately to the state and it is important that the matter of reporting births and deaths be given immediate attention, it was stated.

St. Lukes Tax To Be Heard by Commission

The first day of the county board's meeting in April was taken up mostly by road delegations asking for work on town roads throughout the county.

The board decided against doing any work of this kind until the state appropriations for this work come through. Ten additional miles of county aid roads were allowed by the board; the new roads are four miles in Bray township and six miles in Sanders township.

An application from the Goodridge Conservationist Club asking the county to place a bounty on crows was laid over to the next meeting pending action by the legislature. A resolution expressing objection to House File 54, in the lower state house, on the distribution of tax monies to the various counties was passed by the board. Another resolution, endorsing House File 120, the Bennett Social Insurance Bill, was adopted Wednesday morning.

The Minnesota State Tax Commission was asked to hold an open hearing in the city of Thief River Falls at an early date to determine the status of the St. Luke's hospital asociation in regards to real estate taxes, by t he county board. H. O. Berve, county attorney, was instructed to appear at this hearing to represent the county. This hearing is to be open to anyone wishing to present facts for either side and it is the plan of the board to clear up this matter once and for all, Mr. Fowler, county auditor, stated. At a previous meeting the district court ruled that the St. Luke's hospital was exempt from personal property taxes, but it is the desire of the county board to keep this real estate on the tax roll of the county, Mr. Fowler said.

The board allowed fifteen old-age pensions, Wednesday afternoon; the board will meet all day today in hopes that they will be able to complete the business before it, the auditor stated.

IUAW Discuss Organized Labor at Warren Sunday

The Independent Union of All Workers, Highway Employees' Union, held their regular monthly meeting at the city hall in Warren Sunday, H. Kjos, secretary of the local announced; all future meetings will be held in this city until further notice is given, according to the secretary.

Paul A. Harris, of this city, addressed the meeting, which was well attended, on the history of "Organized Labor" and its value to the working people. Those from this city who attended were Messrs. E. Odelin, H. Kjos, A. Severson, G. Hanson, J. Mulhall, S. Brandvold and Pat Harris.

PUBLIC WORKS PROJECTS GET WPA BACKING

Quist Gets Approval for the Water Control Project of Conservation Dept.

A large crowd gathered for the regular meeting of the Workmen's Protective Association last Monday evening, and according to Wm. Douville larger and larger crowds are attending with each passing week. The meetings hereafter, until the end of the legislative session and the end of the term of congress will be open to everyone and may be used for open discussion of timely topics, President Douville announced early this week. The association meets regularly every Monday night at 8 o'clock in the court rooms of the Peninngton county court house.

A letter from Congressman Buckler (F-L) of this district assured the group that he is making every effort to get the Lundeen Bill passed and that the workers may be sure that he will continue to work for this bill. Mr. Walter Quist, local game warden, spoke extensively on the Mud Lake conservation project as an employment measure. He stated in his talk that profiteers had so depleted the natural resources of the state, which rightfully belong to all the people, that drastic conservation projects were made a necessity. This project, Mr. Quist

Mrs. Anton Dahl Dies Fri., April 5

Funeral services were held Tuesday, April 9, from the Larson Funeral Home for Mrs. Anton Dahl, who died Friday, April 5. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad conducted the services and interment was made in Gdreenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Thea Dahl was born March 15, 1874 in Norway. She was married to Anton Dahl in 1900 at Oslo, Norway. They came to America in 1902 and settled in St. Paul. In 1907 they moved to this city where Mr. Dahl and his sons have been engaged in the bakery business, operating the Dahl Bakery, formerly known as the City Bakery.

Surviving her are her husband, Anton Dahl, three sons, Ever, Helge and Paul, and one daughter Thrina all at home. Four sons and two daughters have preceded her in death.

Kittenball, Meeting To Be Held Monday Night

An announcement was made today by Mr. Messenger, director of recreational projects in this district, that there will be a meeting of representatives of the Kittenball teams next Monday night in the basement of the municipal auditorium. Local business places that have already signified their intentions of entering the league are: the Ford V-8's, T. R. Grocery, Land O' Lakes and Bill's Eat Shop. Others that are expected to have teams in the league this year are Bridgeman Creameries, Hartz, Hamilton's and probably Barzens, Mr. Messenger stated. Any others wishing to enter a team may do so and are invited to attend this meeting, the director said.

Auto Show Report at Am. Legion Meeting FridayNite

S. P. Orwell announced that at the meeting of the American Legion next Friday evening a report on the Auto Show will be given by O. C. Paulson, general chairman in charge of arrangements. Another report on the Annual State Spring Conference which was held in St. Paul two weeks ago will be given by Mr. Orwoll who was a delegate from the Elmer J. Ecklund Post of the American Legion.

Special recognition will be given Mr. Sophius E. Olson in honor of his being top man in the membership drive which was held some time ago, Mr. Orwoll announced.

Creamery Case Heard by Judge Montague, Friday

District Court was held in the Pennington County court house last Friday before Judge James Montague of Crookston at which time the creamery case was heard by the Judge. Evidence was submitted by both sides while Hans Anton, president of the T. R. Co-op. Creamery, and J. M. Theiga, secretary, were cross examined as witnesses. After evidence was taken by the court, attorneys were instructed to file briefs and the judge indicated that a decision would be ready in about a month's time.

Applications for CCC Can Be Made at Relief Office

Mrs. Trudie King, county relief worker, announced today that the office will accept applications from men and boys wishing to enroll in the Citizens' Conservation Corps up to April 15th, inclusive. All single, unemployed men between the ages of 18 and 25 are eligible to join in this project and in addition to those falling in this group those men who have been members of the CCC for five consecutive months and not more than thirteen months are also eligible for service, Mrs. King stated. She stressed the necessity of enrolling before the 15th of April.

Minnesota Faces Loss Of 18 Million Dollars Federal Roads Grant

State Must Increase Highway Funds to Get Allotment, Elsberg Warns

Although Minnesota probably will be allotted $21,800,000 of federal public works highway funds for 1935 and 1936 without the necessity of matching the money, the state will be unable to obtain the grant unless highway department revenues are increased sufficiently to meet incidental expenses, N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, informed the legislature this week.

His statement was based on the presumption that present federal regulations governing expenditure of emergency grant funds will remain in effect for the coming two years. Mr. Elsberg estimated that approximately $4,450,000 over and above revenues anticipated under the House-Senate conference report on license fees will be necessary if the state is to spend the full federal grant. This does not include any money for matching of regular federal aid set up in the Hayden-Cartwright act.

"Existing federal regulations," said Mr. Elsberg, "require the state to use its own funds for preliminary engineering, planning and other incidental work on an emergency grant program, and also to pay in full all property damages, condemnation awards and property purchases required to carry out the program.

These necessary state expenses amount to from 20 to 30 per cent of the federal funds used. Using 25 per cent as an average, it will cost the state about $5,450,000 to spend the full federal grant of $21,810,000.

With the approximate increase in department revenues of $300,000 a year provided by the conference report on motor vehicle license fees, we will have about $500,000 a year in state funds available for use with the federal grant. All the rest of state funds will be required for bond charges, maintenance and other expenses.

"This would make $1,000,000 of state funds available for the two year period. Deducting this from the $5,450,000 needed leaves a shortage of $4,450,000 for the biennium. The available $1,000,000 alone will enable us to use about $4,000,000 of the federal grant. Thus the state stands to lose nearly $18,000,000 of the grant unless additional highway income is provided."

Game Bird Egg Rescue Work in 25 Counties

Plans for the possible collection of 500,000 upland game bird eggs this spring with the work to be concentrated in 25 counties mostly in the southwestern part of Minnesota, were announced by the Division of Game and Fish of the Minnesota State Department of Conservation. A small start in game bird rescue work last year proved so successful that an enlarged program will be undertaken this spring with a view of saving thousands and thousands of future game birds from dstruction during the alfalfa cutting seasons. The plan has the unanimous approval of members of the Minnesota Conservation Commission.

"Production of more game birds by the utilization of present conditions is the object of this conservation measure," according to Erling Swenson, division director.

Ten thousand cartons of 50-egg capacity each are to be distributed in the 25 counties where upland game birds are most abundant. From collection points which in many instances will be . local creameries, the game birds will be shipped to the state-owned game farm near Madelia where they will be incubated and the young chicks reared. Capacity of the game farm has been materially enlarged for this purpose.

"We realize that the success of this program is dependent upon the cooperation of the farmers in the counties involved," Mr. Swenson stated. "We have every confidence that with 45,000 farm boys and farm girls actively engaged in a study of wild life conservation through state 4-H club activities that this cooperation will be accorded the plans. Interested conservationists and sportsmen's organizations are urged to get behind this program which is designed to aid Minnesota's wild life resources. State game wardens have been instructed to contact farmers in their districts in the counties involved who contemthe cutting of alfalfa. Cartons will be provided to all farmers who desire to cooperate."

Three Govt. Agencies Join Wild Life Research

Arrangements have been made by the Minnesota Conservation Commission for the setting up of machinery which will make it possible for the United States biological survey, University of Minnesota and the Minnesota State Department of Conservation to join together in conducting wild life research in the state.

A sum of $6,500.00 will be furnished annually by the Conservation Department to pay salaries, travel and other expenses of the technical assistants and laborers to be employed under the direction of the scientific staff of the University of Minnesota. Collection and preparation of specimen and materials for scientific study is also provided for from this fund.

Separate agreements will be entered into for fish research work due to the fact that the biological survey has jurisdiction only over game animals and birds. It is expected that additional monies will be supplied to be used exclusively for fish research purposes.

An intensive study of the diseases of wild animals and birds will be undertaken with particular attention placed upon fluctuations and causes for such natural phenomena.

Other elements entering into the proposed wild life research program will be: completion of a wild life survey covering 43 species of wild animals in Minnesota withe reference to each specie in each township of the state; a wild life census will be taken in representative areas in each of the nine conservation districts of the state, including population trends, study of environments, survey of food availability; present game refuges will be surveyed to determine their most intelligent use and how existing conditions may be utilized for their betterment.

"This cooperative agreement will result materially in a rapid advance in wild life management and wild life restoration in Minnesota," E. V. Willard, commissioner of Conservation, said.

Resettlement of Northern Minnesota Is Favored

At least 90 per cent of the settlers in the Beltrami Island forest area of Roseau and Lake of the Woods counties have optioned their sub-marginal lands to the government and agreed to move to more favorable sections, according to J. W. Taylor, rural rehabilitation supervisor for the Minnesota SERA.

This re-settlement reflects the modern trends towards more rational development of agriculture. It means the saving of large sums of money, now spent on relief and for the maintenance of schools and roads in thinly populated districts. A large number of the families affected are on relief, earning only a meagre income from their farmsteads, located far away from markets. Opportunities for part-time jobs in industry are no longer available as in the past, when lumbering flourished in this region, Taylor explained.

The inhabitants in the forest reserve were at first somewhat bewildered when aproached on this program, sponsored jointly by the land policy section of the AAA and the rural rehabilitation division of the Minnesota SERA. When they once understood that the government would assist them with loans to purchase new farms and erect new buildings, they realized that the plan would yield genuine benefits to them.

Classification of settlers is made into groups, depending upon their equity in the old farms, previous experience, machinery and livestock owned, credit rating and physical condition. Families well equipped in these respects may properly be relocated on 120 or 160 acres. Those with small equity and deficient in agricultur-background, can handle only 40 to 80 acres, the project supervisor said.

Settlers who in the past have been engaged in trapping and hunting, can get along on a 20 or 40 acre tract, with the thought of subsistence uppermost. Those handicapped because of advanced age and impaired health will be re-located on a five or ten acre tract, where they can keep a cow or two, a few chickens and a garden.

Loans range from $2,400 on 160 acres to $2,200 on 120 acres, $1,700 on 80 acres and $1,200 on 40 acres. Lands for the new farms have been selected in districts with potentially high soil productivity, and comparatively easy to clear. Tracts will be sold by the government, under contract for deed, with title remaining with the Rural Rehabilitation corporation of Minnesota, until fully paid for by the settlers.

Federal Inspectors Approve State Roads

Engineers of the United States Bureau of Public Roads have just submitted to the state highway department specific reports on the condition of 73 different parts of the trunk system inspected during March 1935, says a department bulletin.

Conditions on the inspected roads are reported as satisfactory to the federal bureau in 67 out of 73 cases. In the other six cases the United States engineers state that construction work is needed to bring the projects fully up to standard. In three of these six the inspectors specifically reported maintenance operations as satisfactory. Thus the federal O. K. was placed specifically on the maintenance of 70 out of 73 projects inspected, and the other three need improvements in grade or type of surfacing.

Drive to Get Frazier-Lemke Bill on Floor

A drive is being made to secure names on the petition to discharge the House Committee on Agriculture from holding up the Frazier-Lemke Farm Refinancing Bill. About 140 signers have been secured and with a few more, it is possible that the committee might be "scared" into reporting the bill out to the House for consideration and debate. The administration leaders are opposed to the legislation and hope to "kill it" by keeping it in the committee. Congressman Buckler was one of the first signers on the petition and five other Minnesota members, Lundeen, Kvale, Ryan, Pittenger, and Knutson have also signed.

PLUMMER P. T. A. HOLDS ITS FINAL MEETING

The last meeting of the P. T. A. for this school year was held on Thursday, April 4th, at the school house.

Mr Ohnstad gave a very interesting talk on "New Freedom in the Classroom." Mr. Lauer, president of the P. T. A., expressed the thanks of the school to the members of the community who had contributed to the success of the organization during the school year.

A feature of the evening's entertainment was a short play, "Meeting of the Better City Campaign Committee" put on by a group of women of the community. The cast follows:

Mrs. Rangle—Mrs. George St. Louis.

Clara Clatter—Mrs. Ted Lemieux.

Cynthia Cackle—Mrs. A. M. Ripple.

Rose Rattletrap — Mrs. Jack Pahlen.

Tessie Tackhammer—Miss Aagot Hanson.

Dorothy Din—Mrs. James Jackson.

The Better City Campaign Committee demanded better roads with less taxes, better public buildings with less taxes; better schools with less taxes, and many other civic improvements with less taxes. The whole play was put on in a spirit which pleased the audience.

Mrs. Geo. St. Louis entertained with a short skit, and Althea Krueger played a number of delightful selections on the piano.

After the program, a fine lunch was served by Mesdames Gilbertson, Ed Greenwald, Ben Mahla, D. H. McCullough, Gordon Hofius, Ida Froiland, Ray Groom and Miss Jennie Waldal.

PLUMMER YOUNG LADY MEETS WITH ACCIDENT

While motoring to Red Lake Falls Jeanne Robillard of Plummer was thrown out of the car when the door near which she was standing flew open. She fell to the ground and broke her arm in two places and received minor bruises on the head. She was immediately taken to Red Lake Falls where her arm was set and bruises bandaged.

U. S. Imports of Butter Increase Seven Times

According to an Associated Press staff writer, Franklin Mullin of Chicago, the United States has imported 7,112,000 pounds of butter from foreign countries from January 1 this year to about Mar. 15, almost seven times the total butter, produced mostly in New Zealand but also in Argentina, Siberia, Latvia, Lithuania, Sweden, Denmark and Australia apparently is being shipped at a profit to the shippers although a tariff of 14 cents per pound must be paid. More butter is enroute, it is indicated.

Most authorities assert the market now hinges mainly on a question of consumption at the present price level, in connection with which competition with substitutes, particularly oleomargarine, is an important factor. Not to be lost sight of, however, is the fact that domestic cold storage stocks March 1 were the smallest, with the exception of 1927, on record, totalling only about 8,000,000 pounds.

House to Get Wagner-Lewis Bill This Week

The administration social security bill, the Lewis-Wagner "Economic Security Act" is scheduled to come up for attention in the House this week. There is some talk of cutting up the measure into four separate bills with perhaps only the one concerning old age pensions being taken up at this session of Congress. Whatever happens the legislation will travel a rough road in both the House and Senate before it is passed. The Townsend bill, which now is undergoing some modifications, may be offered as a substitute for the old age measure brought out by the Ways and Means Committee. However, the administration leaders are opposed to the Townsend plan and with executive support, no doubt, they will defeat the efforts of the progressive members of Congres swho desire a more liberal and adequate old age pension act than that which is provided for in the Lewis-Wagner bill.

The brute is much mose content with mere existence than man; the plant is wholly so; and man finds satisfaction in existence just in proportion as he is dull and obtuse. Arthur Schopenhauer.

We have on several occasions been sorely disappointed to see the small attendance at really creditable musical programs given in the city. We have harbored a secret resentment to think that even a mediocre basketball game could draw a far larger crowd than some of the outstanding musical organizations of the country in concert.

However, on Monday evening we had an agreeable surprise when we entered the Sons of Norway hall to hear the THi Ri Fa Mu Club's concert and found the hall crowded to capacity. And those who attended were rewarded by hearing a fine concert recital and seeing some clever dancing. That roguish mountain maid from Oslo, (Minn.), reminded one for all the world of a "Budeie" who just came home after spending the summer in the mountains tending the herd and was bubbling over with the joy of living.

Angeline Havel and Robert Douville displayed fine piano technique and the violin duet by Justus Larson and Gordon Overland was wonderfully rendered. Bull's "Seterjentens Söndag," like so many of the classics is a melody simple enough for any one to play at but only played by masters. We had the satisfaction of hearing it really played Monday evening.

If we should have the temerity to criticize so fine a program we would have to say that it was too short. We believe that another song by the Women's chorus and another violin number should have been added. But it is an axiom that quality goods come done up in small packages, so we will have to feel satisfied.

TAKING THE PROFIT OUT OF WAR IS NOT ENOUGH

Monday's papers carry a tale of strange spectacles in and around the national capitol. Outside a parade was passing, with bands playing and crowds shouting and singing in commemoration of the country's entrance in the World War eighteen years ago. And inside, the solons of the House of Representatives were debating a measure ostensibly drawn to prevent war by limiting or abolishing profits during periods in which the nation may be be involved in armed conflict.

The circumstances apparently played weird tricks with the lawmakers' sense of proportions and each of them reacted to the emotional pressure according to his particular station, philosophy and past environment. One of them wanted to pray for five minutes. Judging from the debate others thought it more appropriate to sing, but could not agree on whether it should be "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be A Soldier," or "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean." It would seem that the suggestion for prayer was quite in order in spite of the fact that the Speaker ruled it out. And we would respectfully suggest that if it was to be accompanied with song, the popular ballad, "Who's Looney Now" would have been quite appropriate. At any rate, if the House had set out to deliberately provide one more assinine demonstration to augment the growing conviction among a large part of the population that democracy is a failure, they could hardly have done better.

So far as we have been able to determine from the written accounts, the only profit that the Congressmen were concerned about is the profits which accrue during war. They seem to have lost complete sight of the fact that war profits are only incidental to the war and great and horribly unjustified as they are, they do not in themselves contribute the heaviest to the instigation of war.

Taking the country's last venture into armed conflict under consideration let us remind those who are prone to forget, that it was profits to be made upon our entry into the war that caused our entry, but an attempt to protect profits that had already been made on the European war—but which were yet to be collected from the Allies. That war was entered into to primarily protect the entire profit system which was faced with collapse when an effective German submarine blockade threatened to shut down American industries for want of a market. The war brought American armed forces into the conflict to protect American markets and transportation of American products to these markets. Incidentally, American industry profited immensely from the war which was fought to protect American Plutes in their right to make a profit while the country was at peace.

If we are to prevent and abolish war we must start with the root evil which causes war. That is the national hatreds and jealousies which are engendered by the lust for profits to be taken from world markets in the exploitation of backward nations.

Under a Cooperative Commonwealth a nation would produce primarily for the use of its citizens and sale of surpluses to other nations would be incidental to the operation of industries, and sold at a reasonable compensation. Then surplus wheat, for instance, would not be sold out of the country on the world market, for less than our citizens can buy it here. American petroleum would not be sold in Europe where it meets competition from Russian and British petroleum for about half the price charged in the United States. Without world markets to squabble over we would have removed the primary incentive to war. Possibly it is too much to expect Congressmen of the old school to understand this.

A PLAN TO MAKE THE AGED MORAL DEGENERATES

We have heard so much about the wonderful time that the old people are to have when they get that $200 a month Townsend pension that we stopped the other day to figure out what the average elderly person could do to qualify for the pension by spending the entire amount each month.

We find that he could buy a $40 suit every four months; spend $50 a month for board and room; buy two first quality shirts every month and two first quality suits of underwear as well as each month a $5 pair of shoes. He could spend $3.00 a month at the movies, that would pay for three shows a week or every change of program. He could drive a car 2000 miles a month and pay $50 a month on the car, which means a new $1,000 car every 20 months. He could smoke six cigars a day, drink 10 glasses of beer and eat three nice lunches. By that time he would have spent $175 out of the $200 and should have acquired the drunken sailor complex. It would therefore be easy to spend the remaining $25 by getting gloriously "crocked."

CAN'T STAND IT
(St. Paul Daily News)

Legislators will be up against the gun again today when they consider the problem presented by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

Mr. Elsberg says in effect that unless highway revenues are increased for the next two years it will be impossible for Minnesota to take advantage of the federal offer of $21,000,000 under the public works program just approved by congress.

Estimated revenues of the department will not permit the expenditure of some $5,000,000 required to provide right of way and other expenses which must be met by the state before the federal money becomes available.

So he suggests that the auto license fees and the gas taxes or both, be increased to provide the additional revenue.

No doubt these improvements would be worthwhile in themselves and also as a means of providing unemployment. But the question is whether this generation of car users should be loaded with these additional taxes to finance improvements which will last for years to come.

And of special interest is the money that will be diverted from the gasoline tax to finance comparatively unimportant roads which are of no benefit to the average motorist who is taxed for them.

If this money and some form of a bond issue could be arranged which would spread out the cost, there is no question but that the state should take advantage of the federal offer to secure highway improvements which will be of permanent value.

If, on the other hand, it means adding more taxes to the burden which is already facing every solvent citizen in Minnesota, this federal grant had better be passed up.

A PRESIDENT LIED
(Union Advocate)

It was on July 28, 1932, that General MacArthur, chief of the U. S. Army staff, ordered his federal troops to assault the bonus army encamped on the mud flats of the Potomac less than a mile from the national capitol. The federal troops, armed with bayonetted guns, gas masks, clubs and fire axes, moved toward the wretched hovels ex-soldiers had erected. Great army tanks and motorized equipment accompanied the soldiery.

What happened that day will always be regarded as one of the most shameful incidents of American history. Unarmed men, who had once offered their lives in defense of the flag, were driven at bayonet points out of their camp. Defenseless women, with wee children in their arms, were gassed and stampeded out of tin-roofed shacks and driven like cattle before a pack of howling wolves. The shacks were burned to the ground; several ex-soldiers were slaughtered in cold blood and scores of others were clubbed into insensibility.

That incident marked Herbert Hoover for a well-deserved retirement to political obscurity. It was the greatest blunder of an administration characterized by lesser blunders.

The day after the battle Mr. Hoover issued a statement to justify the routing of the soldier bonus army. He said these veterans were occupying, without permission, an abandoned building which had to be removed immediately in order to extend employment by commencing a construction project on that particular site. For this reason, and this reason only, a small army was used to drive half-starved men and women at the point of cold steel.

On March 19, 1935, the federal government undertook to make the first move toward the improvement project Mr. Hoover mentioned in his alibi for the brutal assault he ordered on July 28, 1932. Exactly nine men are now employed clearing the mud flats where the bonus army was encamped—and these men were put to work two years and seven months after Mr. Hooved said the ground had to be cleared in order to "extend employment."

No further comment is necessary.

MUNITIONS
(St. Paul Daily News)

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, returns from a trip to Europe—where, by the way, he visited the famous Sir Basil Zaharoff, international munitions king—to remark that it would be a grave mistake for America to adopt legislation taking the profits out of war.

"You can't operate munitions plants without profits," he says. "For in such business you have to allow private capital to invest money, and without profits you can't induce people to invest."

This would be quite convincing if we did not read it against the background of wartime conscription of fighting men.

If the country can take an ordinary, peace-loving citizen from his home and send him out to face mutilation or death for $1 a day, it ought to be able to exercise an equal power over the men who supply him with rifle and catridges—and, as the saying goes, to make everybody concerned like it, as well.

IT'S a CONFESSION
(Red Wing Republican)

Limitation of taxes is simply an admission that we don't know how to spend the money which we levy for our multitude of institutions in governmental activities. t is an effort to save ourselves from ourselves; virtually conceding that we have not the good business judgment to handle our public moneys with the same degree of judgment as private interests do.

THE OLDEST INTERNATIONAL
(Austin American)

In these days of Communist internationals, Socialist internationals, and even Fascist internationals, the word 'international' seems always to be given a political significance generally of radical hue. One international, however, which is older than the hills and wider-spread than economic or political unity is usually forgot and that is the international of war hysteria.

With fear spreading throughout France and the Little Entente of Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, and Rumania and ambition gripping the hearts of Germans, Italians, and Japanese, no one can say when this hysteria will catch hold and cause the wholesale murder known as war to run rampant throughout the civilized (?) world.

Those who fear the newer and more radical internationals should never forget the oldest and most potent international of all. It is far more dangerous.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The following paragraphs are quotations from the nation-wide broadcast over the N.B.C. network given by Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, the national W.C.T.U. president.

Utter Recklessness of Liquor Traffic

"In those years of yesterday, the United States tried every method of control and regulation of the liquor business that the ingenuity of the human mind could devise. Each method was opposed by the liquor traffickers and consistently violated by them. It was the utter ruthlessness of the liquor business in disregard of state Prohibition laws which stirred the citizens of this nation to elect a Congress pledged to provide Federal Constitutional Prohibition.

When history makes its final appraisal of the record of our land during the fourteen years in which the Eighteenth Amendment was a legally vital part of our Constitution, it will show great constructive and concrete benefits to society, the home, industry and the public welfare alike which have been largely concealed and overlooked in the the smoke and excitement of battle for repeal. But the record of this first year of the re-established liquor traffic has already revealed such sifinificant contrasts and such serious consequences that they demand the frank consideration of all citizens."

JACK LONDON ON "THE GOOD SOLDIER"

"Young men: the lowest aim in your life is to become a soldier.

"The good soldier never tries to distinguish right from wrong. He never thinks; never reasons; he only OBEYS.

"If he is ordered to fire on his fellow-citizens, on his neighbors, on his friends, on his relatives, he obeys without hesitation.

"If he is ordered to fire down a crowded street when the poor are clamoring for bread he obeys, and sees the gray hairs of age stained with red, and the life tide gushing from the breasts of women, feeling neither remorse nor sympathy.

"If he is ordered off on a firing squad to execute a hero or benefactor, he fires without hesitation, though he knows that the bullet will pierce te noblest heart that ever beat in a human breast.

A good soldier is a blind, heartless, soulless, murderous machine. He is not a man, he is not a brute, for brutes only kill in self-defense. All that is human in him all that is divine in him, all that constitutes the man has been sworn away when he took the enlistment oath. His mind, his conscience, aye, his very soul, are in keeping of his office.

"No man can fal lolwer than a soldier, it is a depth beneath which he ca nnot go. Keep the boys out of the army. It is HELL. We do not need killing institutions, but we need life-giving institutions."

The Farmers' Union at Washington

Washington, D. C.
April 4, 1935

Open hearings on the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill were held by the Senate Agricultural Committee this week. Mr. M. W. Thatcher and Mr. D. L. O'Connor appeared in behalf of the North west Farmers Union Legislative Committee in vigorous support of this legislation.

The amendments, known as H. R. 7088, to the Agricultural Adjustment Act are in grave danger of being defeated due to the combined opposition of the processrs and handlers of agricultural products. These amendments provide for the licensing of processors and handlers of farm products when two-thirds of the farmers have signed marketing agreements and asked for the licensing of the processors and handlers of the products marketed in that area.

These marketing agreements and licenses contemplate the protecting of the farmers from underselling by distributors, and also provides for the inspection of books and records of these processors and handlers by the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of eliminating unreasonable profits.

It must be remembered that included in this bill is the Parity Amendment which provides for an increase in the benefit payments of over forty million of dollars per year on wheat alone.

Write your Senators and Congressmen today urging them to support this legislation.

The Flaxseed bill, on which this committee has done considerable work will be up for hearings by both the Senate and the House Agricultural Committees very soon. Due to the present state of affairs here, it is very difficult to get any bill enacted into law.

Every Farmers Union Local and businessmen's organization should send resolutions to their congressional delegation requesting the passage of the Flax Bill as it means millions of dollars additional revenue to the Northwest.

The Revolution of 1381

You have all read of King Arthur's Round Table, of the remarkable exploits of noble knights, of anemic maidens who wasted away their lives in ivory towers. of the fabulous courts of the olden days. Who has not been fired by the account of Sir Launcelot worsting the Black Knight and winning the beautiful maiden?

This was the bright side of chivalry five or six hundred years ago in England. But we do not often hear of the dark side—the exploitation of the serfs, whose grubbing in the soil made these splendors possible. If they are mentioned in these legends, they are depicted as dull, witless animals, totally at the mercy of their "betters," incapable of thinking for themselves.

But it appears that this is an erroneous conception, for previous to 1381 we have one John Ball going about the English countryside preaching the alarming gospel that the peasants should have free use of God's own land, and should not have to pay tribute for such use, to the nobleman, in any form whatsoever. Furthermore, the pernicious doctrine was spread that each and every peasant should be equal to, and as free as, every nobleman and his supporting string of knights (who were, as near as I can understand, the official rent-gatherers for their liege-lords). For these bolshevik ideas, John Ball was imprisoned in the London tower.

But his gospel had done its work—the seed was sown, the spark was fanned—in short, a revolt broke out. Headed by Wat the Tyler, the peasantry began their famous "March on London," demonstrating effectively that a number of men working for one definite goal, could sweep all before it. They reached London, freed John Ball and other political prisoners, and forced arbitration upon Richadr II. The young king, weak-kneed and perhaps still a little idealistic, saw the point of view of the aroused serfs, and gave them signed guarantees for free lands and complete freedom and equality. Elated with their success, the peasants disbanded peacefully and went home rejoicing.

Meanwhile, dark things were afoot. The nobles, when they found out what the young king had done, gave him the "third degree,"—put him "on the spot" as it were, and told him that if he would not take back his promise, and stamp out the insurrection, they would withdraw their support from him and perhaps go even further. There was little choice—and so Richard led an avenging army into the countryside; peasants were dug out of their burrows, searched, and if a paper signed by the king was found upon them, they were summarily executed, without formality of a trial. Thousands were killed this way. Among them was John Ball.

Chivalry did not live long after this. The new class of tradesmen and foot soldiers with guns spelt the doom of nobles and their knights. Serfdom soon passed also, but never again were the peasants as near freedom as they were in the year 1361. Not even today. New devices for enslaving the peasants were introduced—rent, interest, profit and they continue to be as effective as any physical bondage.

One thing about chivalry—it was honest slavery. One could fight it openly, with force, and force was its weapon. It was an animal-like organism; its basis was purely and simply the strength in a man's right arm. But a crafty middle-class grew up, one of brokers and capitalists and money-lenders and buyers and sellers—money became the almighty power—the strength of a man's right arm became as nothing compared with the power of usury or monopoly. Chivalry was doomed.

Then think about the amazing emptiness of a culture which catered only to a pampered leisure class and only infrequently, as in "Piers Plowman" or "Canterbury Tales" deigned to examine the understratum of society. Only such cultures as recognize the brotherhood of all men will endure. Any culture which is based on class is doomed to die with that class. That is but logic—and fate.

FARMER-LABOR PRESS SERVICE
By
H. G. Teigan

. . . . . . By Henry C. Teigan . . . . . .

Last week was a bad one for the light and power companies in Minnesota. The conservative city of Hutchinson returned a majority for municipal ownership by a vote of 1146 to 128 against. The margin was almost ten to one for public ownership.

A few days before the city of Glencoe in the same county had voted out the betrayers of the public interest by an equally impressive vote. The old mayor and his colleagues in the City Council who had come to the rescue of the Northern States Power Company went down to defeat at the hands of men pledged to a municipal light and power plant.

But that was not all. The state Supreme Court, by unanimous vote, upheld the elections at Mora and Mountain Lake at which the people had voted for the establishment of municipally owned electric plants. Incidentally, the court paid its respects to the performance of the light and power company that had sought to restrain the Mountain Lake people from proceeding with the construction of the plant.

"Improper Conduct"

It appears that the power company's contention was that the citizens of Mountain Lake had violated the Corrupt Practices Act in its publicity matter. The publicity disseminated by the citizens committee favoring a municipal light plant was in answer to certain false contentions of the power company which the court designated as "improper conduct." The court said in part:

"An inspection of the record in this case and in the election contests, made a part of the record in the case at bar, shows that the plaintiff was the aggressor in all the political activity surrounding the election; that, if any law was violated, or if there was an improper conduct, the plaintiff Power Company was guilty.

Under the doctrine of clean hands, it would not seem that the Power Company could complain of a violation of which it itself is guilty, or complain of conduct which it caused by the publication of unfair statements. To deny defendants the right to answer such statements, would place a handicap upon them never intended in the law."

Strong Language

It is seldom that the Supreme Court voices its opinion in as caustic language as that used in the above case. In all probability however, it will have a wholesome effect on power companies that in the future seek to enjoin voters from carrying out their wishes as expressed at the polls. In other words, now that the city of Hutchinson has so overwhelmingly decided to go ahead with the establishment of a light and power plants, the Northern States Power Company may find it unwise to resort to legal action to prevent the voters from carrying out their plans.

Where Profits Go

Incidentally, too, the profits earned by the Litchfield plant go into the city treasury, while the profits earned by the Northern States Power Company at Hutchinson flow into the coffers of the men of Wall Street.

In this connection it is interesting to note the difference in light rates in the city of Hutchinson, supplied with current by the Northern States Power Company, and the city of Litchfield, whose current is furnished by a municipal plant.

Big Saving in Litchfield

For a five-room house in Hutchinson with a total consumption of 130 kilowatt hours, the charge would be $5.30. In Litchfield, according to J. C. Bang, superintendent of the plant, the charge would be only $4.10 or a saving to the customer of $1.20. On an eight room house in Hutchinson, whose total consumption is 148 kilowatt hours, the charge would be $6.68, while at Litchfield the same amount of current would be supplied at $4.46, or at a saving of $2.22.

Mr. Bang also shows that the power rates in Litchfield, with this municipal plant, are considerably below those at Hutchinson. Space, however, forbids quoting more of Mr. Bang's splendid article comparing the Hutchinson and Litchfield electric rates.

The struggle for public ownership has been a hard one. Private ownership will not give way as a result of argument alone. Moreover, no big business group is more firmly entrenched than is the power crowd. Yet, the indications are that the people are waking up on this particular issue, at least, and ere long they will come into their own through the establishment of public-owned light and power systems.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

In theory and practice our economic order is in sharp conflict with the gospel of Christ. One is essentially pagan, following after the philosophies and attitudes of ancient Rome and Greece; the other is of Christ after the manner of His life, teachings and attitude.

Our economic order makes profit its motive and selfishness its appeal; the motive of Christianity is service and its appeal is unselfish. Our economic order makes competition its method, which tends to develop selfishness, making man cutthroat, hence un-social in attitude; the motive of Christianity is cooperation, which tends to develop the better side of man's nature making him more of a man and less of a predatory animal.

Our economic order makes property or wealth its ultimate object; the ultimate object of Christianity is character for the individual on the moral side and security, not wealth, on the material side. Christianity calls to society to accept responsibility for the welfare of the individual and calls the individual to accept social government, and a responsibility to give that government his best.

FARMERS GET LARGER SHARE

Farmers received 45.6 cents of each dollar spent by city consumers for 10 leading food products in February compared with an average of 38.5 cents received last year, and 34.9 cents in 1932, and 56.5 cents in 1913, according to a report on margins between farm prices and retail prices released March 27 by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. These figures do not include allowances for benefit payments to farmers. The study is based on an analysis of prices of beef, pork, hens, eggs, milk, butter cheese, potatoes, flour, and bread. The farmers' share of the consumer's food dollar for items not included in this list is probably lower than the average for the 10 items covered by this study.

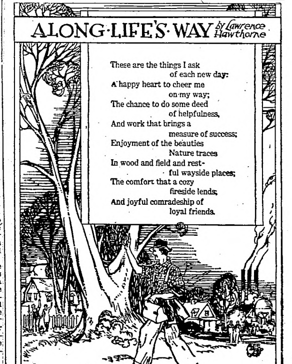
OR WORDS TO THAT EFFECT

I had twelve bottles of whiskey in my cellar and the missis made me empty the contents of each and every bottle down the sink, so after several hours of vain argument and domestic strife I proceeded to do as she desired. I withdrew the cork from the first bottle and poured the contents down the sink with the exception of one glass which I drank. I then drew the cork from the second bottle and did the same likewise, with the exception of one glass which I drank. I extracted the cork from the third sink and poured the bottle down the glass when I drank some. I pulled the bottle from the cork of the next and drank one sink of it, and then threw the rest down the drink. I then pulled the sink out of the next cork and poured the bottle down my drink. I pulled the next bottle out of my throat and poured the cork down the drink all but the sink which I drank. I pulled the next cork from my neck and poured the sink down the bottle and drank the cork.

When I had them all emptied I steadied the house with one hand and counted the bottles which were 24. As the house came around I also counted them again, and had 74. Finally I had the houses and the bottles counted, so I proceeded to wash the bottles but I couldn't get the brush in the bottles, so I turned them inside out and washed and wiped them all and went upstairs to tell my wife all about what I did. And I've got the wifest little nicie in the world.—T. D. Bayley in "Ounce of Prevention."

The chief difference between a speakeasy and a saloon is that the saloon has the protection of the law, and therefore has a right to poison and debauch the people.

Prohibition closed 177,000 saloons. According to a statement made by Senator Sheppard on the floor of the U. S. Senate, there were 437,704 of the new and worse saloons in operation seven months after repeal.



ALONG·LIFE'S·WAY by Lawrence Hawthorne

These are the things I ask of each new day:
A happy heart to cheer me
on my way;
The chance to do some deed
of helpfulness,
And work that brings a measure of success;
Enjoyment of the beauties
Nature traces
In wood and field and restful wayside places;
The comfort that a cozy
fireside lends,
And joyful comradeship of loyal friends.

THANKS

—o—

I wish to express my thanks to relatives and friends, entire hospital staff, School Dist. No. 42, and 3rd Dist. SERA office for their kindness shown to me during my recent illness. Some of us think our lives dreary and commonplace, but in the light of the Judgment Day, we shall see the tasks we fret over today, the serving of others, which sometimes grows irksome, blossoming into divine beauty and radiancy.

Mrs. Albert Poppenhagen.

BOILS

The other day a young man of my acquaintance, relating a past experience, said, "I was seventeen, and in love with a girl who wouldn't look at me, and I had boils."

We all laughed. Being seventeen, with a case of puppy love, was bad enough. But boils in addition! Boils are an old story, probably as old as love itself. Certainly long before the days of Job people suffered from boils, and they have been suffering ever since. Just about every person some time in his life is afflicted with one of these "pus-sy devil spots of pain," as a writer fittingly described them.

And, unless exceptional care is used, one boil is apt to breed another, and sometimes the boil keeps on, working the same place over and over again, until it develops into a carbuncle.

In various occupations, too, boils are apt to be a hazard. Cleaners and dyers using benzine compounds and workmen engaged in metal grinding factories employing heavy oils, are frequent sufferers from boils.

Common boils are caused by a ball-shaped germ called staphylococcus. This germ gets into the skin by following down a hair follicle. Then pus develops at the place where the germ grows in the skin and there is the resulting throbbing pain. Boils usually occur on the back of the neck or under the wrist band, or around the waist. A bit of dirt with the germ on it, becomes imbedded in the hair follicle, then the rubbing of the garment chafes it, and the boil germ has a fine place to grow.

Throughout the ages many kinds of poultices and remedies have been applied to boils, but without much success. Then some sixteen or seventeen years ago, a French scientist, D'Herrelle, invented a ferment-like substance that dissolves bacteria as ferments dissolve a starch granule. When bacteria are dissolved by this ferment-like agent, they are destroyed and all the materials inside the germ cells are liberated and escape into the solution in which the bacteria are suspended.

The writer of this article has been interested in the study of the skin for many years. When this new bacteriophage was made known, it occurred to me that if we could develop a bacteriophage that would eat the staphylococcus or boil germ, we might secure a quick cure for this troublesome inflammation. My assistants in the laboratory and I experimented for a long time, and finally in 1923 we succeeded in finding a dissolving substance for boil germs. With this substance we could prepare a new vaccine for the prevention and cure of boils.

If you are interested in how such things are done, the vaccine is made by growing the boil germs and then adding a small amount of the ferment-like substance to the culture. After this has been incubated for several hours, the boil germs are dissolved, and the vaccine is ready to be applied to the surface of a young boil. The vaccine is not denatured in any physical or chemical way, as neither heat is applied nor are chemicals added. We have named it staphylococcus bacteriophage, or, translated into everyday language, the boil-germ eater, or boil vaccine.

The vaccine is applied by simply putting a few drops on a piece of gauze and placing the wet dressing over the surface of the boil. The pain stops within a few minutes and the boil itself disappears within one to two days.

The treatment is not so successful when applied to boils and carbuncles of long standing. It yields the best results when it is used on a new boil that is just developing. Then it is quick and sure. By using it at once, workers in the occupations already referred to, athletes, and all others who are apt to get grime rubbed into their skin, can be spared many hours of pain and "sitting around the house doing nothing."

Staphylococcus bacteriophage is made by several commercial firms and can be supplied by any physician at not a great deal of cost. We are now experimenting in the research laboratory at the University of Illinois to see if this vaccine will be of help in preventing typhoid fever.

Unfortunately this bacteriophage will not stop boils from developing in persons suffering from diabetes, varicose veins and other such debilitating diseases. The reason these persons get boils is because, due to their physical condition, their bodies cannot throw off a boil infection, once it takes root in a hair follicle—boil germs are always present on every one's skin. These persons should never "doctor" themselves; they should always consult a physician.

By "Capitol Reporter"

Forgetting that the Reupblican party in Minnesota is the father the the spoils system and that under Republican regimes only political henchmen could obtain positions, Republican politicians have been criticizing the Farmer-Labor administration for appointments of Farmer-Laborites to office. It remained, however, for a Farmer-Labor governor, Floyd B. Olson to recommend to the Legislature its civil service law, which will forever take politics out of state government personnel. It will be interesting to observe whether the conservative-controlled Legislature will comply with the suggestion of Governor Olson to forever do away with the spoils system. This is the acid test of their sincerity . . . .

—o—

In a radio talk, J. R. Sweitzer, chairman of the House appropriations committee, recommended the sales tax as a cure-all of our economic ills. The St. Paul representative would restore prosperity by further lowering the standard of living of those who live from hand to mouth. We wonder whether he is speaking for his masters or speaking his own mind.

In the course of his talk, Mr. Sweitzer said: "Governor Olson has not made a single recommendation which will put men to work in Minnesota. . . . "

Mr. Sweitzer couldn't possibly be serious. Has he forgotten the Governor's recommendations for public works projects Surely he must know of the Governor's special message to the Senate calling attention to the need for passage of certain legislation so that Minnesota can avail itself of the entire benefits under the federal works program under the so-called five-billion-dollar bill! And it could not be that Mr. Sweitzer has forgotten the recent history of the $10,000,000 relief bill, when his group organized a virtual filibuster that lasted weeks! . . . .

—o—

In addressing the House last week Acting Governor Welford of North Dakota predicted that Minnesota will drift along and then have a sales tax." In stating, however, that the sales tax is only a temporary taxation measure and that "a more permanent form of taxation" will have to be found, the North Dakota executive admitted that the sales tax is not sound.

—o—

It seems that in 1923, Republican leaders favored the policy of assessing state employes for campaign purposes. In that year a Senate committee investigated the state departments and Republican expenditures. A majority report, signed by Senators Rockne, MacKenzie and others, contained the following: . . . .

"An examination of the reports of the receipts of campaign funds from state employes show that such contributions were so similar in size that one must conclude that such contributions were made on some uniform basis. The committee feels, however, that appointees, the continuation of whose jobs depend upon the reelection of their chief are simply spending money in the interest of continuing their own employment in making campaign contributions, and if such contributions are voluntary for that purpose, and are not the result of assessment or coercion, there is nothing improper about making them." . . . .

In considering the above action in the light of the Senator's present espousal of a bill which would prohibit the three-per-cent voluntary "assessment" of Farmer-Labor state employes, one is led to ask the "watchdog of the treasury" whether he has changed his political morals and ideals, or whether he is not, after all, just another politician . . .

—o—

The plan of both Senate and House conservatives to reduce salaries has met with rebuke at the hands of Governor Olson. The Governor pointed out that the conservatives are laboring under a mistaken economy in proposing salary reductions at the very time when all the instrumentalities of the federal government are employed to increase the price of commodities . . .

In a communication to the House appropriations committee, George H. Griffiths, chief oil inspector, warns that the division will not be able to maintain its present high standards if contemplated salary reductions gor through . . . .

PLUMMER

JUNIOR CLASS PLAY FRIDAY

"Reach for The Moon," a romantic comedy, will be presented by the Junior class of Pershing high school in Plummer on Friday April 12. The play centers around a disinherited son of an old English Earl who finds himself, love, and his title while running a dude ranch in Colorado. Lloyd Hanson reaches the highest point in his dramatic career as the Englishman who goes west. His pal, Larry, is acted by Donald Holberg. Florence LaVoi, Luella Berg, Carol Kjos, Crescenz Enderle, and Ethel Laniel share the feminine leads in what promises to be an all-star cast. Alvind Johnson capably performs the part of a brother who also finds love in the West. Deane Schoenauer, as an Easterner who has gone west with a vengeance, and Henry Erickson, as an Indian servant combine to take the part of Lochinvar and furnish the major portion of the laughter. Evelyn Childs, Eunice Noyes, Ed Langlie, and Charles Fellman have strong roles in the supporting cast. The play is under the direction of R. M. McCrady of the high school faculty.

The Plummer school will close Friday afternoon for the Spring Vacation period. Miss Fairchild and Miss Fondell plan to go to their homes in Minneapolis. Miss Koed will go to her home at Askov, Mr. Lauer plans to go to St. Cloud and Miss Bell to Big Lake. Mr. McCrady and Mr. Ohnstad plan on spending the greater part of the vacation period in Plummer.

Superintendent Ripple will leave Friday night to attend the Spring Meeting of the superintendents at the University of Minnesota next week.

The weather has been so unfavorable that the high school boys have not been able to get out for baseball practice. A number of high schools in the district are planning on organizing baseball teams, and Plummer High School will probably play a schedule of games.

DESCRIPTION NEEDED IN STATE LAND INQUIRIES

Persons interested in securing information relative to specific parcels of state-owned land must include a description of the land involved, F. A. Wildes, director of the Division of Lands and Minerals, warned.

The State owns almost 1,500,000 acres of trust fund land, mostly in northern Minnesota. One county alone has over 800,000 acres of state trust fund lands. No printed lists of descriptions of this land are available.

For further information regarding the purchase of state trust fund land write to F. A. Wildes, Division of Lands and Minerals, State Ogice Building, St. Paul.

For information on the leasing of state trust fund land write to R. Ray Kreis, State Squatter Agent, Hibbing.

Lands in state forests can be leased only through the Division of Forestry. The nearest forest ranger should be consulted.

Speaking of the food value of alcohol the Encyclopedia Britanica says: "None is known to be converted into substances which the body can retain."

THE MAN FROM YONDER

Copyright 1928-1934 Harold Titus
WNU SERVICE

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

Great brown eyes looked at him. The nose was small, aristocratic; the mouth red lipped, mobile, he imagined, but now it was set rather grimly into an expression of extreme petulance.

He did not register consciously the knitted toque of soft maroon wool, nor the well-tailored jumper and knickers. Impressions leaped at him in ensemble, rather than detail: a trim, trig, competent little figure.

"Oh!" he said, when she did not speak. "Oh . . . Why, hello!"

He grinned, then, but no responsive smile changed the girl's face or even lighted her eyes.

"Good Afternoon," She Said Brusquely.

"Good afternoon," she said brusquely, almost sharply.

"I saw your trail. That is, I . . ." How different, this beginning, from the manner of address he had planned! He felt called upon, now, to explain his presence on her trail rather than to demand a reason for her being there. "I saw your trail," he began again, "and I thought . . . It seemed to me you might be a little lost."

"As a matter of fact, I am completely turned around," she said. "It was silly of me to come into the woods, especially on a day like this, without a compass. But I did . . . and here I am!" She was eyeing him closely, now, as though searching for some special detail of face or figure.

Lost! He thought: a lost Diana!

"I kept losing my bearings and had trouble getting oriented and am getting a little tired. It was so silly! Downright stupid! If you know this country you can set me right. I should be back in Tincup before long or they'll worry."

Ben wondered quickly and irrelevantly, who They might be. Yes, he could get her out. In a half hour he could have her in his camp and send her on her way to town. . . . But in a half hour . . . And with her manner so clearly hostile for no reason at all? . . . She impressed him as a young woman most desirable to know well and also as one whose confidence would be slow in acquiring.

"Lost, eh?" he asked and laughed oddly. "Matter of fact, I came out without a compass myself." That was truth. He needed no compass for a short swing such as he had made today; his sound woodsman's instinct would hold him safe.

"Well, that complicates matters," the girl said drily. "I've got to get out of this timber and I'm not good for much more travel in this sort of going. I haven't been on webs in several years and I've gone further than I should have."

"By George, that's too bad!" he said and hoped that none of his men, who would be trekking into camp by now, would shout or sing so their voices would break down the illusion of empty distances surrounding them which evidently possessed the girl. "Too bad! It's getting dark sure enough but it isn't very late. If you could sit down and get your second wind, now—"

"But what good will that do? If we stay here until it's really dark there may be no getting out until morning. All I have with me is a cake of chocolate and the prospect of a hungry, cold night in the woods with you isn't alluring."

Ben rubbed his chin.

"I'm sorry. If the impression I make is as bad as—".

"I meant nothing personal. But I don't know you. I don't fancy being lost with anyone, let alone a stranger."

He thought she almost smiled, as if relenting a bit from her brusqueness.

"Look!" he said, pointing aloft to where a break in the clouds near the zenith let about the last of the daylight through. "It's going to clear. We'll have stars directly. Let me build a little shelter and a fire here. A few minutes rest will do a lot of good and with stars we can get anywhere."

She hesitated, seeming to consider.

"All right, I must admit the last half hour's going has been hard."

Out came his belt ax, off went the lower limbs of young hemlocks. In less than it would take an ordinary man to lop the branches he had a bench of trampled snow on a knoll covered with aromatic boughs and a thick windbreak of them behind it. Then, attacking a huge birch stub he peeled off a quantity of loose bark. This he lighted from a match carried in a tightly corked bottle and as the quickly burning stuff shed a comfortable glow on the bower he had built, he knocked dead branches from a hemlock, fed them to the flame and then turned to a nearby dry top of a fallen maple, knocking off substantial faggots.

She eyed the fire as he stood erect, drawing off his gloves and spreading his big hands to the warmth.

"Strange," she said, "that you should be lost. From the way you make yourself comfortable in the woods, I'd say you'd been born in timber."

"From the way you know woodcraft when you see it, I'd say it's as strange that you should be lost!"

"What I know of the woods was learned years ago. One gets rusty, I've discovered. Who are you and what are you doing here?"

Her directness quite took his breath.

"Well, my name's Ben Elliott, if that means anything to you. And I was looking for somebody who has no business to be here. Who are you and what brings you into this timber?"

He was bound, now, to break through her aloofness.

"That," she replied, however, "is largely my own affair. But, Mr. Elliott, if you should guess that I was simply trying to lose a certain unpleasant mood in the woods where I once was quite happy, you wouldn't be far from right."

She spoke incisively and unhesitatingly but it seemed to him that behind this brusqueness was something quite different; something he could not quite fathom. He was about to remind her that she had not yet revealed her identity when she went on:

"Looking for some one who has no business here, you said. Just who are they, what are they doing?"

"As to the first. I can't tell you. For the second, their purpose probably would be to attempt to hold up a timber operation in which I'm rather interested not so far from here."

Her eyes were on him with a curious expression, which might possibly have been personal interest.

"To hold you up? How?"

"Are you from Tincup?"

"I am."

"You know people there? And what seems to be the town's most famous tradition?"

"I don't understand."

"Isn't it that Nicholas Brandon finishes what he starts out to do? That whatever he says goes, come what may?"

"I've heard that said. People like to talk."

"Right! But I'm managing an outfit that's encouraging rough going from some source. All sorts of things are happening and I'm trying to head off certain of them."

"I see."

She looked away and puckered her delectable lips as though to whistle. Ben rubbed his chin again. She was not even interested in learning more about him, but where many young men would have been piqued at that he only laughed softly.

"What's the joke?" she asked, almost defiantly.

"I was just thinking that it's a funny situation when a man gets into a scrap and it looks so big to him that he thinks the whole darned country must be watching it and him; and then along comes a nice girl who's been in a position to hear all about it and who isn't interested a dime's worth."

She looked up at him slowly.

"You mean that you want to talk about it?"

"Perfectly natural that I should. I'm in one whale of a fight and having the time of my life. It's the first job I've found in a coon's age that was hard enough and complicated enough to be worth working over."

"That's what I've heard about you."

"You've. . . . Oh, so you have heard about me?"

"Of course. I live in Tincup. Few have any secrets in a town of Tincup's size."

Ben chuckled again.

"Well, then, if you've heard that much about me and my job, maybe there isn't anything I could tell you that would be interesting."

"Maybe not," she said with an air of dismissal.

Ben watched her closely as she slowly broke a twig to bits with her slim fingers.

"Deer used to yard in the swamp back of here," she said. "When I was a little girl I used to come out and try to make friends with them. That's why I came out today . . . wondering if they'd started to yard yet."

"It's too early for them to yard."

"Yes, but the snow may get deep enough any day to bunch them."

"Snow!" he said and shrugged. "If it gets deep in a hurry the deer will yard all right and, maybe, I'll be licked and a little girl done out of all she has in the world."

"All she has in the world? Meaning just what?"

"If you live in Tincup and know the town you must know about the owner of this property. This is the Hoot Owl timber."

A queer smile twitched at the girl's lips.

"Sometimes I think I do; as often, I wonder what she's like . . . really like. I happen to be Dawn McManus."

Ben Elliott opened his mouth as if to speak. Then closed it again and made a foolishly helpless movement with one hand. He stared at her and began to stammer.

"Why I . . . Why, you . . . Why, Able said! . . ." He laughed outright, then, as his misconception became clear. "Oh, if I'd given it a second thought I'd have known! Able first told me about you as a little girl. It stuck in my head; a little girl! But that was years ago, of course. . . . Gee! . . . Why, then you're lost in your own back yard, you might say."

"I was," she corrected. "But a few minutes ago I heard some one sing out; and just now the cook called the crew to supper."

"Then why didn't you—"

"Because I was rather curious to discover what sort of man is standing between me and poverty,"—perhaps ironically, this. "And, of course, I knew you weren't lost."

Elliott flushed on that.

"I played at being lost myself so I'd have a chance to talk to you. I'm glad I did . . . unless it has offended you."

"No. I'm . . . I'm only ready to go in, now."

She adjusted the harness of her shoes dexterously and they set out. On the way to camp Ben tried to talk to her further but her responses were brief and noncommital. Her interest appeared to be only poorly aroused even on such a vital matter as the operation of her own property, and so finally he gave up trying to make talk and broke trail thinking that now the job would have an added zest, that a girl like Dawn McManus was an even greater incentive than the thought of a small child, alone, with her timber at the mercy of hard schemers, and depending on him to make safe her heritage.

CHAPTER VI

THE new piston head for the locomotive arrived and Elliott was at the station when the train bearing it pulled in. More, he was close beside the express car when it halted and carried the part himself into his waiting sleigh.

The veneer logs were ready to come out to the siding. Standard cars had been set off at Hoot Owl that day. Tomorrow, bright and early, they would start loading and by night his contract with Blackmore would be filled. He would receive a large check, a substantial part of it clear profit, in return.

His men were growing restless under the driving; whispers in camp had it that the job was broke beyond repair and he knew that to pass a pay day would send his crew scattering, a handicap which he could never overcome in time. But with the men held on the job and the mill ready to saw in another week he would be ready to give the Hoot Owl a fresh start, a new hold on hope.

After reaching camp he plunged into his blankets for a night's rest.

And about the time he burrowed into the pillow Nicholas Brandon sat in his office talking to a pale, slender young man whose blue eyes smiled genially. Genially, yes, but in that quality was a flaw, one might have observed on close scrutiny. Familiarity with Limpy Holbrook might not breed contempt, but surely, in an alert man, it would stir an awareness for the need of caution soon or later.

"All right. Don't start until dark. And do just as I've told you; don't forget to give yourself plenty of time. You can't travel fast."

"I get you, Mr. Brandon."

"Have you . . . That is, has he ever seen you?"

"He came into the pool room and I sold him tobacco the other day. We visited a minute."

"Friendly?"

"Nothing but!" The open smile had the cast of a leer as Holbrook made reply.

"The pool room's a good place for you to be, Limpy. Great center for news. Well . . . You keep on reporting everything that's said there . . . Good night."

"The Pool Room's a Good Place for You to Be, Limpy."

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By
Harold Titus
Copyright 1923-1934 Harold Titus
W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a logbirling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

Great brown eyes looked at him. The nose was small, aristocratic; the mouth red lipped, mobile, he imagined, but now it was set rather grimly into an expression of extreme petulance.

He did not register consciously the knitted toque of soft maroon wool, nor the well-tailored jumper and knickers. Impressions leaped at him in ensemble, rather than detail: a trim, trig, competent little figure.

"Oh!" he said, when she did not speak. "Oh . . . Why, hello!"

He grinned, then, but no responsive smile changed the girl's face or even lighted her eyes.

"Good Afternoon," She Said Brusquely.

"Good afternoon," she said brusquely, almost sharply.

"I saw your trail. That is, I . . ." How different, this beginning, from the manner of address he had planned! He felt called upon, now, to explain his presence on her trail rather than to demand a reason for her being there. "I saw your trail," he began again, "and I thought . . . It seemed to me you might be a little lost."

"As a matter of fact, I am completely turned around," she said. "It was silly of me to come into the woods, especially on a day like this, without a compass. But I did . . . and here I am!" She was eyeing him closely, now, as though searching for some special detail of face or figure.

Lost! He thought: a lost Diana!

"I kept losing my bearings and had trouble getting oriented and am getting a little tired. It was so silly! Downright stupid! If you know this country you can set me right. I should be back in Tincup before long or they'll worry."

Ben wondered quickly and irrelevantly, who They might be. Yes, he could get her out. In a half hour he could have her in his camp and send her on her way to town. . . . But in a half hour . . . And with her manner so clearly hostile for no reason at all? . . . She impressed him as a young woman most desirable to know well and also as one whose confidence would be slow in acquiring.

"Lost, eh?" he asked and laughed oddly. "Matter of fact, I came out without a compass myself." That was truth. He needed no compass for a short swing such as he had made today; his sound woodsman's instinct would hold him safe.

"Well, that complicates matters," the girl said drily. "I've got to get out of this timber and I'm not good for much more travel in this sort of going. I haven't been on webs in several years and I've gone further than I should have."

"By George, that's too bad!" he said and hoped that none of his men, who would be trekking into camp by now, would shout or sing so their voices would break down the illusion of empty distances surrounding them which evidently possessed the girl. "Too bad! It's getting dark sure enough but it isn't very late. If you could sit down and get your second wind, now—"

"But what good will that do? If we stay here until it's really dark there may be no getting out until morning. All I have with me is a cake of chocolate and the prospect of a hungry, cold night in the woods with you isn't alluring."

Ben rubbed his chin.

"I'm sorry. If the impression I make is as bad as—"

"I meant nothing personal. But I don't know you. I don't fancy being lost with anyone, let alone a stranger."

He thought she almost smiled, as if relenting a bit from her brusqueness.

"Look!" he said, pointing aloft to where a break in the clouds near the zenith let about the last of the daylight through. "It's going to clear. We'll have stars directly. Let me build a little shelter and a fire here. A few minutes rest will do a lot of good and with stars we can get anywhere."

She hesitated, seeming to consider.

"All right, I must admit the last half hour's going has been hard."

Out came his belt ax, off went the lower limbs of young hemlocks. In less than it would take an ordinary man to lop the branches he had a bench of trampled snow on a knoll covered with aromatic boughs and a thick windbreak of them behind it. Then, attacking a huge birch stub he peeled off a quantity of loose bark. This he lighted from a match carried in a tightly corked bottle and as the quickly burning stuff shed a comfortable glow on the bower he had built, he knocked dead branches from a hemlock, fed them to the flame and then turned to a nearby dry top of a fallen maple, knocking off substantial faggots.

She eyed the fire as he stood erect, drawing off his gloves and spreading his big hands to the warmth.

"Strange," she said, "that you should be lost. From the way you make yourself comfortable in the woods, I'd say you'd been born in timber."

"From the way you know woodcraft when you see it, I'd say it's as strange that you should be lost!"

"What I know of the woods was learned years ago. One gets rusty, I've discovered. Who are you and what are you doing here?"

Her directness quite took his breath.

"Well, my name's Ben Elliott, if that means anything to you. And I was looking for somebody who has no business to be here. Who are you and what brings you into this timber?"

He was bound, now, to break through her aloofness.

"That," she replied, however, "is largely my own affair. But, Mr. Elliott, if you should guess that I was simply trying to lose a certain unpleasant mood in the woods where I once was quite happy, you wouldn't be far from right."

She spoke incisively and unhesitatingly but it seemed to him that behind this brusqueness was something quite different; something he could not quite fathom. He was about to remind her that she had not yet revealed her identity when she went on:

"Looking for some one who has no business here, you said. Just who are they, what are they doing?"

"As to the first. I can't tell you. For the second, their purpose probably would be to attempt to hold up a timber operation in which I'm rather interested not so far from here."

Her eyes were on him with, a curious expression, which might possibly have been personal interest.

"To hold you up? How?"

"Are you from Tincup?"

"I am."

"You know people there? And what seems to be the town's most famous tradition?"

"I don't understand."

"Isn't it that Nicholas Brandon finishes what he starts out to do? That whatever he says goes, come what may?"

"I've heard that said. People like to talk."

"Right! But I'm managing an outfit that's encouraging rough going from some source. All sorts of things are happening and I'm trying to head off certain of them."

"I see."

She looked away and puckered her delectable lips as though to whistle. Ben rubbed his chin again. She was not even interested in learning more about him, but where many young men would have been piqued at that he only laughed softly.

"What's the joke?" she asked, almost defiantly.

"I was just thinking that it's a funny situation when a man gets into a scrap and it looks so big to him that he thinks the whole darned country must be watching it and him; and then along comes a nice girl who's been in a position to hear all about it and who isn't interested a dime's worth."

She looked up at him slowly.

"You mean that you want to talk about it?"

"Perfectly natural that I should. I'm in one whale of a fight and having the time of my life. It's the first job I've found in a coon's age that was hard enough and complicated enough to be worth working over."

"That's what I've heard about you."

"You've . . . Oh, so you have heard about me?"

"Of course. I live in Tincup. Few have any secrets in a town of Tincup's size."

Ben chuckled again.

"Well, then, if you've heard that much about me and my job, maybe there isn't anything I could tell you that would be interesting."

"Maybe not," she said with an air of dismissal.

Ben watched her closely as she slowly broke a twig to bits with her slim fingers.

"Deer used to yard in the swamp back of here," she said. "When I was a little girl I used to come out and try to make friends with them. That's why I came out today . . . wondering if they'd started to yard yet."

"It's too early for them to yard."

"Yes, but the snow may get deep enough any day to bunch them."

"Snow!" he said and shrugged. "If it gets deep in a hurry the deer will yard all right and, maybe, I'll be licked and a little girl done out of all she has in the world."

"All she has in the world? Meaning just what?"

"If you live in Tincup and know the town you must know about the owner of this property. This is the Hoot Owl timber."

A queer smile twitched at the girl's lips.

"Sometimes I think I do; as often, I wonder what she's like . . . really like. I happen to be Dawn McManus."

Ben Elliott opened his mouth as if to speak. Then closed it again and made a foolishly helpless movement with one hand. He stared at her and began to stammer.

"Why I . . . Why, you . . . Why, Able said! . . ." He laughed outright, then, as his misconception became clear. "Oh, if I'd given it a second thought I'd have known! Able first told me about you as a little girl. It stuck in my head; a little girl! But that was years ago, of course. . . . Gee! . . . Why, then you're lost in your own back yard, you might say."

"I was," she corrected. "But a few minutes ago I heard some one sing out; and just now the cook called the crew to supper."

"Then why didn't you—"

"Because I was rather curious to discover what sort of man is standing between me and poverty."—perhaps ironically, this. "And, of course, I knew you weren't lost."

Elliott flushed on that.

"I played at being lost myself so I'd have a chance to talk to you. I'm glad I did . . . unless it has offended you."

"No. I'm . . . I'm only ready to go in, now."

She adjusted the harness of her shoes dexterously and they set out. On the way to camp Ben tried to talk to her further but her responses were brief and noncommital. Her interest appeared to be only poorly aroused even on such a vital matter as the operation of her own property, and so finally he gave up trying to make talk and broke trail thinking that now the job would have an added zest, that a girl like Dawn McManus was an even greater incentive than the thought of a small child, alone, with her timber at the mercy of hard schemers, and depending on him to make safe her heritage.

CHAPTER VI

THE new piston head for the locomotive arrived and Elliott was at the station when the train bearing it pulled in. More, he was close beside the express car when it halted and carried the part himself into his waiting sleigh.

The veneer logs were ready to come out to the siding. Standard cars had been set off at Hoot Owl that day. Tomorrow, bright and early, they would start loading and by night his contract with Blackmore would be filled. He would receive a large check, a substantial part of it clear profit, in return.

His men were growing restless under the driving; whispers in camp had it that the job was broke beyond repair and he knew that to pass a pay day would send his crew scattering, a handicap which he could never overcome in time. But with the men held on the job and the mill ready to saw in another week he would be ready to give the Hoot Owl a fresh start, a new hold on hope.

After reaching camp he plunged into his blankets for a night's rest.

And about the time he burrowed into the pillow Nicholas Brandon sat in his office talking to a pale, slender young man whose blue eyes smiled genially. Genially, yes, but in that quality was a flaw, one might have observed on close scrutiny. Familiarity with Limpy Holbrook might not breed contempt, but surely, in an alert man, it would stir an awareness for the need of caution soon or later.

"All right. Don't start until dark. And do just as I've told you; don't forget to give yourself plenty of time. You can't travel fast."

"I get you, Mr. Brandon."

"Have you . . . That is, has he ever seen you?"

"He came into the pool room and I sold him tobacco the other day. We visited a minute."

"Friendly?"

"Nothing but!" The open smile had the cast of a leer as Holbrook made reply.

"The pool room's a good place for you to be, Limpy. Great center for news. Well . . . You keep on reporting everything that's said there . . . Good night."

"The Pool Room's a Good Place for You to Be, Limpy."

25 Parcels of Land Sold At State Land Sale Mon.

At the annual sale of state lands held in this city Monday morning, Mr. Fowler, county auditor, reported that there were twenty-five parcels of land sold. All lands sold were in Black River, Nummedahl and Sanders townships and prices for the land ranged from six to twelve dollars per acre, the auditor stated.

Hank—Has repeal balanced the national budget?

Frank—Yes, just like too much whisky balances the drinker's gait.

Public Works Pro. Gets O.K. of WPA

stated, is a result of much public sentiment which has been expressed favoring the restoration of the ground water levels. This project, it was stated, calls for a dyke 15 miles miles long with approximately one mile of spillways and the labor for the project will be taken from all the adjoining counties as well as from the one in which the project will be in operation, namely Marshal county.

Mr. Henet, resident of this city, told the group that he was sure some form of social legislation would be passed by the present congress but that it was unlikely that it would be in the form of any of the present proposed plans. He stated, emphatically, that the sooner people realize that this is not "just another economic depression," but an "industrial revoltuion" the sooner would we find ourselves in an era of undreamed prosperity. Mr. Forsberg further criticized the destruction of natural resources by "profit blind human beings."

The Townsend plan for old age pensions was brought up at the meeting as a sound basis for the curing of all economic ills by Mr. Frank Dudley. In his plea for the support of the WPA for this bill he stated that if the Plan went into effect that 16,000,000 people would be given jobs within a few months. R. M. Aalbu atempted to show the fallacy of the plan by showing how the money would be collected for these payments by a sales tax, and demonstrated how the profits taken by the owners of industry and the 2 per cent, would stop the pension from "revolving."

Mr. Algot Johnson, in discussing an adequate measure for relief of the needy, brought up the plan, considered by many as the most sensible plan for public works, whereby the municipality is authorized to issue non-interest bearing script (or money) to be used as a medium of exchange in the city and to be worth their face value on all debts; this script to be backed by all taxable property in the community.

Resolutions were adopted favoring any project whereby the Red Lake River and Red Lake could be restored to normal. Another resolution favoring the Water Control bill which is now in the state legislature. This bill, Mr. Quist stated, would give the state the legal authority to stop water run-off, which it does not now have, under the present laws.

Rinkel Named Mayor

O. C. Paulson, chairman of the Auto Show committee, appeared before the council in behalf of the committee and thanked the body for their co-operation in making the exposition a success. He suggested to the body that a portable check-room be installed because of the congestion, which always occurred when the council rooms were used, around the doors to the main entrance and exit. This portable check-room could be set up on the main floor of the building and stored away when not in use, Mr. Paulson said. The matter was referred to the Building committee. Mr. Paulson also gave a report of the meeting of the Park Board, stating that Ole Ryan had been re-appointed caretaker and that they recommended that he receive $75 per month instead of the $70 that he received in the past. The report was approved by the body.

Other business of the council at the meeting was the granting of a building permit to Wm. Parbst, to remodel his dwelling; a resolution from the WPA was read and placed on file regarding the city trying to obtain monies for public works. A bill from Bert Norby, contractor for the building of the auditorium, was deferred to a later meeting. The amount was $250 which has been withheld because of a crack in the front steps of the building that the council wanted to watch during the winter. The third and final reading of the amendment changing the frequency of council meetings was heard and placed on pasage. The result is that there will be only one meeting of the city council each month after this month and that meeting will be held the second Tuesday of each month. The city attorney, Theo. Quale, stated that payment for the lots the city acquired through condemnation should be made as soon as possible.

Mud Lake Land Condemned

offered and accepted by the federal government was the highest price the government would pay.

"Completion of the project will hinge on whether or not the lands can be acquired for a price which can be paid by the federal government. The lands must be acquired for the amount set aside by the federal government which includes all costs of acquisition. If this cannot be accomplished, the Conservation Department may be compelled to dismiss the proceedings at any time it finds that it cannot proceed under the limitations described in the act and at the same time fulfill its obligations to the federal government It must be remembered that not one dollar of state funds will be expended."

"Local cooperation more than any other one factor is necessary to make the Mud Lake project a success. It is important that sportsmen and wild life conservationists give the enterprise their enthusiastic support."

To Legionnaires of Post 117

I wish to take these means of expressing my sincere appreciation in your presentation to me of the winning prize at the Auto Show last Saturday evening. I could hardly believe that I was the recipient of such a grand prize until it was actually turned over to me. Again I thank you.

Respectfully,
L. E. PETERSON,

NAZI REGIME SUBJECTS CHILDREN TO ARMY TRAINING

Berlin (TIS)—The extent to which military aviation training has progressed in Germany is revealed in the following statement published by the Berlin daily "Nachtausgabe":

"The aerial warfare training of the youngsters of the 'Hitler Youth' has made satisfactory progress during the past year. 59,200 Hitler boys and 35,150 members of the League of German Girls have been trained in civilian air protection during 1934. 288 protection cellars against aerial attacks have been built by them. The naval section of the 'Hitler Youth' was also kept busy at their special tasks."

$4,800,000,000 Works and Relief Bill Passes House and Senate Friday, April 5

By Harold C. Hagen

As expected the $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill was passed in the House and Senate in final form last Friday, the conference report being accepted. The forming of the organization for the giant program, which calls for the largest expenditures during peace time for any country in the world's history, has already started with President Roosevelt at the head, assisted by Harry L. Hopkins, FERA administrator; Rexford G. Tugwell, undersecretary of Agriculture; Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes and others.

The Senate vote on the final passage of the measure was 66 to 13 with Sen. Schall opposing and Sen. Shipstead paired in favor of the bill. The House vote was 317 to 70 with all the Minnesota Republicans voting against adoption while the three Farmer-Laborite, Buckler, Lundeen and Kvale voted with Ryan, Democrat, in favor of the measure. The appropriation, $4,000,000,000 for public works and $800,000,000 for relief, is immediately available and to remain available until exhausted or until June 30, 1937.

The works fund is divided into four main divisions covering:

Highways and grade crossing elimination, 800 million dollars; rural rehabilitation and relief in stricken agricultural areas, water conservation, transmountain water diversion, irrigation and reclamation, 500 mililon.

Rural electrification, 100 million; housing, 450 millions; four projects for professional and clerical persons, 300 millions; civilian conservation million.

Loans or grants for projects of States and municipalties or agencies thereof, where, in the determination of the President, not less than 25 per cent of the loan or grant is to be spent for work under such project, 900 million dollars.

Sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, prevention of stream pollution, sea coast erosion, reforestation, flood control and miscellaneous projects, 350 million dollars.

R. R. & W. ASKS THAT TEL. COS PAY APPRAISAL

Knud Wefald Explains Bills to Sen. Com. on Telephone

Hon. Knute Wefald, state railroad and warehouse commissioner, explained the Commission's stand relative to Senate File 960, which deals with physical conditions between rural telephone companies and the switching exchange, and stated that there could be no valid opposition to the bill once the facts were made known.

It is granted, Mr. Wefald said, that the exchange facilities are of great value to the farmers and that the telephone companies should be properly compensated for this service, but it should not be forgoten that farm lines are also a great asset to the telephone companies, because it serves every business man in the town who is a customer of the telephone company as well as all the other customers of the company.

From hearings held by the commission in switching rate cases it often appears that the farmers call the business men very seldom and the business men call the farmers twenty to thirty times oftener than the farmers call them, it was brought out in Mr. Wefald's statement. This bill being asked for by the Commission proposes that in a rate case, due consideration be given to the value of the farm lines to the exchange company as well as the value to the farmers for the service of this company, it was stated in Wefald's address to the Telephone and Telegraph Committee of the Minesota Senate.

Another bill taken to the Tel. and Telegraph committee and explained by Knud Wefald was Senate File 702 in which it is asked that burden of proof as to the reasonableness of their rates and the justification of their whole set-up be shifted from the state to the telephone company, for which the investigation is being made. A similar provision is in effect in several of the states in the Union and it is expected that in a very short time it would be in effect in every state, Mr. Wefald said. This bill would effect only the two large telephone companies in the state, namely the Tri-State and the Northwestern Bell Telephone companies, according to the commission's report.

It was stated that the cost to the state for appraisals was much larger than it should be to discourage apraisals by the state, but if this expense had to be carried by the telephone companies cheaper and more efficient service could be had, when Mr. Wefald spoke in behalf of the proposed bill.

In the "old saloon days," the Chicago Tribune said, editorially: "If the veritable narrative of the American saloon were ever written it would make the decadence of Rome look like an age of pristine purity in comparison. If these men have not made a practise of committing murder and arson it is because these crimes did not seem immediately profitable."

LUNDEEN ASKS SOLONS TO THIRD PARTY CONFAB

An Associated Press report from Washington state that a group of house liberals—those with third party inclinations—have been invited to a conference today to discuss what their invitation describes as a "growing demand for a national political realignment."

Those who received invitations, issued over the signatures of Representatives Lundeen (FL-Minn) and Amlie (P-Wis) were told "no publicity will attend the meeting," and asked to "keep it confidential."

Amlie said the meeting was merely for the purpose of "general discussion" and asserted it had significance as a move toward organizing a national third party.

FORTY FREE JOBS AGENCIES PROPOSED

Establishment of a state-wide system of 40 free employment agencies was approved by the house public welfare committee Monday. They are designed to replace 90 reemployment agencies which the federal government is eliminating. Frank Starkey of the state industrial commission told the committee. The house appropriations committee is considering a bili which would provide $160,000 for his work during the next two years. The present law authorizes operation of only five state employment agencies. The new system would co-pperate with relief agencies and would provide machinery for administration of unemployment insurance when that is created, said Mr. Starkey.

Funeral Services Are Held For Louis M. Olson Tues.

Funeral services were held April 9 at the Erickson and Lund Funeral home for Louis M. Olson, who died April 8 at a local hospital. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad conducted the service and interment was made in Oak Ridge cemetery. He was 83 years of age at the time of his death.

Louis Olson was born December 29, 1851 in Smaaland, Sweden. In 1878 he was married to Louise Swanson. He came from Sweden to Watertown, Minn., in 18880 and in 1885 moved to Minneapolis. Six years later he moved to a farm in Pennington county and in 1902 came to this city where he has lived since.

Surviving him are three sons, Arvid, John and Elmer all of Baudette, Minn., and one daughter, Mrs. Olga Sandstrom of Minneapolis. Also one brother, John, of this city and 19 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. His wife, one daughter, three sons and his parents have preceded him in death.

25 Parcels of Land Sold At State Land Sale Mon.

At the annual sale of state lands held in this city Monday morning, Mr. Fowler, county auditor, reported that there were twenty-five parcels of land sold. All lands sold were in Black River, Nummedahl and Sanders townships and prices for the land ranged from six to twelve dollars per acre, the auditor stated.

Hank—Has repeal balanced the national budget?

Frank—Yes, just like too much whisky balances the drinker's gait.

Public Works Pro. Gets O.K. of WPA

stated, is a result of much public sentiment which has been expressed favoring the restoration of the ground water levels. This project, it was stated, calls for a dyke 15 miles miles long with approximately one mile of spillways and the labor for the project will be taken from all the adjoining counties as well as from the one in which the project will be in operation, namely Marshal county.

Mr. Henet, resident of this city, told the group that he was sure some form of social legislation would be passed by the present congress but that it was unlikely that it would be in the form of any of the present proposed plans. He stated, emphatically, that the sooner people realize that this is not "just another economic depression," but an "industrial revoltuion" the sooner would we find ourselves in an era of undreamed prosperity. Mr. Forsberg further criticized the destruction of natural resources by "profit blind human beings."

The Townsend plan for old age pensions was brought up at the meeting as a sound basis for the curing of all economic ills by Mr. Frank Dudley. In his plea for the support of the WPA for this bill he stated that if the Plan went into effect that 16,000,000 people would be given jobs within a few months. R. M. Aalbu atempted to show the fallacy of the plan by showing how the money would be collected for these payments by a sales tax, and demonstrated how the profits taken by the owners of industry and the 2 per cent, would stop the pension from "revolving."

Mr. Algot Johnson, in discussing an adequate measure for relief of the needy, brought up the plan, considered by many as the most sensible plan for public works, whereby the municipality is authorized to issue non-interest bearing script (or money) to be used as a medium of exchange in the city and to be worth their face value on all debts; this script to be backed by all taxable property in the community.

Resolutions were adopted favoring any project whereby the Red Lake River and Red Lake could be restored to normal. Another resolution favoring the Water Control bill which is now in the state legislature. This bill, Mr. Quist stated, would give the state the legal authority to stop water run-off, which it does not now have, under the present laws.

Rinkel Named Mayor

O. C. Paulson, chairman of the Auto Show committee, appeared before the council in behalf of the committee and thanked the body for their co-operation in making the exposition a success. He suggested to the body that a portable check-room be installed because of the congestion, which always occurred when the council rooms were used, around the doors to the main entrance and exit. This portable check-room could be set up on the main floor of the building and stored away when not in use, Mr. Paulson said. The matter was referred to the Building committee. Mr. Paulson also gave a report of the meeting of the Park Board, stating that Ole Ryan had been re-appointed caretaker and that they recommended that he receive $75 per month instead of the $70 that he received in the past. The report was approved by the body.

Other business of the council at the meeting was the granting of a building permit to Wm. Parbst, to remodel his dwelling; a resolution from the WPA was read and placed on file regarding the city trying to obtain monies for public works. A bill from Bert Norby, contractor for the building of the auditorium, was deferred to a later meeting. The amount was $250 which has been withheld because of a crack in the front steps of the building that the council wanted to watch during the winter. The third and final reading of the amendment changing the frequency of council meetings was heard and placed on passage. The result is that there will be only one meeting of the city council each month after this month and that meeting will be held the second Tuesday of each month. The city attorney, Theo. Quale, stated that payment for the lots the city acquired through condemnation should be made as soon as possible.

Mud Lake Land Condemned

offered and accepted by the federal government was the highest price the government would pay.

"Completion of the project will hinge on whether or not the lands can be acquired for a price which can be paid by the federal government. The lands must be acquired for the amount set aside by the federal government which includes all costs of acquisition. If this cannot be accomplished, the Conservation Department may be compelled to dismiss the proceedings at any time it finds that it cannot proceed under the limitations described in the act and at the same time fulfill its obligations to the federal government. It must be remembered that not one dollar of state funds will be expended."

"Local cooperation more than any other one factor is necessary to make the Mud Lake project a success. It is important that sportsmen and wild life conservationists give the enterprise their enthusiastic support."

To Legionaires of Post 117

I wish to take these means of expressing my sincere appreciation in your presentation to me of the winning prize at the Auto Show last Saturday evening. I could hardly believe that I was the recipient of such a grand prize until it was actually turned over to me. Again I thank you.

Respectfully,
L. E. PETERSON,

NAZI REGIME SUBJECTS CHILDREN TO ARMY TRAINING

Berlin (TIS)—The extent to which military aviation training has progressed in Germany is revealed in the following statement published by the Berlin daily "Nachtausgabe":

"The aerial warfare training of the youngsters of the 'Hitler Youth' has made satisfactory progress during the past year. 59,200 Hitler boys and 35,150 members of the League of German Girls have been trained in civilian air protection during 1934. 288 protection cellars against aerial attacks have been built by them. The naval section of the 'Hitler Youth' was also kept busy at their special tasks."

$4,800,000,000 Works and Relief Bill Passes House and Senate Friday, April 5

By Harold C. Hagen

As expected the $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill was passed in the House and Senate in final form last Friday, the conference report being accepted. The forming of the organization for the giant program, which calls for the largest expenditures during peace time for any country in the world's history, has already started with President Roosevelt at the head, assisted by Harry L. Hopkins, FERA administrator; Rexford G. Tugwell, undersecretary of Agriculture; Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes and others.

The Senate vote on the final passage of the measure was 66 to 13 with Sen. Schall opposing and Sen. Shipstead paired in favor of the bill. The House vote was 317 to 70 with all the Minnesota Republicans voting against adoption while the three Farmer-Laborite, Buckler, Lundeen and Kvale voted with Ryan, Democrat, in favor of the measure. The appropriation, $4,000,000,000 for public works and $800,000,000 for relief, is immediately available and to remain available until exhausted or until June 30, 1937.

The works fund is divided into four main divisions covering:

Highways and grade crossing elimination, 800 million dollars; rural rehabilitation and relief in stricken agricultural areas, water conservation, transmountain water diversion, irrigation and reclamation, 500 mililon.

Rural electrification, 100 million; housing, 450 millions; four projects for professional and clerical persons, 300 millions; civilian conservation million.

Loans or grants for projects of States and municipalities or agencies thereof, where, in the determination of the President, not less than 25 per cent of the loan or grant is to be spent for work under such project, 900 million dollars.

Sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, prevention of stream pollution, sea coast erosion, reforestation, flood control and miscellaneous projects, 350 million dollars.

R. R. & W. ASKS THAT TEL. COS PAY APPRAISAL

Knud Wefald Explains Bills to Sen. Com. on Telephone

Hon. Knute Wefald, state railroad and warehouse commissioner, explained the Commission's stand relative to Senate File 960, which deals with physical conditions between rural telephone companies and the switching exchange, and stated that there could be no valid opposition to the bill once the facts were made known.

It is granted, Mr. Wefald said, that the exchange facilities are of great value to the farmers and that the telephone companies should be properly compensated for this service, but it should not be forgoten that farm lines are also a great asset to the telephone companies, because it serves every business man in the town who is a customer of the telephone company as well as all the other customers of the company.

From hearings held by the commission in switching rate cases it often appears that the farmers call the business men very seldom and the business men call the farmers twenty to thirty times oftener than the farmers call them, it was brought out in Mr. Wefald's statement. This bill being asked for by the Commission proposes that in a rate case, due consideration be given to the exchange company as well as the value of this company, it was stated in Wefald's address to the Telephone and Telegraph Committee of the Minnesota Senate.

Another bill taken to the Tel. and Telegraph committee and explained by Knud Wefald was Senate File 702 in which it is asked that burden of proof as to the reasonableness of their rates and the justification of their whole set-up be shifted from the state to the telephone company, for which the investigation is being made. A similar provision is in effect in several of the states in the Union and it is expected that in a very short time it would be in effect in every state, Mr. Wefald said. This bill would effect only the two large telephone companies in the state, namely the Tri-State and the Northwestern Bell Telephone companies, according to the commissioner's report.

It was stated that the cost to the state for appraisals was much larger than it should be to discourage appraisals by the state, but if this expense had to be carried by the telephone companies cheaper and more efficient service could be had, when Mr. Wefald spoke in behalf of the proposed bill.

In the "old saloon days," the Chicago Tribune said, editorially: "If the veritable narrative of the American saloon were ever written it would make the decadence of Rome look like an age of pristine purity in comparison. If these men have not made a practise of committing murder and arson it is because these crimes did not seem immediately profitable."

LUNDEEN ASKS SOLONS TO THIRD PARTY CONFAB

An Associated Press report from Washington state that a group of house liberals—those with third party inclinations—have been invited to a conference today to discuss what their invitation describes as a "growing demand for a national political realignment."

Those who received invitations, issued over the signatures of Representatives Lundeen (FL-Minn) and Amlie (P-Wis) were told "no publicity will attend the meeting," and asked to "keep it confidential."

Amlie said the meeting was merely for the purpose of "general discussion" and asserted it had significance as a move toward organizing a national third party.

FORTY FREE JOBS AGENCIES PROPOSED

Establishment of a state-wide system of 40 free employment agencies was approved by the house public welfare committee Monday. They are designed to replace 90 reemployment agencies which the federal government is eliminating. Frank Starkey of the state industrial commission told the committee. The house appropriations committee is considering a bill which would provide $160,000 for his work during the next two years. The present law authorizes operation of only five state employment agencies. The new system would co-operate with relief agencies and would provide machinery for administration of unemployment insurance when that is created, said Mr. Starkey.

Funeral Services Are Held For Louis M. Olson Tues.

Funeral services were held April 9 at the Erickson and Lund Funeral home for Louis M. Olson, who died April 8 at a local hospital. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad conducted the service and interment was made in Oak Ridge cemetery. He was 83 years of age at the time of his death.

Louis Olson was born December 29, 1851 in Smaaland, Sweden. In 1878 he was married to Louise Swanson. He came from Sweden to Watertown, Minn., in 18880 and in 1885 moved to Minneapolis. Six years later he moved to a farm in Pennington county and in 1902 came to this city where he has lived since.

Surviving him are three sons, Arvid, John and Elmer all of Baudette, Minn., and one daughter, Mrs. Olga Sandstrom of Minneapolis. Also one brother, John, of this city and 19 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. His wife, one daughter, three sons and his parents have preceded him in death.

T. MONTGOMERY AND E. A. COOKE ADDRESS W.P.A.

Fr. Montgomery Speaks On Christianity As Opposed To Socialism

JUSTICE TO LABOR, AIM

Rev. Cooke Says That Capital Gets More Than Share Of Wealth

Increasing interest is manifested in the open forums conducted by the Workmen's Protective association every Monday evening with an increasing attendance by business and professional men of the city.

On Monday evening addresses were delivered by Father Montgomery and by Dr. E. A. Cooke, both of this city. In his speech, Father Montgomery traced the history of the machine age and stated that the machine had become the ruling power, not thru any will of its own, but through unscrupulous use by man. Man uses the machine for his own gains, he said, and forgets about the man whom the machine displaces. Men have come to recognize only the law of supply and demand which has made the rich richer and the poor poorer, he said. They have forgotten the teachings of christianity. By increasing the efficiency of the machine they have increased the supply and cut off the demand.

This overwhelming problem of unemployment we have today is not the fault of the machine, but of the misuse of the profit system, he stated. We must take the surplus out of the manufacturers' hands, give it to the workers and divide the work amongst all the workers so they can work at a just wage. This is not Socialism, this is Christianity, he asserted.

The laborer is not the only one that is sweating, Dr. Cooke stated in his talk; we are all sweating. Capitalists are sweating and must prepare to do something drastic "or else," as one man in a late convention stated, "they'll face hot lead and cold steel. Not by Communists or Fascists, but by men who are hungry," Dr. Cooke said. He cited a factory in Detroit that manufactured auto chassis. This firm employed two thousand men, but thru the inventive genius of some men they were able to cut their labor in half. Later they were able to cut this number still more. Eventually out of the two thousand men originally employed they had discharged nineteen hundred. So it is the capitalists that need the education, Dr. Cooke stated, that it is to their benefit that a redistribution of profits to the workers is made for the continuation of this system. The open road is Christianity, he stated, but there are surprisingly few who follow this doctrine.

President Roosevelt's recovery program cannot be carried on forever on borrowed money, Dr. Cooke stated, for while some can become prosperous on borrowed money, someone will eventually have to pay the debt. Uncle Sam is getting poorer and the capitalist is getting richer, he said. And the only solution would seem to be thru a distribution of profits spread directly to the worker and not around through the government.

A resolution which in effect supports the stand taken by Governor Olson in regard to the Omnibus Tax Bill was passed and sent to the representatives in the legislature from this district.

County Auditor F. L. Fowler spoke on questions of relief and public work. He cited from a chart the abnormally high engineering cost entailed with the public and SERA work. He stated that under a contemplated reorganization of the federal emergency relief administration much of the top-heavy office overhead will be done away with and that there will be a possibility of more of the funds going to the relief client. Speaking about the diversion of the Big and Little Fork River into Red Lake, which has come in for a great deal of discussion in this district during the past months, he stated that it is impractical and will run into international difficulties because it would divert international waters. He stated it is his opinion that the WPA has made an eror in backing this project with a resolution.

Quite an extensive discussion on social security legislation took up the rest of the meeting.

The next meeting will be held on Monday evening, Chairman William Douville, stated, and he urges the public to attend.

FARWELL MAN BUYS THE STRANDQUIST CREAMERY

Ole Nyflot, who operates a creamery at Farwell, Minnesota, closed a deal last Thursday afternoon in Newfolden, whereby he is now the owner of the Strandquist Creamery. The Strandquist Creamery was purchased from Gunsten Gunstenson and will be operated by the new owner after June first.

Change Schedule On Northbound G.N. Train

The Great Northern Railroad announced today a change in schedule of the north-bound train out of this city beginning Monday. The train which formerly was due in Thief River Falls at 12:16 p. m. will now be due out of the city at 10:01 a. m. The southbound train will remain on the same schedule, arriving here at 6:58 p. m., it was stated.

Black Amber Cane Seed to Be Distributed to Farmers

Walter H. Quist announced today that the State Game and Fish Department has approximately 200 pounds of black amber cane seed for distribution to the farmers of Pennington county. This seed will be turned over to the farmers who are willing to do this planting and to handle it as they would their own fodder. All that is asked, Mr. Quist said, is that the farmers cut and shock this cane crop in the fall of the year and leave it standing in the shock during the winter until the snow leaves the ground. The purpose of this is to give game birds a place to feed during periods of deep snow, after which farmers can use the cane for cattle feed. The farmers can use up to five per cent for silage purposes, Mr. Quist stated.

Instructions for the planting of this seed will be inclosed in each package of seed shipped. Up to ten pounds will be given to any farmer wishing to plant the cane, Mr. Quist said, an dfarmers wishing secure seed may do so by, calling him.

$6 ENTRANCE FEE FOR SOFT BALL LEAGUE

Eight Local Business Places To Enter Teams in League This Year

TO SET UP PROTEST BOARD

Three Men to Arbitrate All Disputes Arising From Games

A meeting of people interested in forming a kittenball league in the city was held Monday evening in the Civic and Commerce rooms of the Auditorium for the purpose of discussing the set-up for the coming season. Certain difficulties which arose last year were discussed and plans were advanced whereby these difficulties could be eliminated in the future.

A protest board of three men was decided on and names were suggested for men to serve on this board; the names were not made known as to members of the the board at this meeting. All protests will be aired before this group in the future instead of trying to settle these arguments on the diamond, Mr. Messenger stated. The decision of the board will be final and it was agreed by managers of the teams, who were present, that this was the popular procedure.

Benediction.

WHEAT RULING EXPLAINED BY ANDREW BOSS

New Ruling of A A A Lifts Part of Restrictions For 1935

Explanation of a new ruling of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, which partially lifts the restrictions for 1935 of the wheat adjustment contract, was contained in a letter received by County Agent R. M. Douglass last week from Andrew Boss, state director of AAA programs, University Farm, St. Paul.

The new ruling, Mr. Douglass points out, applies only to the farms of contract signers who will agree to reduce their 1936 wheat acreage by the amount of their 1935 acreage increase, if an adjustment program for 1936 should be offered. It does not in any way lessen the restriction on farms operated by contract signers but which are not covered by contracts.

"Planting in 1935 is limited to 90 per cent of the acreage base plus 74 per cent," Mr. Boss's letter reads. "This means that the total maximum planting for 1935

PATROL URGES MORE CARE BY SCHOOL BUS DRIVERS

Members of the state highway patrol have reeceived several reports recently of Minnesota school bus drivers failing to stop their vehicles at railroad crossings, J. P. Arnoldy, patrol chief, announced this week.

"The Maryland disaster where fourteen children were killed because their bus driver drove in front of a train should serve as fresh warning to all school authorities to see that their bus drivers strictly observe the regulations for full stops at grade crossings," Arnoldy said.

MR. AND MRS. H. BRUMMOND RETURN FROM FLORIDA

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Brummond returned Saturday after a two months visit in Palm Beach, Florida. On their return they visited Washington, D. C., and heard Congressman Theodore Christianson and Senator Huey Long speak.

STEER BRINGS $133.00

A Holstein steer that was shipped through the Thief River Falls Shipping Association last week to South St. Paul brought the owner $133.00, according to the managers, the Nelson Brothers.

H.J.Wood Given Decision By Judge Brattland, Fri.

A decision on the case of H. J. Wood vs. Geo. Brossoit and Phil Doucet was handed down by Judge M. A. Brattland in favor of the plaintiff late last week. It was contended by Mr. Wood that he had some hay wrongly placed in the car of the defendants, and on hearing the case Judge Brattland granted the plaintiff $100.38 and costs. The next adjourned session of court is set for Friday, April 26th in the Pennington county court house.

Wagner-Lewis Bill Killed in Committee

After a storm of protests against the Wagner-Lewis Bill lasting for many weeks, the House Ways and Means Committee this week definitely decided not to report the bill out. The Wagner-Lewis Bill was dropped. A similar storm of protests against a proposed Gag Rule under which the Wagner-Lewis Bill would come before the House, resulted in a trick rule under which the Administration Social Security Bill is to be considered, a rule which will in all probability prevent any rollcall in the House on either the Lundeen Social Insurance Bill or the Townsend Bill.

As it now stands, a new measure, the Doughton bill, H. R. 7260, has been reported out under a rule which will permit amendments from the floor. Whether or not an amendment in the form of a substitution of the Lundeen Workers Bill or the Townsend Bill will be held by the Speaker to be Germane remains to be seen. At any rate, the social security debates now going on in the House of Representatives are probably the most exciting and spirited of any debates held this session. Congressman R. T. Buckler, new Farm-Labor member of the House, has indicated that he will support both the Lundeen and the Townsend Bills if a vote on these measures is permitted. He will vote for the Doughton Bill if the Lundeen and Townsend plans are defeated this session, although his preference is for a more liberal measure.

Rivers, and Harbors Project Committee Meets April 30th

According to a bulletin received this morning from the National Rivers and Harbors Association, the Project Committee of the Congress will meet from April 30th to May 1st in Washington, D. C.

Projects to be considered by the committee are: The Roseau River Flood Control Project; Red Lake River Water Conservation Project; Ottertail-Pelican River Water Conservation Project; Maple Lake Water Level Restoration Project; Warroad Harbor, Lake of the Woods, Project; Lake Bemidji Water Restoration Project; and Minneapolis Harbor Project. Others in the Upper Mississippi River basin are to be considered also.

The Congress will meet in the Mayflower Hotel in Washington May second and third, and one of the largest conventions in the organization's history is expected to be held, according to the bulletin.

Wheat Growers To Ballot On New AAA Prog.

Minnesota Wheat growers will have an opportunity May 25 to vote on the question of whether or not the present wheat adjustment program, with slight modifications, shall be continued from the end of the present crop year through 1939.

Notice of this referendum, in which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will seek to learn the growers' wishes, was received late last week by W. C. Coffey, dean of the University Department of Agriculture and acting extension director, University Farm, St. Paul, in a message from C. W. Warburton, extension director of the United State Department of Agriculture.

The future program, if adopted, would be virtually the same as the one now in effect, except that the Secretary of Agriculture would be authorized to acquire an acreage reduction as high as 25 per cent, instead of 20 per cent, as in the present contract. The reduction requirements, however, would be varied from year to year with 25 per cent as the upper limit, as supply and demand conditions would appear to warrant.

More emphasis would also be placed on shifting wheat land to grass in the dust-strom areas than has been given under the present program.

The rate of benefit payments and conditions under which these payments would be made would also be determined each year, the message reads. The base period used in determining each grower's allotment would remain the same as under the present contract and the local administrative work would be handled, as in the past, by committees of contract signers.

No definite information is yet available as to how the vote will be taken, but it is expected that community meetings will be held, as in last fall's corn-hog referendum, at which growers may cast their ballots for or against the proposed program.

Intoxicated Man Hits Light Pole, Arrested

After having ran his car over a culvert and mowing down an electric light pole ten inches in diameter on the east side of the river last Sunday evening, Geo. Snyder, an out-of-town man, was finally halted. He was arrested by local police and charged with driving while intoxicated. The case was heard in Municipal court Monday morning and the man was bound over to the District Court with the bond set at $500.

Saturday evening L. A. Nelson, of Smiley, was arrested by local police after having ran into a car parked on the left side of the street, in respect to the direction Mr. Nelson was driving. He was arraigned in Municipal Court Monday and charged with reckless driving; he was fined ten dollars.

Union Head Slugged At Albert Lea, Minn.

Albert Lea, Minn., April 16.—Frank Ellis, national business manager and organizer for the Independent Union of All Workers with headquarters at Austin, Minn., was "taken for a ride" early today by a man who attacked him with a pistol at his home near Austin.

Ellis was beaten severely on the face and head before being dumped in his car and hauled around for nearly two hours. He is now in a hospital at Albert Lea.

Mr. Ellis said that his attacker threatened to shoot him "full of holes." He grappled with his assailant, but a hard blow to the head sent him to the ground unconscious. The next he remembered was that he was being bound and gagged with heavy strips of cloth.

Examination disclosed that Ellis had apparently suffered no broken bones.

DIVERSION OF RAINEY RIVER NOT FEASIBLE

E. V. Willard, Conservation Head, Says Plan Would Take Too Long

PLAN FLOOD CONTROL

Conservation of Spring Flood Waters Held Better Plan By Federal Govt.

In a letter from E. V. Willard, Minnesota Conservation Commissioner, to W. J. Kirkwood, mayor of Crookston, which was a reply to a resolution sent to him by the Red Lake evelopment Association, it was stated that the plan of diverting waters from the Rainy River water shed was impractical. This plan was being recommended to the group by H. I. Frisbie, formerly 3rd district engineer for the SERA.

The communication stated that a project to restore Red Lake and conserve its waters has been approved by the Rivers and Harbors Congress and that a feasible plan has been presented. Surveys, giving all necessary data for this project, have long been completed by the U. S. Geological Survery and further work along this line was stated to be a waste of energy and money.

Mr. Willard stated in his letter that international complications would arise if any attempt was made to divert waters from the Rainey River shed into the interior of the United States and that it would take a long time to get this particular project through. The other plan, submitted by the Rivers and Harbors Congress, indicates a plan to conserve flood waters rather than to divert waters from other sources into Red Lake. According to the letter this would be wholly a federal project and all funds necessary for its completion would be furnished by the government, and it was advised by Mr. Willard that cities interested in conserving Red Lake and restoring its level should put every effort behind this plan.

The letter stated that Mr. Willard had at one time discussed both these plans with Mr. Frisbie and the Rapid River Diversion project was set aside as being too difficult to put through.

Auto License Bill Repassed Tuesday

Charges by spokesmen for the Farmer-Labor minority that political reasons prompted the senate to withhold funds from the state highway department, failed to move a majority of members of the Minnesota house of representatives Monday night and after extended debate the controversial motor vehicle license bill was repassed again by a vote of 85 to 19. The Governor signed this bill late Wednesday.

As amended by the joint house and senate conference committee, the measure now returns the 1933-34 minimum of $7.50 and $5 on class A and B pasenger cars and the 1933-34 rate for class T trucks but provides a 2.2 per cent base rate. This base rate in 1932 was 2.4 per cent. The depreciation rate for the second year is 10 per cent and for the third and succeeding years 15 per cent.

The final date for payment of 1935 Auto License fees has been set for May first with no further postponement likely.

May Day Proclaimed Child Health Day By The President

The President of the United States, by Act of Congress, has again proclaimed May Day as

CHILD HEALTH DAY

Good health among the people of our State was never more desirable than it is today.

The slogan for Child Health Day this year is "IMMUNIZE NOW—Stamp Out Diptheria." It should call the attention of all citizens to the value of positive protection for their children against diptheria and smallpox.

As Governor of the State, I urge all the people of Minesota to cooperate with the Minnesota Department of Health, and other agencies, in the active observance of this day.

FLOYD B. OLSON,
Governor of Minnesota.

April 15, 1933.

CLEAN-UP OF AD SIGNS ORDERED ON HIGHWAYS

A spring clean-up of advertising signs illegally placed on trunk highway right-of-ways has been ordered by the state department. All district maintenance engineers have been instructed to make a special check of signs along the roads in their territories and remove those which encroach on highway property.

Public Invited to F-L Club Meet Fri. Night

The truth on how W. E. Day's seat in the Minnesota legislature was stolen will be the main subject discussed at the regular monthly meeting of the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor Club to be held in the courthouse Friday evening April 19, at eight o'clock. Mr. Day, accompanied by Mr. Lewis and Mr. Prestemoe, Mr. Day's attorney in the contest and one of the ballot inspectors respectively, all of Bagley, will tell the group how the mandate of the people was disregarded by the lower house in the legislature.

A special program of music has been arranged for this meeting and several selections will be given. All members of the local club as well as members of the County Association, and the general public are invited to attend, A. G. Anderson, chairman of the club announced.

$5,679.88 Spent In County For Relief During Past Month

For the fiscal month ending March 25th the Pennington County Relief Worker, Mrs. T. King, reported a total of 225 cases in Pennington county. The total amount of money spent for relief by this office was $5679.88 for clothing, housing, food, etc. Leather coats for men, women and children were furnished by this office as well as meat, butter, rice, cheese and other food items.

Mrs. King stated that seventeen boys from Pennington county registered for the CCC work and were transported to Warren Monday in Federal trucks to take the examinations. Pennington county's quota at this time was thirty men yet up to the thirteenth of the month which was the last day to register for service only seventeen had turned in their names for consideration, Mrs. King said. Of this number those accepted have not been made known at this time, it was said.

Former SERA Engineer Replaced by A. F. Benson of The Second District

H. I. Frisbie, formerly third district SERA engineer, was removed from the payroll of the SERA in the genreal shake-up which occurred early this week. A. F. Benson, second district SERA engineer, has been temporarily put in charge of this office until further arrangements can be made. Mr. Benson has the second district office at Grand Rapids, Minnesota, and the whole set-up in this district is reported to be very indefinite.

SURVEY SHOWS FARM GAIN IN PENN. COUNTY

North Twp. Has Largest Gain With 59 Homesteads; 3 Towns Lose

Pennington County has a little more than two hundred more farms in 1935 than it had in 1930, according to the preliminary announcement sent out by C. W. Bouvette, supervisor of the Agricultural Census for the Ninth District. The totals are 1,304 in 1935 as compared with 1,100 in 1930.

The number of farms in each township is as follows:

	1935	1930
Black River	40	33
Bray	32	29
Cloverleaf	36	24
Deer Park	56	60
Goodridge Township	20	21

T. J. WELSH TRANSFERRED BACK TO CITY

T. J. Welsh of the Minnesota Conservation Department who was located in this city last summer, and was transferred last fall, has been re-located in this city. His office will be in the Dobner-Meighan Block, sharing the space occupied by the Shaw Land Agency.

CITY ELECTRIC RATESCHEDULE AVERAGES LOW

Power and Heat Rate is Low But Light Somewhat High

'DEMAND' CHARGE IN OTHER CITIES CITED

New District Engineer Will Assign Men to Water-Main Project

Rate revision came in for the major part of the discussion at a special meeting of the city council on Monday evening. The charge which has been made in another local paper that the rates are too high was found to be unfounded from data gathered by some of the councilmen and members of the Civic and Commerce committee which has been looking into the matter. Alderman McFarland stated that a comparison of rates as of other cities of the same approximate size as Thief River Falls and with substantially the same kind of power equipment showed that electric power users in this city are getting a lower rate and that those who use both power and light enjoy about the same rates as users in other towns. Only those who use lights alone are discriminated against in any way. Mr. McFarland stated. The fact that in other cities a "demand" charge is made in addition to the kilowat hours used by power patrons reacts to favor local power and heat users, he said. A joint meeting of the council and the C and C rate committee will be held on Tuesday evening, April 24, to go into the matter further.

The matter of purchasing another Diesel unit for the plant also came in for some discussion, it being the concensus of opinion that another engine will have to be added in the near future. The councilmen apparently favor submitting the matter to the voters. It seemed to be generally agreed that any revision in the rate structure should also be submitted to a vote of the people.

Gilbert Fabrick, of the SERA district engineer's office, appeared before the council and showed a letter from the SERA authorities at St. Paul to the effect that projects contemplated must have the approval of the district engineer before men can be assigned to them. He stated that Mr. Frisbie, the district engineer, has informed him that he will not approve any more projects until the city has disposed of the outstanding bills which were accumulated during the canalizing of the Red Lake River last fall. Alderman McFarland insisted that Mr. Frisbie exceeded the authority granted by the council when he incurred these bills and opposes payment. Seconded by Alderman Knight he demanded a letter from Mr. Fabrick to the effect that Frisbie has refused to assign men to local projects until these bills are paid. Mr. Fabrick pointed out that watermain projects on the east side can be started as soon as men are assigned to them. A letter was directed to SERA, administrator Zimmerman at St. Paul calling his attention to the dispute between Frisbie and the council and requesting that men be assigned to the watermain project at once.

Later developments have brought out the fact that Mr. Frisbie has been transfered to St. Paul and that a new engineer has been assigned to this district. Questioned about the watermain project on Wednesday, Mr. Myhrom, president of the council stated that the new engineer has signified his intention of assigning men to the watermain projects without waiting for the dispute on the outstanding bills to be adjusted.

"Putter Shop" Opened In Rink Warming House

Wiht the passing of the skating and hockey seasons the warming house at the skating rink has been out of use for the past few weeks until Mr. Messenger, director of leisure time projects for this region, decided to open a shop in the building.

Boys of the fourth, fifth and sixth grades are now gathering every day during the week and making use of the shop, which is called the "Putter Shop." These boys, about twenty in number at the present time, are busily engaged in the making of boats, kites, aeroplanes, etc., Mr. Messenger said. Any kind of small project may be undertaken in the shop that the boys may care to try and will be carried on under the supervision of the director. Boys wishing to take part in the "Putter Shop" activities are asked to get in touch with Mr. Messenger.

Committees on Better Rural Housing Set Up In All States Complete

Washington, D. C., April 17—Special advisory committees in every State are now actively engaged in explaining the Better Housing Program of the Federal Housing Administration to the farmers of the country, the Administration announced today. North Dakota and Montana completed the roster, field representatives of the Farm Section reporting that committees in these states had just been organized.

Practically every element in each State interested in improvement of farm conditions is represented on these State Advisory Rural Better Housing Committees it was stated. Analysis of the personnel of these committees showed 47 agricultural engineers, 47 directors or supervisors of vocational education, 44 extension service directors, 38 home demonstration agents and a large representation of farmers unions, granges, cooperatives, State federations of women's clubs, State agricultural commissions, relief commissions, editorial associations, bank associations, chambers of commerce and Federal Housing Administration officials.

These state-wide committees aid in the organization of rural Better Housing Committees and in the education of the people in these counties, as to the aims of the Federal Housing Administration's program, as was stated. Farm Building Days and Farm Improvement Days have been held or are being planned for hundreds of counties in every section of the country, the reports of the farm field representatives show.

The urgent need for improvement of farm conditions, especially of the farm home, is revealed in a rural housing survey og 17,981 Indiana farm homes by the Department of Agriculture Extension of Purdue University, report of which was made to the Administration.

In this survey it was shown that 95 per cent of the homes need a safe method of sewage disposal, 55 per cent need paint, 41 per cent need more adequate screening, 31 per cent need major repairs or replacement, 28 per cent need foundation repairs, 25 per cent need more closet space and 14 per cent have no kitchen sinks.

Under the Better Housing Program, the farmers of the country can obtain modernization credit from banks of other lending institutions for repair, alteration or improvement of their properties and for home or farm equipment which is permanently installed. The maximum credit which can be extended for modernization is $2,000 for each property, at the discretion of the lending institution, which is insured by the Federal Hausing Administration against loss up to 20 per cent of its total modernization credits. As losses on this character of credit are less than 3 per cent, this is regarded as practically an absolute guarantee against loss.

BEMIDJI HANGAR PROJECT OUTLINED

The $50,000 airplane hangar approved for the city of Bemidji by the Minnesota SERA as a work relief project will give employment to about 150 men over a period of nine months, and will equip the city with one of the most complete structures of its kind in the state.

Field rock is to be used exclusively for the sidewalls, 96 feet in length, and the roof will form one large expanse of logs, unsupported by pillars inside the hangar. To provide an economical source for the great quantity of lumber needed, the city bought stumpage nearby and put crews to work cutting it into logs with the aid of a portable mill.

Supreme Court Denies Right to Sell Liquor

By W. G. Calderwood

Mr. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., Federal Alcohol Control Commissioner, recently reminded the liquor interests that the industry has no natural rights, but is permitted to exist only by the grace of the law which provides that under certain circumstances, there has been granted to it a tentative privilege of existence.

"There is a fundamental difficulty," said Mr. Choate, "that some of us sometimes forget. The liquor business is not like other businesses. The entrance into the liquor business in this country is treated as a privilege and not as a right. Sooner or later restrictions must be imposed upon it and my feeling is that the liquor industry better make the best of the situation it now has lest it get something worse."

The truth of which Mr. Choate reminds the liquor dealers has been stated by the United States Supreme Court in numerous decisions and, directly or indirectly, has been repeated by the Supreme Courts of many of the states. "To keep a saloon for the sale of intoxicating liquor is not a natural right to pursue an ordinary calling; there is no inherent right in a citizen thus to sell intoxicating liquor by retail. It it not a privilege of a citizen of a state nor of the U. S.," are the exact words of a decision of the United States Supreme Court handed down nearly half a century ago. The same court in the same decision said: "As it is a business attended with danger to the community, it may, as already said, be entirely prohibited."

Mr. Choate's warning is clearly intended to remind the liquor industry that it has no natural claim upon the protection of the law but that its continuance sangs on the sufferance of the people and that, therefore, its life depends chiefly on its own good behavior.

Northwest School Will Sponsor Short Courses Thruout Month of June

Northwest School officials have announced a series of regional short courses to be held on the campus during June. The week of June 3-9 has been set aside for a Young People's interdenominational conference for church seniors and young people of the Red River Valley. This conference will be held under the direction of the Minnesota Federation of Churches.

June 10-13 has been designated Women's Camp Week. This will be the tenth annual women's short course and will include a series of lectures and demonstrations dealing with the home together with an attractive recreation program.

In arranging the Junior Short course which will be held the following week, it has been decided to hold two separate meetings, one for northern counties and the other for southern Red River Valley counties. This has been made necessary due to the rapid increase in enrolment during recent years. Last year with nearly 1200 students in attendance, the facilities of the school were taxed far beyond capacity. By holding one short course June 17-19, and a second group June 20-22, the lecture and demonstration work can be handled with greater efficiency.

Another special event of the month will be the annual summer reunion of Northwest School Alumni which has been scheduled for Saturday, June 29. With the steady increase in number of graduates, the summer reunion has become one of the more important events of the vacation period.

All who wish to reserve rooms for the school dormitories for the June Short Courses are advised to communicate with the Northwest School at Crookston.

Federal Land Bank Will Reduce Interest Rate to 4½ Percent on April 10

Interest rates on all federal land bank loans made after April 10 will be 4¼ per cent, the lowest rate at which farm mortgage loans have been made since the establishment of the land bank 18 years ago.

This announcement was made today by President Roy A. Nelson of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul who said that the same rate goes into effect simultaneously throughout the United States. This is the second reduction in the interest rate on land bank loans made within three weeks, the rate of 4½ per cent having been announced March 25.

The new low rate applies to loans made through National Farm Loan associations, but not to commissioner loans which will continue at 5 per cent as they have ever since establishment of the comissioner loans. Loans made direct by the Federal Land Bank to former borrowers will also enjoy a reduction, and hereafter will be at 4¾ per cent. Direct loans bear interest at ½ of 1 per cent above the association loan rate.

"It is significant," said Mr. Nelson, "that the bond issue which was oversubscribed April 8 was an issue of consolidated federal land bank bonds which do not carry a government guarantee either as to interest or principal. These bonds rest on the earning capacity and the soundness of the land banks alone, and it is a testimonial to the confidence of the public in the farm situation and the banks that these bonds were so quickly and eagerly absorbed by investors.

Willard Raps Kaupanger For Charges Against CCC

Setting forth facts and reasons why he believes that no "hasty action or hasty conclusions" should come out of charges by O. L. Kaupanger that CCC activities in Minnesota are destroying our game life and wilderness, E. V. Willard, commissioner of conservation, dispatched a letter last week to the Minnesota delegation in Congress which declared that no facts have been presented to substantiate the allegations.

The commissioner stated that Kaupanger, paid secretary of the Izaak Walton League in Minnesota, had never communicated his alleged findings to the State Department of Conservation or to federal officials in charge of CCC activities. Mr. Willard made clear that his department had no jurisdiction over CCC camps outside the boundaries of the state forests. The civilizing of the wilderness to which Mr. Kaupanger refers, he said, is happening in the area under the federal Quetico-Superior council.

In connection with flagrant game law violations charged, Mr. Willard stated in his letter that: "No firearms are permitted except those detailed for rodent control. No evidence has been furnished to prove a single case of illegal killing of game by CCC recruits or personnel. The professional game poacher . . . in those areas has come to hate CCC men worse than he ever did a game warden. There are too many of them for his peace of mind.

"Based on actual count, more deer habitate Itasca State Park at present than ever before and this not withstanding the location therein and immediately adjacent of three CCC and four transient relief camps with a population of approximately 1,000 men.

Regarding trails made in untouched forest areas, the commissioner explained that such construction has always been a moot question among conservation experts. There has always been controversies on its benefits or drawbacks, he said. "Reasonable" programs, however, he said, have been carried out in interest of fire control. These include trails, lookout towers, and airplane landing fields. Mr. Willard contended that to say these improvements were fatal to wild life and the wilderness was a broad statement.

According to the letter, wild life technicians trained in their field are regular employees of all CCC camps and that conservation is taught at night classes. Superintendents and foremen are all hired on their qualifications for conservation work. "My own rejoinder," the Commissioner said, "based on relationships with those in responsible charge of CCC work in Minesota is that the federal agencies responsible have tried most unselfishly to be reasonable."

Conceding that game and its natural habitat may be temporarily disturbed for forest, park and conservation betterments to follow, Mr. Willard asked: "Is this not the price, and a small price indeed, that we must pay for these improvements and contributions they make to human relief and rehabilitation?"

Mr. Willard termed Kaupanger's charges as "unwarranted" because he did not give those in charge an opportunity to consider them, nor did he produce facts or cite specific instances where law violations and mismanagement have occurred.

Highway Investigations Flop Despite Dishonest Methods Employed by Mouer

By A. I. Harris

All doubts as to the deliberate dishonest methods employed by the Carley sleuth committee in the political "investigation" to discredit the Olson administration were dissipated last week to the complete satisfaction of every impartial person who attended the hearing. The investigation sank to such low depths that even Republican members of the committee expressed themselves as disgusted.

Frantic because legitimate evidence of a damaging nature against the Administration has not been forthcoming, Thomas Mouer, political attorney engaged to conduct the dirt-seeking inquiry, has now resorted to every cheap trick and device known to the sharp practitioner.

Throughout the proceedings, while asking questions, Mouer, has been giving testimony himself, which brought the suggestion from Roy A. MacDonald, St. Paul attorney, that Mouer be sworn. Continually, he has been putting words in the mouths of witnesses and has been asking leading questions.

In examination of N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, Mouer went to the extreme of asking questions based on deliberate distortion and misstatement of facts, and endeavored to obtain a "yes" or "no" answer from the witness. This is a very sly game.

Elsberg retorted that he was not going to waste his time answering "fool and impossible" questions. Mr. MacDonald, who has appeared for a number of witnesses, has informed all his clients to hereafter flatly decline to answer any questions based on a false assumption of facts.

The subject matter under inquiry was a road paving job in Duluth which was awarded last year to Thornton Bros. for $185,665, the lowest of eighteen bidders on the job. Later certain "extras" were ordered and approved by the Federal Bureau of Roads which added $58,388 to the original cost.

Although Mouer knew well that the "extras" would have have been an additional payment of the same amount regardless of who received the contract, he endeavered to make the record appear that the total price paid Thornton Bros. of $242,054 was almost equal to the high bid on the job of $258,441, and exceeded the average bid. Mouer's effort to make the record appear that the extra work was overpayment was the most glaring piece of intellectual dishonesty which has come up in proceedings in which intellectual dishonesty has been the rule rather than the exception.

Notwithstanding the fact that administration expense of the state highway department was lower in 1933 and 1934 under N. W. Elsberg than in the two preceding years, the Carley committee, by its trickery and unfair practices, succeeded in getting newspaper headlines which asserted that the Farmer-Labor regime has "tripled" such costs.

Continuing to refuse witnesses the right to tell the whole truth, the committee presented a fictitious picture of highway department matters. Carley and his cohorts went so far, in fact, that even their strongest and most violent supporters, the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch, finally published an editorial pointing out that land valuation figures brought out by the investigators had no true significance.

Figures given the committee on highway administration expenditures showed the costs were $28,000 less for the years 1933 and 1934 under Elsberg than in 1931 and 1932 under C. M. Babcock. The committee, however, twisted this fact beyond recognition by comparing administration costs on the basis of cost per thousand dollars of expenditure. Every business man knows that administration cost does not and can not vary in direct ratio to gross expenditures.

In the matter of land valuations the committee employed an equally fictitious basis of comparing prices. Land valuations as carried on the tax books were used as a foundation for inferring that the highway department paid huge prices for right-of-way. Here again, every farmer and business man knows that when he buys or sells property desired for a specific use, the tax assessor's value does not govern the actual price paid.

Furthermore, the right-of-way purchases investigated by the Carley committee have all been handled by the self-same engineers who bought land for ten years under Republican Babcock. In fact, the largest land deal criticized by the committee—a purchase from the Twin City Rapid Transit company,—was a deal made by Babcock himself. The final payment for the property chanced to hang over into Elsberg's term, but Babcock had legally entered into the agreement to purchase and had committed the department as to the price. If this deal involved an over-payment. it was due entirely to the Republican administration, not to Farmer-Laborites.

In regard to these land deals, the St. Paul Dispatch, (after giving scare headlines to committee charges), said editorially: "The assessor must necessarily be guided by present actual uses of the land . . . On the other hand, when taking the land for public purposes, its potential value must be taken into consideration, and the law so required. . . . The value for taxation is not the test that governs."

"BACK-TO-LAND" TREND SHOWN BY RECENT SALES

Sales conducted by the Department of Conservation since the first day of April indicate clearly the "back-to-land" trend.

State trust fund, school, swamp, and other lands belonging to the state were offered at public auction in 15 northern counties of Minnesota, beginning April 1. This resulted in the sale of 15,156 acres at an average price of a little less than $8.00 per acre. Fifteen percent of the purchase price was paid in cash. Practically everybody that appeared at this sale was a farmer who desired to enlarge his holdings or to secure a home in northern Minnesota. The bidding for lands showed an excess of more than 7 percent above the appraised price of the land.

THREE MAJOR WORK PROJECTS TO EMPLOY 180

Approval of work projects totaling $54,100, and offering jobs to 190 relief clients in Royalton, Virvinia and Carlos, is announced by Walter F. MacGregor, director of the work division, Minnesota SERA.

A $30,000 addition will equip the Royalton high school with a gymnasium and auditorium. The village assumes responsibility for $19,000 of the total cost, with the SERA furnishing the remainder as wages to 100 men.

The water supply system of Virginia will be extended at a cost of $19,000, the city contributing $9,000 and the SERA the balance.

Fire protection in the village of Carlos will be increased by a water reservoir and a new fire hall. About 20 workers will be occupied on these improvements costing $5,100. The village will contribute $700, and the SERA the remainder in relief wages.

SOCIALISTS ASK F. D. TO COME CLEAN

Chicago.—"Come clean, Mr. President—against whom are you building this military machine?" asks the anti-war manifesto of the Socialist Party of the U. S.

"President Roosevelt, urging a starvation wage on public works, skyrockets the military budget to its highest peacetime peak," it points out. "The government, impotent to set its house in order and provide subsistence and comfort to the army of the unemployed, strengthens its military bases; stages naval maneuvers in the Pacific; builds more and better warships; proposes to militarize the CCC and enlarges our standing army.

"The Socialist Party of the U. S. calls upon the workers and farmers of America to declare war on war. It calls upon organized labor to prepare to use its power of protest and of strike to prevent. It calls upon all men and women and young people who are opposed to war to organize to end it."

WHEN you pull out the choke, raw gasoline is sucked into your cylinders. Thus, your frequent short trips "eat up" GASOLINE unless it has 3 kinds of power—IN PERFECT BALANCE.

Super-Shell is the first truly balanced gasoline. It saves you money in THESE 3 WAYS:

Can save up to a cupful of gasoline on every "Cold" Start. Super-Shell starts instantly—often warms up in half the time of ordinary gasolines—with less wasteful choking.

Can save up to a cupful of gasoline in 10 Minutes of Hard Pulling. Because of Super-Shell's even volatility, you can accelerate rapidly, or race your car up steep hills—on less gasoline, without wasteful knocking.

Can save up to a cupful of gasoline in One Hour of Steady Running. Every drop of Super-Shell vaporizes more completely at every engine temperature. So it saves on long runs, too.

THESE THREE SAVINGS of gasoline naturally result in MORE MILEAGE per tankful!

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1897."

I have built you the world in its beauty;
I have brought you the glory and spoil;
You have blighted my sons and my daughters,
You have scourged me again in my toil;
Yet I suffer it all in my patience,
For somehow I dimly have known
That some day the worker will conquer
In a world that was meant for his own.

THIS JOB OF BEATING BACK

From data which we have heard discussed during the past few weeks we would judge that the people of Northern Minnesota have a tremendous job of restoration on their hands. Dr. Simpson, North Dakota State Geologist, speaking at the Crookston meeting of the Red Lake River Development association, stated that the ground water level in this state has fallen 13 feet. Conditions in other states are even worse; in North Dakota it has fallen 16 feet, and South Dakota 17 feet. The deficiency in rainfall for this region has reached a total of 46½ inches, accumulated over a period of 30 years, according to the Moorhead observation station.

This is the result of "Rugged Individualism" at its worst. From before the turn of the century, landseekers flocked into this region looking for land. Every swamp looked like "God's Green Acres." Land speculators saw prospects for a rich harvest, if we could only get rid of the water. Ditching contractors reaped a rich bonanza. Ditches and drainage canals have been run up and down and criss-cross of the country and the water has been hurried out to the sea never to return. Millions of dollars in ditch liens have been levied, the swamps have been drained, the lakes have been lowered; we're rid of the water,—and so what?

Well, we have found out that peat land is not so good as farm land goes. We have also found that it burns readily, as thousands of acres of burnt-over territory silently testifies; as hundreds of settlers who have had to flee before the spreading fires, many escaping only with their lives, will vociferously testify. With the draining of the swamps, local rainfall has diminished. With the draining of the swamps the lake levels have receded; with the draining of the swamps the rivers have gone dry and the ground water level has sunk lower and lower. The day of reckoning is close at hand and we must start beating back or see the Red River Valley share the fate of the Mississippi Valley south of us where the once rich and fertile country is being blown away or being buried under tons of desert sand. And "Rugged Individualism" at its best can't cope with the situation. It will take cooperative action. Concerted action by the entire population of Northern Minnesota and Eastern North Dakota and the sooner we get at the gigantic task the better it will be for ourselves and for posterity.

For those of us who live in the Red Lake River basin the course of action is clear. Last fall the river was canaled from the lake outlet to the Thief River Falls reservoir in order to insure an adequate water supply thru the winter for this city In so doing we tapped the last remaining drops out of the eastern swamps. When the spring run-off is finished these swamps will be drained clean, down the canal, over our dam, over the Crookston dam, into the Red River and on, into Hudson Bay. What about next winter? What last remnant of swamp will we drain to supply us then, if we have another dry year?

Control dams should have been installed in the river now to control the spring run-off. They must be installed before the fall rains. We are nearest the source of supply. It is between this city and the lake that the control measures must be started, and we suggest that it is one of the paramount and foremost duties of the city council to take immediate steps to secure the cooperation of the other cities along the Red Lake River, to the end that some of the federal funds just appropriated for public works, be secured for immediate use in water control and Red Lake restoration work.

A MODERN PRAETORIAN GUARD

Boldly emblazoned across the pages of Minnesota history will stand the names of the conservative senators of the Minnesota Senate and their battle against the overwhelming odds of enlightened public opinion.

Tho thousands shall starve, they will defend to the death the right of American citizens to make millions, no matter how they may be acquired. Tho millions of children, because of economic stress, may never attend school, yet be it never said that they failed to battle to keep the schools free from the taint of any liberal thought.

Defenders of the Status Quo; Champions of the Special Interests; Pillars of an Unbalanced Society; Snoopers Extraordinary; Inquisitors Nonpareil; like Horatius at the Bridge, tho in a less noble cause; like Stonewall Jackson at Bull Run, but with a lot more "Bull," they stand undaunted and unafraid. Their battle cry rings upon the night air like the clarion call of a raven's croak, "They shall not pass!" and Progress, astonished, is arrested in her path.

THE INFLUENCE OF AMERICAN CAPITALISM ON THE NEW NORSE LABOR GOVERNMENT

Writing in the Nordisk Tidende, Norwegian language paper published in New York, Prof. Lyder L. Unstad discusses the influence that American labor unionism and capitalism will have on the new Labor government in Norway headed by Nygaardsvold. He points out that Tranmael the acknowledged labor leader in Norway and editor of "Ny Tid" as well as Nygaardsvold and other members of the new cabinet are men who have spent years in the United States as laborers and active members of the I. W. W. Upon their return to Norway, Prof. Unstad says, they agitated and in a short time gained a majority in the Norse labor movement and successfully steered it away from the mounting AF of L philosophy and its "Swivel Chair Consciousness." The result, says the professor, is that the Norwegian Labor party is the most radical in Europe, with the possible exception of Russia. In America, the professor states, these men saw capitalism at its worst and he expects to see them steer away from the evils of "Capital unleashed." America's influence, the professor says, will be mostly negative, having taught them "what not to do."

He deplores that the Labor Party has not a majority of all members in the Storting, and voices the hope that they will not fall into the same mistakes made by the labor party in England when it came into possession of the government, and compromise with the opposition in order to hold power and thus lose the confidence of the masses.

Prof. Unstad also points out that because Norway has no entrenched capital owning the public utilities such as telephone and telegraph, railroads, electric power plants, etc., all these being already owned by the state, the problems which the new government has to face will be less complicated than those that will face an American Labor government when, and if, one attains power.

WAR PROTEST
(St. Paul Daily News)

Undergraduates of the nation held their demonstration against war and capitalism Friday.

As demonstrations go this one was successful —at least from the standpoint of numbers involved. Had it been confined to a war protest alone, it would have met with greater public approval. But when there was included the "communistic" propaganda, the demonstration became fair game for all those persons tingle at the mere mention of the word.

Despite, however, this "Red" tinge the showing is highly significant and worthwhile.

And it is highly proper that the young men and women who are usually the first to be drafted to pull profitable chestnuts out of the fire for the older folks should assert their refusal to become cannon fodder. Whether they can help themselves, of course, is another question, but any public protest at this time against the senselessness of war helps the cause of organized peace.

It is to be noted in passing that the police of Los Angeles continued their denial of American rights by cracking the heads of a couple of feminine demonstrators. Thank God, we don't live in California.

SYNDICATED ANARCHY
(Minnesota Leader)

While units of the Farmer-Labor Association Women's clubs especially are studying the Constitution of the United States Big Business newspapers are printing articles urging rebellion against the Constitution. A recent sample was a syndicated article by Mark Sullivan. It was carried under a three-column head by the Mineapolis Journal, and entitled, "Need Curb on Freedom of Speech to Save Nation, Says Sullivan." This sentence occurred in the lengthy article:

......In order to save free speech, there comes.. ..a time when it is necessary to deny free speech...

From that time on the syndicated article was a determined assault upon the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America, which reads:

> Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; OR ABRIDGING FREEDOM OF SPEECH, or of the press, or the right of the people peacefully to assemble, or to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

The Constitution is the law of the land. Defiance of law is anarchy. These newspapers advocate anarchy. They, and the financial interests back of them, dare not, cannot face the facts of capitalist misrule. So they launch a move to still the voice of protest. They are propagandizing the nation for the annulment of the first amendment to the American Constitution. They plan to deny the rights of free speech—unless that speech is acceptable to Special Privilege.

Good masters, you are playing a dangerous game. More dangerous than you know. A little more of your lawlessness, and you'll have swift verification of that fact. (And where, by the way, is the much vaunted "Law and Order" league of Minnesota that it allows such things to pass unchallenged?) Leering anarchy has no place in Minnesota. And syndicated anarchy should be ripped from the newspapers of the state.

In the meantime, Farmer-Labor units are giving thorough and intensive study to the Constitution of the United States of America. It is a remarkable document.

THE GLORY OF ARMS
(Marshall Daily Messenger)

Come back to 1918 for a minute or two.

Here's a lad just out of high school on a battlefield of France. Yesterday, he was a fine, upstanding young fellow, imbued with true patriotism and a desire to serve his country. Though only eighteen, he had already made somewhat of a mark in this world. Scholastically he ranked high; in athletics, he starred in two major sports; in personality, he was liked by everyone. He was ambitious, industrious, and would have gone far in a world of peace. Yesterday, he embodied in every way the fine type of American youth that all America loves.

Today, how different. Today, he's just a shattered arm on a trampled grain field near Chateau Thierry. There's nothing left excepting this battered forearm, torn off just above the elbow. Under the hot sun, it's already begun to swell with maggots, while the flies devour the clotted blood. Just this arm is all that's left of this strapping young lad of yesterday—today nameless for all time.

He was willing to die, if it served his country. Perhaps he does not begrudge what happened to him today. But was this the sort of death he visioned? Is this the "glory of arms"?

THE BANKERS GOT A JOLT
(Minnesota Union Advocate)

Every once in a while some politician in Washington says something that makes the nation rub its eyes and wonder what is going to happen next.

Last week Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, was testifying before the House Committee on Banking and Currency. Representative Hollister, a die-hard republican from Ohio, was prodding Eccles with questions in an effort to discredit the banker's insistence that congress widen the federal government's power to regulate banking:

Hollister suggested that the banks—to get even —might refuse to buy government securities. "Then what would happen?" he asked.

"It would be unfortunate for the bankers if the government couldn't get their cooperation," said Eccles, "because under the circumstances the government would take over the banking system or use currency to pay the deficit, rather than bonds."

He then revealed that the banks are now collecting something like $320,000,000 a year in interest on government securities—which they purchased largely with the government's own money!

And that's what made a lot of people gasp, and the banking fraternity is still gasping.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

ALCOHOL IS A TRICK

"What you must do," says George Bernard Shaw, "is to teach people not that drink will do them harm or good but make them understand that it is in the last degree disgraceful to a man that he cannot provide his own genuine courage and high spirits without drink.

"I should be utterly ashamed if my soul had shriveled up to such an extent that I had to go out and drink whisky.

"Alcohol is a trick. I always tell a man who goes to whisky for high spirits, 'My friend, you are going to be taken in. Alcohol depresses you, and will only make you feel happy when you are not.'"

Farm Income Increased

January farm income was $498,000,000 in December and $485,000,000 in January, 1934, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Farm income during the first six months of this year will be slightly larger than in the same period last year, the bureau expects.

Income Tax Receipts Up

The Treasury Department has reported that personal income tax returns received during the first 15 days of March showed an upturn of over 29 per cent over the same period last year. The receipts were $191,358,909 compared with $147,794,894 last year received from March 1 to March 15 inclusive. Returns mailed just before the deadline, midnight, March 15, were not tabulated in this report.

The Farmers' Union at Washington

The Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee have issued invitations to the Senators and Congressman of the Northwest states to attend a dairy conference at the Harrington Hotel April 19th. Representatives of the Dairy Section of the Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration Association as well as representatives of the National Milk Producers Association and the National Cooperative Council have also been invited to attend this conferenec.

The purpose of the conference is to ascertain whether or not a program beneficial to the dairy industry can be worked out within the provisions of the triple A. Special stress will be laid on a program beneficial tothe produlers or butter and cheese. The problems involving a dairy program have proven more difficult of solution than any of the other problems confronting the ommittee. Days and days have been diligently spent in study and research seeking to find an answer.

Representatives of the Farm Bureau, the Grange, the National Co-Operative Council, the National Milk Producers, the Farmers National Grain Corporation and the Northwest Farmers Union Committee met this week at the Willard Hotel for the purpose of planning and co-relating their activities in behalf of the passage of the proposed amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Among other provisions these amendments provide for a correction in the method of figuring parity. To wheat producers alone the passage of this amendment means forty-seven millions of dollars added income over and above the present method of figuring parity. Other commodities share in proportion.

The same group is united on the Commodity Exchange Bill. This bill is entirely for the benefit of the producers of grain and their co-operative institutions. The bill provides for dealers licenses and for reports to be furnished the Grain Futures Administration. The entire machinery of the bill is for the purpose of protecting the market against raiders operating to the detriment of producers.

This group of farm leaders meeting with the Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee made no secret of the fact that they were happy to co-operate in this legislative work seeking beneficial corrections in the farmers' income. They authorized the representatives of the Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee to so state this to their people.

President Roosevelt has issued the statement that he will not destroy the Agricultural Adjustment Act as provided for in the George amendment. The George amendment provided that the President for the period of one year could use money out of the Relief Fund to make benefit payments provided for under the Agricultural Adjustment Act. But evidently the President in refusing to use relief money in this way considers the relief problem one thing and the problem of agriculture another thing. The President is willing that processing taxes be repealed if Congress will otherwise find the money to pay the benefit payments. Congress con do this by taxing incomes, but the guess is that Congress will not do this. However, President Roosevelt has saved by a courageous declaration the Agricultural Adjustment Act from the fate that befell the Agricultural Marketing Act a few years ago.

The George amendment was attached to the Relief Bill within the last hour of its passage. Due to its innocent appearance it was passed without consideration or discussion.

A "Boogey-Man Story"

The study of insanity for most people means entering the realm of the supernatural, hobnobbing with spirits, or something else strange and fearful. It is natural that the unconventional should thus be confused with the unearthly—but it is an error that must be corrected.

One's feelings about insanity are quietened somewhat when one meets with an explanation that satisfies every question about the disease. In THE PSYCHOLOGY OF INSANITY by Bernard Hart, M. D., (London), we get such an explanation. This little book deals mainly with various experiments conducted by Prof. Frued of Vienna, Dr. Jung of Zurich, and others,—experiments which laid the foundation for the so-called "modern" psychology. These scientists hold that the human mind is composed of various "complexes," groups of thoughts linked by some common thread. There are dominating complexes and repressed complexes; the ones pleasing to the personality are in the foreground, while the painful ones are pushed into the background. Proceeding from this basic theorem, Dr. Hart shows that what we call insanity is but a revolution of the complexes, the repressed complexes taking possession of the mind, pushing the former dominating ones into the background.

The Subconscious

The scientific name for this "background" is the subconscious, a term made popular by Prof. Freud. Pleasing complexes form one's memory; unpleasant things compose one's "forgettery." A person does not "forget" in the sense that a memory is wiped off the slate, obliterated. Our psychologists have proved by various tests that not a single event of our lives goes unrecorded. What our conscious mind does not retain is forced back into the subconscious and does not come into the conscious mind again except under extraordinary circumstances.

Our Private Zoo

We all have our private zoo of repressed complexes, kept safe under lock and key in the normal individual, who perhaps never suspects their existence. The normal individual has a very small fund of suppressed desires—he satisfies most of his yearnings. Dr. Hart stresses the point that the more desires are repressed, the more danger there is of an "explosion" (i. e., insanity) some day. One must have a "safety valve," as it were; and practically all of man's activities fall under the category of safety valves.

The Birth of Reason

Perhaps the most interesting remark in this book is this: "The prevalence of 'rationalization' is responsible for the erroneous belief that reason, taken in the sense of logical deduction from given premises, plays the dominating role in the formation of human thought and conduct. In most cases the thought or action makes its appearance without any such antecedent process, moulded by the various complexes resulting from our instincts and experience. The 'reason' is evolved subsequently to satisfy our craving for rationality."

That is, we are what we are because of our complexes, or prejudices, and not because we have "reasoned it out." Applying this to national affairs, one finds that it very nearly hits the mark. In this depression, for example, practically everybody knows that something is wrong, but nobody seems to know what to do about it. The proposed cures are worse than the disease. The whole trouble lies in the fact that we are all prejudiced as to what the ideal society should be. We all accept the same kind of reality, but we cannot all swallow the same brand of idealism.

The Merit of Modern Psychology

Although Prof. Hart meant to cover only the study of insanity, he made some generalities which apply to the whole human race. Indeed, "Everybody's looney," as the fellow remarked to his wife, "except me an' you, Lizzie, and sometimes I think even you are a little tetched in the haid." Personally, I can weep no salt tears over the fact that Reason is dead. What we call the "opposition" appeals to the prejudices of the people; it is only logical that a group striving for the "more abundant life," should do the same on their side. It is merely supplementing the private individual selfishness with a co-operative selfishness that will go places and do things. A scientific knowledge of the mind is valuable; it can be used in the struggle to better the conditions of mankind. It is used by the opposition: why not by us?

A New Threat to the Building Trades

By John Newton Thurber
Director, Workers' Education
Council of Cleveland

"We cannot turn back the march of science and invention. We can only use it for ourselves—or perish by it."

Building tradesmen, who after facing long years of unemployment, only to find at the end of five years that the only substantial building in sight is the $4,800,000,000 appropriation recently passed by Congress, with discretionary powers to set wages as low as $50 per month, now are threatened by a new development, the "Pre-fabricated House." The weekly news magazine Time reports that the General Electric Co., and other interested corporations have perfected this new type of housing which will practically eliminate building workers.

A $5,000 house can be erected in two weeks, according to present ararngements. The winning plans in a contest sponsored by G. E. were sibmitted by Hays and Simpson of Cleveland. An exhibition of these houses was held in New York recently, and two new corporations are already in the field to sell them.

Houses in Cellophane

Time says in part: "After six years of experiment, American Houses, Inc., was ready to put its pre-fabricated house into limited production April 1, when a $5,000 unit wrapped in Cellophane and tied with a red ribbon will go on display at John Wannamakers' store. The company was promising its first customers delivery by June 1.

"National Houses, Inc., a competitor, announced that it hoped to have 10,000 pre-fabricated houses to sell during the next twelvemonth. Though it will be months, perhaps years, before U. S. travelers begin to see pre-fabricated houses springing up in any numbers along the roadsides, the design and and equipment of such houses was by last week sufficiently complete to give the public some idea of what its grandchildren may live in.

"American Houses, Inc., describes its product as 'a machine in which to live.' The four-room unit on display (in New York) cost $3,800 complete, including erection within 100 miles of New York. Shipped by truck from the company's distributing depot, the parts are put together in two weeks under the expert eye of a company superintendent.

Button Up Your Living Room

"A local building crew sinks a shallow concrete foundation (there is no cellar), erects a steel frame. Then the walls, consisting of 4-ft. by 10-ft. panels, are bolted together with long strips of aluminum which give a modernistic effect to the exterior. The panels, 2¼ in. thick, consists of two layers of mixed cement and asbestos. Between the layers is an insulating substance which looks like burnt cork and is termite proof, fireproof.

"The outside of the house is a light grey, needs no paint. Extra rooms can be added from time to time by 'unbuttoning' one outside wall.

"The house is entered through the living room (16x12 ft.). The walls are papered in parchment, stenciled over with oil paint which can be washed with soap and water. Set in the walls is an electric clock and beneath it is a radio.

Victuals Thrown In

'Off the living room are two bed rooms, small but well planned, with comparatively ample closet space. All rooms are air-conditioned. The bathroom is equipped with wall-hung toilet and wash basin which simplify house-cleanin. The basin is big enough to bathe a baby in. . . .

"Housewives will like the kitchen, a rectangular room free of sharp projections, handles, gadgets. Down one side runs a Monel-Metal topped counter in which is set the stove (gas or electric), the refrigerator, the sink. Above the counter are enameled cabinets stored with canned and packaged goods which come with the house. 'We want you to have two days' food when you move in,' says the company.

"Next to the kitchen, neatly embedded in a thick column, are the furnace (coal, gas, oil or electric) het plumbing inlets and outlets, the air-conditioner.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

Easter gives hope for the fulfilment of our dream of a better world. Sucering for the better is not the end of the struggle.

On Good Friday it appeared to the disciples as though the better had been defeated and that amid the laughter and ribaldry of the baser it had sunk in complete and final disaster, but three days later the truth emerged again.

Jewish bigotry stoned Stephen, but the truth in him went marching on.

Rome imperialism did not throw out Christianity when it threw Christians to the lions. Roman ecclesiasticism did not stamp out the sciences when it subjected scientists to the torture of rack and thumbscrew.

In America, although Garrison was mobbed and Lovejoy murdered, the abolition of slavery was finally established.

Man may be silenced, but not the truth.

If history has anything to say to us it surely says this:

If any man have a right idea, unpopular tho it may be in his day, you may stone, burn, torture, behead, or shoot him but you cannot permanently silence the truth in him.

The Cross is never the end.

Science Marches On

"Two things becloud the future of these two companies: (1) sales resistance to machine made homes, (2) opposition from organized labor. The powerful building trades' unions glower darkly at houses that can be put up with fewer plasterers, carpenters, roofers, painters and plumbers. Probable result: pre-facbirated houses will be pushed and developed from outside the building trades by big electrical corporations, plumbing, steel cement, and wallboard companies who see a fat new market for their wares."

With this development, members of building trades unions find themselves confronted with the spectre of power driven machine production which has displaced millions of workers in industry, but which had up to now left the craft unions in the building trades alone in the use of their craft skills. These pre-fabricated houses offer many conveniences to the buyer, and they imply a huge cut in the labor cost.

We Must Own the Machines!

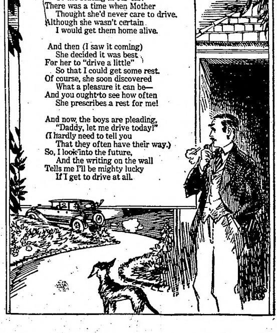
Building trades workers will attempt to resist this innovation in production as workers during the past century have attempted to resiste every displacement of human labor by machine production, but the forces of capital, the use of technology and of mass production are stronger.

Once more we have raised the issue: Are we to sit idly by while corporate finance uses these new advances for its own aggrandizement while millions of workers are thrown out of employment, or are we to band together, workers of hand and brain, to enjoy the fruits of modern science and invention by taking over these newly developed means of production and operate them for our own use, and not for the profit of the few.

We cannot turn back the march of science and invention. We can only use it for ourselves or perish by it.

The papers state that Washington, D. C., is suffering from a crime wave unprecedented in the history of that city. Speeding up of judicial procedure and an increase in the number of court officers is said to be imperative. Repeal has failed to halt crime.

The NEW CRUSADE, a hand book of facts issued by the wets, admits that under prohibition, the per capita consumption of intoxicating liquors declined over 60 per cent.



Daddy, Let ME Drive
by Lawrence Hawthorne

I look into the future
(And it isn't very far!)
To see a rearrangement
Of the seating in our car.
There was a time when Mother
Thought she'd never care to drive.
Although she wasn't certain
I would get them home alive.

And then (I saw it coming)
She decided it was best
For her to "drive a little"
So that I could get some rest.
Of course, she soon discovered
What a pleasure it can be—
And you ought to see how often
She prescribes a rest for me!

And now, the boys are pleading,
"Daddy, let me drive today!"
(I hardly need to tell you
That they often have their way.)
So, I look into the future,
And the writing on the wall
Tells me I'll be mighty lucky
If I get to drive at all.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR JOHN OLSON, APRIL 15

John Olson, an eccentric bachelor, who has lived in a little house on the south bank of the Horseshoe for the past thirty years. passed away at a local hospital, Friday, April 12, following a stroke.

About ten days ago, while trying to climb the steep hill up to his house, he fell and was unable to rise. His cries attracted John Holmgren, a neighbor, who hastened to his assistance and carried him to the Holmgren home where he was taken care of for several days. When his condition became worse, he was removed to the hospital where he died several days afterwards.

Olson complained to the neighbors several times during the winter that he was suffering want and did not have enough to eat or wear. Some of the neighbors carried food to him quite often and his case was called to the attention of the city council and the relief office, with the result that he was given orders for groceries and clothing. After his demise, an inspection of his house revealed a large quantity of canned goods hidden away and stored in the cellar as well as meats and other food supplies. Articles of wearing apparel, never used, were found hidden away in shoe boxes, all apparently forgotten from the moment they were placed there.

Mr. Olson was born December 23, in Smaaland, Sweden. When he came from Sweden he settled in Watertown, Minn., and later moved to a farm in Marshall county. In 1902 he moved to this city where he has since made his home. Surviving him are two nephews, Godfrey Carlson of this city and Emil Carlson of Fordville, North Dakota. One sister and one brother have preceded him in death.

Funeral services were conducted Monday from the Erickson and Lund funeral home. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad officiated and interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

OSLO RESIDENT DIES IN LOCAL HOSPITAL

Let Our Motto Be

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

LET THE AIR BE MOIST IN YOUR HOMES

I remember as a boy going with my father past a very pretentious house. It was below zero that morning, and recalling our own frozen windows at home, I exclaimed: "Gee, they must keep it awfully warm in that house. See, there isn't any frost on the windows."

And my father answered, "Those people should be ashamed that there isn't frost on their windows on a cold morning like this. Those clear windows mean that the air in their house is too dry. You may be sure they have a good deal of sickness."

I knew that was true, for the girl was in my room in school, and she always had a cold.

Then we went into a house on whose windows the frost was so thick that there were only spots of blank glass. But I can always see in my mind that big cheerful kitchen with the teakettle singing on the wood-burning stove. The children, not allowed to go out yet, were rosy-cheeked and noisy in an active way, and there was a big bowl of apples on the table and pitcher of milk.

"That's a healthy family," said my father, when we were outside again. "Did you notice that there was steam going into the air all the time? You could breathe with comfort there."

One of the first things I learned in medicine was that my father's observation was true.

People who live in houses in which the air is too dry are almost always ailing.

If you will notice the next time you go out on a wintry day how many of your neighbors have too dry air, and then think over what you know about their health, you will find, I believe, that they are apt to be rheumatic and they are bothered with a good many head colds.

Human beings are not so constituted that they can stand winter dry air in their houses without showing the effects of it.

We have in ourselves the best barometer that will tell us whether or not the air we are breathing is too dry for health. Between your nostrils is a thin membrane. If the mucous lining of that feels dry when you touch it with your finger, then you are a good subject for a cold.

Breathing began with the first animal capable of living on dry land, so the breathing apparatus is one of the oldest pieces of our body machinery. It ventilates the body as we all know, and the capillary network of blood vessels intertwining within the wall of the nose brings blood close to the surface of the nose to warm or cool the air we breathe, and to give it the proper humidity. When air gets to the windpipe, it is always body temperature, summer and winter. The wall of the nose is our thermostat and humidifier.

But if there is not enough humidity in the air, then how can the nose get sufficient moisture to transmit to the lungs? Without proper "conditioning," the air passages are open to attack by the cold viruses that seem constantly waiting for such chances, and the result is a cold.

Furnace heat is one of the big reasons why the air in our houses is dryer than it was in the days of our forefathers when they had to do most of their heating of water in open kettles on top of the stove or over fires. But it is not necessary to have dry air with furnace heat. Pans of water can be placed on tops of radiators or in the pans intended for that purpose in hot air furnaces. If you are subject to frequent winter colds, then give close attention to the humidity in your house.

Fortunately our houses are better ventilated than they were in the past. We are a little more particular about our "smells." But even so, there are still far too many people who sleep with closed windows at night. They seem to think it is too costly to warm cold air. They do not realize that the most difficult thing of all is to warm stale air. A cold house in the morning filled with fresh air can be warmed very quickly. A house with dead air never feels warm.

Most persons who have the air too dry or too stale in their houses also dress too warmly when they are indoors.

It is all right to dress as warmly as you need to, to feel comfortable when you go out, but if you wear heavy clothes inside so that you sweat, then when you go out, the damp clothing gives you a chill, and you are a good subject for a cold.

Every person, unless bed-ridden or ordered otherwise by a doctor, should go out into the open air every day.

Peter Stengrimson died April 9 at the home of his niece, Mrs. Joe Dostal. Funeral services were held Friday, April 18 from the Trinity Lutheran church. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad conducted the services and interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Stengrimson was born Nov. 5, 1869 in Ness, Hallingdahl, Norway. He came to America in 1887 and settled in Ortonville, Minn. He later moved to Madison, Wisc., where he was employed as Manager of the Farman Tobacco Factory. He came here nine years ago and has made his home with his niece.

Surviving him are three sisters, Mrs. Iver Solheim, Mavie, Minn.; Mrs. Thor Wahl and Mrs. Lars Skulerud of Norway and two brothers, Elling and Knute of Norway.

Spring Burning of Woods & Meadows Not Good Practice

Hit-or-miss burning of woodlands and meadows is condemned by University of Minnesota scientists in a statement issued to the Minneapolis Women's Club, which is actively interested in the conservation of natural resources.

"The chief harmful effect of the spring burning of grassland and woodland," says Dr. F. L. Alway, chief of the soils division, University Farm, "lies in its destruction of desirable plants, which in many cases are replaced, for a time, at least, by undesirable weeds.

From burning no benefit to the mineral soils in any part of Minnesota is to be expected. In the case of some of our peat soils, burning, provided the fires can be kept under proper control, will in some cases increase the productivity where the land is to be brought under immediate cultivation, but otherwise, and in general, burning on even the bogs causes a serious deterioration of productivity."

"There can be no permanent forest where annual spring burning is practiced," says E. G. Cheyey, professor of forestry. "Although the fire may do no apparent damage to mature timber, it does decrease its growth by destroying the potential plant food in the litter and duff; robs the soil of its organic matter, making it a hardpan; and kills brush and other small growth which then becomes fuel for a second fire that may be hot enough to injure even the mature timber."

"During the last 20 years, there has been a tremendous decrease in the number of all kinds of wild flowers in the neighborhood of the Twin Cities and a total disappearance of some species," asserts Professor C. O. Rosendahl, botanist. "Some of this is the result of over-picking, cultivation, and drainage, but, according to my observation, more of it is due to the destructive cumulative effect of repeated late-spring burning."

Dr. W. A. Riley, entomologist, points out the injurious effect of spring burning of animal and insect life in the following statement:

"Fire does not discriminate between injurious, beneficial and neutral insects. Moreover, it destroys the chief food supply and shelter of many of our birds and animals without yielding any compensating advantage."

The burning of weedy pastures is also condemned by Ralph Crim, extension agronomist, who says, that such burning "does not as a rule materially aid in thickening up the grasses or kill many weed seeds."

Minnesota SERA Being Reorganized to Gain Field Staff Efficiency

Reorganization of the Minnesota SERA field staffs on an efficiency basis centering control of relief activities in the state administrative offices in St. Paul, and which is expected to eliminate diffculties previously arising in the various counties will be completed in the next few weeks, it is announced by L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator.

While the reorganization will result in the dismissal of a number of SERA employees, many of whom are not actually engaged in relief work but who have been loaned to such government agencies as the AAA, FCA and others, the move also will necessitate the addition of numerous persons in key positions.

"Revision of the relief set-up is expected to result in more adequate and prompt solution of local problems," Mr. Zimmerman said, "and will undoubtedly mean more efficient and economical supervision of relief giving throughout the state."

Under the present SERA system relief in each county is administered by a county relief worker, disbursing officer, engineer, and, in instances, rural rehabilitation supervisors. Of this group, one serves as county relief administrator, whose function it is to coordinate all activities in his particular area.

Revised, the set-up of 86 counties now receiving SERA relief funds will be divided into various areas, each including one or more counties. Grouping of counties into these new areas will be done on the basis of case loads, problems, and geographical features of the political sub-divisions concerned. Over each area will be placed an administrator, who, as key man in the area, will have complete charge of the entire program in his section.

With the various field staffs engaged in the work of the several SERA divisions responsible only to this individual, who in turn, answers only to the administrator's office, it is believed that duplication of work will be avoided and the distribution of relief speeded up.

Rates and Terms for Trust Fund Lands

A large number of inquiries are being received by the Division of Lands and Minerals of the Department of Conservation relative to the renting and leasing of state-owned lands, according to F. A. Wildes, director. Rates and terms were outlined by Mr. Wildes as follows:

"For farming purposes, $1 per acre for the first 20 acres, 50 cents per acre for the next ten acres and 25 cents per acre for all over 30 acres.

"For hay or pasture purposes, $4 per forty acres; on government lots, 10 cents per acre.

"Use of buildings or use of one acre as building site, $12 per year."

These rates apply for 1935," Mr. Wildes said. "Rates will be higher in 1936."

Leases are issued for one year only and only cover the growing season in the case of hay or pasture leases. All leases terminate on September 30th. As a drouth relief measure, the state offers its lands for hay and pasture leasing at a low rental to those actually needing the same for their herds and in no case to speculators.

All leases are subject to the sale or redemption of the land at any time. Also in the case of interest delinquent lands, they are subject to whatever rights the holder of the state land sale certificates or his assigns may possess. If the land is sold, redeemed, or reclaimed by the contract holder before the lessee has had the use of the land the rental will be refunded.

Leases will be renewed from year to year whenever practicable. This is the policy of the division, but the state agents reserve the right to make exceptions to this rule whenever they believe it to the best interests of the state to do so.

All rentals are payable in cash in advance. The state cannot issue leases on a share of the crop basis.

Government lots or forties must be leased entire. We cannot issue leases on parts of descriptions. However, a description may be leased under two different rates; i. e., partly for farming and partly for hay or pasture, as long as the lease covers the entire description, except where one acre is leased with buildings or for construction of buildings.

It is possible for the state to reimburse the lessee for improvements on state lands or buildings under certain conditions. If such improvements are appraised by a regular state appraiser before the sale lists of said land are made up, their value will be added to the price of the land, and anyone buying this land other than the lessee, must pay cash for said improvements, and such money will be turned over to the lessee. This protection is offered only at the first sale at which the land is offered ater the improvements have been appraised.

TRANSIENT REGISTRATION CENTERS CONSOLIDATED

To further economy and administrative efficiency, the transient division has been merged with the social service division of the Minnesota SERA, announces L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator.

MILLIONS FOR BEER

By W. G. Calderwood

Chicago drank about 56 million gallons of beer during 1934, according to trade figures released by the WESTERN BREWER. The retail cost of that tank of amber beverage is estimated at approximately $75,000,000. Government figures for the same time indicate that the consumption of milk in 56 leading cities of the nation was 27 per cent below the minimum health requirements. Applying these government findings to the city of Chicago, it is found that had the people of the western metropolis bought the standard requirement of milk it would have reached the retail aggregate of $60,000,000.

In normal times the average income might provide both beer and an adequate amount of milk but under present economic conditions if the father has his beer, in many cases the milk supply for the family must be dangerously reduced.

That $75,000,000 beer bill was paid very largely by the poor man. Beer is not the rich man's drink. Among the pleas that were made for repeal was the constant claim that the laboring man had a right to his mug of beer.

The situation in the United States now seems to be beer versus milk, with beer winning and the children paying.

Let Our Motto Be

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

LET THE AIR BE MOIST IN YOUR HOMES

I remember as a boy going with my father past a very pretentious house. It was below zero that morning, and recalling our own frozen windows at home, I exclaimed: "Gee, they must keep it awfully warm in that house. See, there isn't any frost on the windows."

And my father answered, "Those people should be ashamed that there isn't frost on their windows on a cold morning like this. Those clear windows mean that the air in their house is too dry. You may be sure they have a good deal of sickness."

I knew that was true, for the girl was in my room in school, and she always had a cold.

Then we went into a house on whose windows the frost was so thick that there were only spots of blank glass. But I can always see in my mind that big cheerful kitchen with the teakettle singing on the wood-burning stove. The children, not allowed to go out yet, were rosy-cheeked and noisy in an active way, and there was a big bowl of apples on the table and pitcher of milk.

"That's a healthy family," said my father, when we were outside again. "Did you notice that there was steam going into the air all the time? You could breathe with comfort there."

One of the first things I learned in medicine was that my father's observation was true.

People who live in houses in which the air is too dry are almost always ailing.

If you will notice the next time you go out on a wintry day how many of your neighbors have too dry air, and then think over what you know about their health, you will find, I believe, that they are apt to be rheumatic and they are bothered with a good many head colds.

Human beings are not so constituted that they can stand winter dry air in their houses without showing the effects of it.

We have in ourselves the best barometer that will tell us whether or not the air we are breathing is too dry for health. Between your nostrils is a thin membrane. If the mucous lining of that feels dry when you touch it with your finger, then you are a good subject for a cold.

Breathing began with the first animal capable of living on dry land, so the breathing apparatus is one of the oldest pieces of our body machinery. It ventilates the body as we all know, and the capillary network of blood vessels intertwining within the wall of the nose brings blood close to the surface of the nose to warm or cool the air we breathe, and to give it the proper humidity. When air gets to the windpipe, it is always body temperature, summer and winter. The wall of the nose is our thermostat and humidifier.

But if there is not enough humidity in the air, then how can the nose get sufficient moisture to transmit to the lungs? Without proper "conditioning," the air passages are open to attack by the cold viruses that seem constantly waiting for such chances, and the result is a cold.

Furnace heat is one of the big reasons why the air in our houses is dryer than it was in the days of our forefathers when they had to do most of their heating of water in open kettles on top of the stove or over fires. But it is not necessary to have dry air with furnace heat. Pans of water can be placed on tops of radiators or in the pans intended for that purpose in hot air furnaces. If you are subject to frequent winter colds, then give close attention to the humidity in your house.

Fortunately our houses are better ventilated than they were in the past. We are a little more particular about our "smells." But even so, there are still far too many people who sleep with closed windows at night. They seem to think it is too costly to warm cold air. They do not realize that the most difficult thing of all is to warm stale air. A cold house in the morning filled with fresh air can be warmed very quickly. A house with dead air never feels warm.

Most persons who have the air too dry or too stale in their houses also dress too warmly when they are indoors.

It is all right to dress as warmly as you need to, to feel comfortable when you go out, but if you wear heavy clothes inside so that you sweat, then when you go out, the damp clothing gives you a chill, and you are a good subject for a cold.

Every person, unless bed-ridden or ordered otherwise by a doctor, should go out into the open air every day.

Spring Burning of Woods & Meadows Not Good Practice

Hit-or-miss burning of woodlands and meadows is condemned by University of Minnesota scientists in a statement issued to the Minneapolis Women's Club, which is actively interested in the conservation of natural resources.

"The chief harmful effect of the spring burning of grassland and woodland," says Dr. F. L. Alway, chief of the soils divison, University Farm, "lies in its destruction of desirable plants, which in many cases are replaced, for a time, at least, by undesirable weeds.

From burning no benefit to the mineral soils in any part of Minnesota is to be expected. In the case of some of our peat soils, burning, provided the fires can be kept under proper control, will in some cases increase the productivity where the land is to be brought under immediate cultivation, but otherwise, and in general, burning on even the bogs causes a serious deterioration of productivity."

"There can be no permanent forest where annual spring burning is practiced," says E. G. Cheyey, professor of forestry. "Although the fire may do no apparent damage to mature timber, it does decrease its growth by destroying the potential plant food in the litter and duff; robs the soil of its organic matter, making it a hardpan; and kills brush and other small growth which then becomes fuel for a second fire that may be hot enough to injure even the mature timber."

"During the last 20 years, there has been a tremendous decrease in the number of all kinds of wild flowers in the neighborhood of the Twin Cities and a total disappearance of some species," asserts Professor C. O. Rosendahl, botanist. "Some of this is the result of over-picking, cultivation, and drainage, but, according to my observation, more of it is due to the destructive cumulative effect of repeated late-spring burning."

Dr. W. A. Riley, entomologist, points out the injurious effect of spring burning of animal and insect life in the following statement:

"Fire does not discriminate between injurious, beneficial and neutral insects. Moreover, it destroys the chief food supply and shelter of many of our birds and animals without yielding any compensating advantage."

The burning of weedy pastures is also condemned by Ralph Crim, extension agronomist, who says, that such burning "does not as a rule materially aid in thickening up the grasses or kill many weed seeds."

Minnesota SERA Being Reorganized to Gain Field Staff Efficiency

Reorganization of the Minnesota SERA field staffs on an efficiency basis centering control of relief activities in the state administrative offices in St. Paul, and which is expected to eliminate difficulties previously arising in the various counties will be completed in the next few weeks, it is announced by L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator.

While the reorganization will result in the dismissal of a number of SERA employees, many of whom are not actually engaged in relief work but who have been loaned to such government agencies as the AAA, FCA and others, the move also will necessitate the addition of numerous persons in key positions.

"Revision of the relief set-up is expected to result in more adequate and prompt solution of local problems," Mr. Zimmerman said, "and will undoubtedly mean more efficient and economical supervision of relief giving throughout the state."

Under the present SERA system relief in each county is administered by a county relief worker, disbursing officer, engineer, and, in instances, rural rehabilitation supervisors. Of this group, one serves as county relief administrator, whose function it is to coordinate all activities in his particular area.

Revised, the set-up of 86 counties now receiving SERA relief funds will be divided into various areas, each including one or more counties. Grouping of counties into these new areas will be done on the basis of case loads, problems, and geographical features of the political sub-divisions concerned. Over each area will be placed an administrator, who, as key man in the area, will have complete charge of the entire program in his section.

With the various field staffs engaged in the work of the several SERA divisions responsible only to this individual who in turn, answers only to the administrator's office, it is believed that duplication of work will be avoided and the distribution of relief speeded up.

Rates and Terms for Trust Fund Lands

A large number of inquiries are being received by the Division of Lands and Minerals of the Department of Conservation relative to the renting and leasing of state-owned lands, according to F. A. Wildes, director. Rates and terms were outlined by Mr. Wildes as follows:

"For farming purposes, $1 per acre for the first 20 acres, 50 cents per acre for the next ten acres and 25 cents per acre for all over 30 acres.

"For hay or pasture purposes, $4 per forty acres; on government lots, 10 cents per acre.

"Use of buildings or use of one acre as building site, $12 per year."

These rates apply for 1935," Mr. Wildes said. "Rates will be higher in 1936."

Leases are issued for one year only and only cover the growing season in the case of hay or pasture leases. All leases terminate on September 30th. As a drouth relief measure, the state offers its lands for hay and pasture leasing at a low rental to those actually needing the same for their herds and in no case to speculators.

All leases are subject to the sale or redemption of the land at any time. Also in the case of interest delinquent lands, they are subject to whatever rights the holder of the state land sale certificates or his assigns may possess. If the land is sold, redeemed, or reclaimed by the contract holder before the lessee has had the use of the land the rental will be refunded.

Leases will be renewed from year to year whenever practicable. This is the policy of the division, but the state agents reserve the right to make exceptions to this rule whenever they believe it to the best interests of the state to do so.

All rentals are payable in cash in advance. The state cannot issue leases on a share of the crop basis.

Government lots or forties must be leased entire. We cannot issue leases on parts of descriptions. However, a description may be leased under two different rates; i. e., partly for farming and partly for hay or pasture, as long as the lease covers the entire description, except where one acre is leased with buildings or for construction of buildings.

It is possible for the state to reimburse the lessee for improvements on state lands or buildings under certain conditions. If such improvements are appraised by a regular state appraiser before the sale lists of said land are made up, their value will be added to the price of the land, and anyone buying this land other than the lessee, must pay cash for said improvements, and such money will be turned over to the lessee. This protection is offered only at the first sale at which the land is offered ater the improvements have been appraised.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a logbirling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

Holbrook limped out and Brandon, alone, puffed for a time on his cigar. Next, he opened a lower drawer and drew out a bottle of whisky. Only one drink remained in it. He frowned. A year ago he had procured that liquor; for nearly twelve months it had been scarcely touched. But since the night that old Don Stuart died its contents had been drawn upon frequently. His hands shook a bit as he lifted the bottle to his lips, now, but after drinking new strength began to surge through his body and he smiled. He looked at his watch after a time and then out into the street. After a time he rose and walked to the wall telephone.

"Give me Miss Coburn's house, will you?" he asked the operator. "Hello! Miss Co— Ah, Dawn! It's Uncle Nick talking. Want to go to the movie tonight?"

She seemed to hesitate and he tilted his head sharply, lips parted. Then her voice came.

"It's nice of you to think of me, Mr. Brandon. But I don't think I care to go with you tonight."

"Oh; sorry," he said genially enough but his brows gathered. "Another time, then."

"Perhaps."

Her receiver clicked up and he turned away from the instrument scowling thoughtfully.

"Mister Brandon, eh?" he said softly. "And . . . No excuse. . . . Well!"

The last word was spoken with a snap, as though a chapter was closed.

He paced the floor slowly. He was brooding, planning, and by the look on his face it was evident that he planned good for no man . . . except, possibly Nicholas Brandon.

Perhaps he was thinking of the matter that was to confront Ben Elliott within twenty-four hours.

That young man was in high feather as the crew came in to supper. His locomotive had shunted the standard cars up from Hoot Owl before daylight and the veneer logs scattered along the steel had commenced going up at once.

Able had come driving out from town in mid-afternoon, Dawn beside him, and with an added thrill because of her presence Ben directed the loading of the last car, conscious that the girl's eyes were often on him with an expression which belied her apparent indifference when he tried to engage her in conversation.

It was dark when the jammer man swung the last log into place and toggles were made fast. Able and Dawn rode with Ben in the locomotive as they trundled down the track to camp.

"You boys have had a long day," Ben said to the engineer and fireman. "It won't get any darker. You eat your suppers here and we'll run 'em in this evening."

He turned to Able.

"Our contract calls for delivery in time to meet the local. She's been coming through a little before eight in the morning. Want to take no chance of having this stuff held up now. That would be a tough break!"

The engine crew had been fussing with a suspected draw bar and did not enter the cook shanty until most of the others had left. Soon afterward the door opened again and Blackmore came in.

"How near are you ready to deliver?" he asked Elliott with a worried frown.

"As soon as the boys, there, stoke their own boilers!" Ben replied lightly.

"Sure you can make it?"

"As sure as a man can be."

"I sure hope so, Ben. Guess you know by now that I'm pulling for you in this scrap. But I've got to hold you to your contract, To the hour and letter of it. Your friend Brandon has wired into the house, it seems, offering any quantity of veneer stuff up to seventy thousand at ten dollars less than your contract calls for. Here's a wire"—shaking a telegram—"ordering me to hold you to your agreement and if you're late or short on scale to have Brandon load tomorrow. It's out of my hands, you see."

Ben's mouth tightened.

"Well, it happens, we've ducked from under our genial friend Brandon again. Yeah. We'll whip-saw Mr. Nick Brandon!"

Blackmore grinned and unbuttoned his coat. He chuckled. He was glad. He was on Ben's side for certain, and as he lit his pipe and commenced to talk, with an easing in his manner, a triumphant sort of peace descended on the shanty.

But even as they visited, a slender figure, moving through the darkness with a slight limp, followed the Hoot Owl steel up the long grade that climbed from the siding.

On the trestle this figure stood still in the cold quiet. Then he dropped down the bank of the stream to where the crib work of the trestle stood, stoutly footed beneath the muck and water. For many minutes he was there, grunting occasionally, and when he climbed the bank again he trailed something carefully behind. . . . across the bridge, now, he went, after more listening, and down again beneath the north end of the trestle. More grunting; pawings in the snow, hard prodding with a short steel bar. . . . And up again, trailing something carefully once more.

Next, the man lighted a cigarette, shielded the flame of the match in cupped hands and after the tobacco was burning applied the fire to a pair of other objects held tightly between thumb and forefinger. . . . He let them go and a pair of greenish sputters began crawling across the trestle . . . and the man was limping swiftly up the hill, over the crest, while the green sputters drew apart, one crossing the trestle toward its northerly end, the other moving in the opposite direction.

It was twenty minutes later. Ben Elliott was pulling on his mackinaw, preparatory to going out with the first three cars of logs, when he stopped suddenly, one arm in its sleeve, as a jolt shook the building, rattling dishes and causing the door of the range oven to drop open with a bang. None in the place spoke; they looked at each other, faces set in puzzlement. Again came a heavy jolt; a loud detonation, and a pan fell from its shelf with a crazy clatter. No word, still. Without speaking they leaped for the doorway and emerged to see the crew spilling from the men's shanty to look and listen.

"It's dinnymite!" Bird-Eye Blaine croaked hoarsely as he ran out. "Dinnymite fer sure! Where, Benny b'y?"—looking earnestly into Elliott's face.

"That's for us to find out," Ben answered grimly and they followed him as he ran with long strides toward the direction from which the sound had come.

Minutes later they came up to him, the fastest of them, as he stood motionless on the bank of the Hoot Owl, looking at the mass of twisted railroad steel and of ties that dangled from the swinging rails in ragged fringe; at the scattered remnants of crib work, at the piling standing splintered and awry and useless in the stream bed.

Ben Elliott's bridge was gone. His way to the siding with his veneer logs, on the delivery of which hung the fate of the operation, was blocked. No time remained to team them out, there was no other way to get them out except by steel. And his steel was broken, twisted, useless.

He turned to face them as they crowded up, swearing and exclaiming in excited voices.

"You, Houston!" he snapped to the camp's boss. "Get those standards off the main line. Bird-Eye, start a fire here. You men—you three there—get a fire going on the other bank. You teamsters, back to camp and dress your donkeys. Bring axes, peaveys, skidding equipment. Lively, now, everybody! A job of work coming up!"

Blackmore, whose wind was short, elbowed through the crowd, panting heavily.

"Good G—d, Elliott: They've scotched you!"

Ben gave him a fleeting, scorching glance.

"Scotched, h—l! They've only got me good and mad!"

And now began a scene the like of which had never been recorded in the Tincup country.

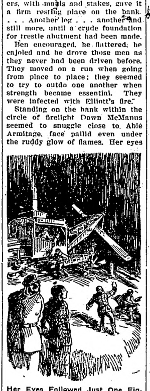
Men were there in numbers where huge bonfires, constantly tended that the light should be steady, flared on the banks of the Hoot Owl. Sawyers, cant-hook men, teamsters, toiled to reduce the wreckage of the trestle, snaking it out of the way working hastily, noisily, excitement evident in their movements and shouts. Others cut brush until the sloping river banks showed bare and dark.

Back in the woods oil flares burned as the steam loader puffed and snorted and rattled, swung its boom, lifted logs from their banks, tossed them through the air and dropped them into place on a flat car. Once loaded, the car of logs and the jammer were trundled down the mile of track to the stream. Slow and slower the car moved until the boom of the loader overhung the gap where a trestle had been. Then blocks went into place to secure the wheels, Elliott gave the signal, the boom swung a half circle, hook men adjusted their tackle to a log on the single car; up it went, around and out over the river bank and then down.

Elliott was below there with his cant-hook men. They grabbed the first stick, wrestled it into place parallel with the current and others, with mauls and stakes, gave it a firm resting place on the bank. . . . Another log . . . another and still more, until a crude foundation for trestle abutment had been made.

Ben encouraged, he flattered, he cajoled and he drove those men as they never had been driven before. They moved on a run when going from place to place; they seemed to try to outdo one another when strength became essential. They were infected with Elliott's fire.

Standing on the bank within the circle of firelight Dawn McManus seemed to snuggle close to Able Armitage, face pallid even under the ruddy glow of flames. Her eyes followed just one figure; that of Ben Elliott. Commanding, resourceful, a human dynamo, he was.



Her Eyes Followed Just One Figure; That of Ben Elliott.

Shortly after midnight the supply team drove up from camp, the cook drew back blankets which had covered its burden, commenced putting generous pieces of steaming steak between slices of bread and the cook poured coffee from huge pots for the men who swarmed around the sleigh.

Back to the decks in the woods went the locomotive; down it came again, bearing more logs. These were let down to a pile which rose almost to the track level. When it was three feet higher nearly half the work would be finished.

Workers staggered through the snow bearing a steel rail. It went into place; fish plates clattered; wrenches set nuts and spikes put the rail secure on ties.

So when the locomotive, leaking steam from its old joints, lumbered down with its next burden, the loader was set out on this length of new track and began the task of filling in the far side of the ravine, leaving a sluiceway through which the waters of the stream gurgled and surged.

Blackmore joined Able and Dawn on the bank where the firelight struck topaz lights from the snow. The old justice turned an inquiring gaze on him and the buyer shrugged.

"Two o'clock," he muttered. "He's got less than six hours left to turn the trick."

"It doesn't seem humanly possible," Able said slowly.

"I'm beginning to think," Blackmore replied, "that the man isn't human. This thing would've stopped most men I know without a try. But not Elliott!"

Daybreak found them throwing the last load of logs into place and the pallid light of the early day revealed Elliott's face, drawn and gaunt and colorless; his eyes burned brightly, strangely dark.

"His only chance is that the local'll be late," Blackmore moaned to Able.

Six o'clock, and broad axes shaped the logs on which the ties would rest, and up from the siding came a team at a trot, and behind it another. These were men from Tincup who had heard of the work going on. They left their sleighs and looked at the emergency trestle and then stared at one another and shook their heads in amazement. Things like that just didn't happen, they seemed to be thinking.

Then came a battered cutter, with old Tim Jeffers driving alone, to see what was to be seen.

"Heard the shots in town last night," he told Able. "Come mornin' I drove this way."

The old justice nodded grimly.

"You guessed, then."

Tim spit angrily. "The lad was gettin' too close to his mark to suit some folks it seems."

Seven o'clock, and men staggered up the embankment bearing a rail. Five minutes later it rang and sang as the spike went home, and another, the last, was brought up.

The gap was bridged, the last spikes were going in; the particular job was done, but tension screwed up and up, as a fiddle string is tightened. . . .

It was seven-thirty, and far off a locomotive screamed.

"The local!" Blackmore gasped. "She's at Dixon. . . . In a half hour, now. H—l, the boy's licked!"

A half hour! A half hour in which to move six standard cars laden with a heavy scale of saw logs over that grade! Two trips, Ben Elliott had estimated it would take. Two trips for the leaking old locomotive to drag them the three miles to the siding and puff its way back and trundle the other three over the hill and down the slope. It was a half mile climb from river to summit with a better than four per cent grade. A good locomotive of even small tonnage might take them over at once; but not the old ruin that stood sending its plume of smoke into the morning air up the track yonder. And if those logs were not put down for the train even now screaming its way toward the siding, Ben Elliott was beaten.

He straightened, flinging away his maul, saw the last nut tightened on the final fish plate and then, holding up both hands, face fixed toward the locomotive with its string of cars waiting around the bend and up the hill to the northward, he began to run.

Holding them there? When the trestle was ready? Men wondered why, audibly, excitedly, stirred from their weariness by this strange move. Instead of high-balling them on, Elliott was holding them back!

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

Holbrook limped out and Brandon, alone, puffed for a time on his cigar. Next, he opened a lower drawer and drew out a bottle of whisky. Only one drink remained in it. He frowned. A year ago he had procured that liquor; for nearly twelve months it had been scarcely touched. But since the night that old Don Stuart died its contents had been drawn upon frequently. His hands shook a bit as he lifted the bottle to his lips, now, but after drinking new strength began to surge through his body and he smiled. He looked at his watch after a time and then out into the street. After a time he rose and walked to the wall telephone.

"Give me Miss Coburn's house, will you?" he asked the operator. "Hello! Miss Co—Ah, Dawn! It's Uncle Nick talking. Want to go to the movie tonight?"

She seemed to hesitate and he tilted his head sharply, lips parted. Then her voice came.

"It's nice of you to think of me, Mr. Brandon. But I don't think I care to go with you tonight."

"Oh; sorry," he said genially enough but his brows gathered. "Another time, then."

"Perhaps."

Her receiver clicked up and he turned away from the instrument scowling thoughtfully.

"Mister Brandon, eh?" he said softly. "And . . . No excuse. . . . Well!"

The last word was spoken with a snap, as though a chapter was closed.

He paced the floor slowly. He was brooding, planning, and by the look on his face it was evident that he planned good for no man . . . except, possibly Nicholas Brandon.

Perhaps he was thinking of the matter that was to confront Ben Elliott within twenty-four hours.

That young man was in high feather as the crew came in to supper. His locomotive had shunted the standard cars up from Hoot Owl before daylight and the veneer logs scattered along the steel had commenced going up at once.

Able had come driving out from town in mid-afternoon, Dawn beside him, and with an added thrill because of her presence Ben directed the loading of the last car, conscious that the girl's eyes were often on him with an expression which belied her apparent indifference when he tried to engage her in conversation.

It was dark when the jammer man swung the last log into place and toggles were made fast. Able and Dawn rode with Ben in the locomotive as they trundled down the track to camp.

"You boys have had a long day," Ben said to the engineer and fireman. "It won't get any darker. You eat your suppers here and we'll run 'em in this evening."

He turned to Able.

"Our contract calls for delivery in time to meet the local. She's been coming through a little before eight in the morning. Want to take no chance of having this stuff held up now. That would be a tough break!"

The engine crew had been fussing with a suspected draw bar and did not enter the cook shanty until most of the others had left. Soon afterward the door opened again and Blackmore came

"How near are you ready to deliver?" he asked Elliott with a worried frown.

"As soon as the boys, there, stoke their own boilers!" Ben replied lightly.

"Sure you can make it?"

"As sure as a man can be."

"I sure hope so, Ben. Guess you know by now that I'm pulling for you in this scrap. But I've got to hold you to your contract. To the hour and letter of it. Your friend Brandon has wired into the house, it seems, offering any quantity of veneer stuff up to seventy thousand at ten dollars less than your contract calls for. Here's a wire"—shaking a telegram—"ordering me to hold you to your agreement and if you're late or short on scale to have Brandon load tomorrow. It's out of my hands, you see."

Ben's mouth tightened.

"Well, it happens, we've ducked from under our genial friend Brandon again. Yeah. We'll whip-saw Mr. Nick Brandon!"

Blackmore grinned and unbuttoned his coat. He chuckled. He was glad. He was on Ben's side for certain, and as he lit his pipe and commenced to talk, with an easing in his manner, a triumphant sort of peace descended on the shanty.

But even as they visited, a slender figure, moving through the darkness with a slight limp, followed the Hoot Owl steel up the long grade that climbed from the siding.

On the trestle this figure stood still in the cold quiet. Then he dropped down the bank of the stream to where the crib work of the trestle stood, stoutly footed beneath the muck and water. For many minutes he was there, grunting occasionally, and when he climbed the bank again he trailed something carefully behind. . . . across the bridge, now, he went, after more listening, and down again beneath the north end of the trestle. More grunting; pawings in the snow, hard prodding with a short steel bar. . . . And up again, trailing something carefully once more.

Next, the man lighted a cigarette, shielded the flame of the match in cupped hands and after the tobacco was burning applied the fire to a pair of other objects held tightly between thumb and forefinger. . . . He let them go and a pair of greenish sputters began crawling across the trestle . . . and the man was limping swiftly up the hill, over the crest, while the green sputters drew apart, one crossing the trestle toward its northerly end, the other moving in the opposite direction.

It was twenty minutes later. Ben Elliott was pulling on his mackinaw, preparatory to going out with the first three cars of logs, when he stopped suddenly, one arm in its sleeve, as a jolt shook the building, rattling dishes and causing the door of the range oven to drop open with a bang. None in the place spoke; they looked at each other, faces set in puzzlement. Again came a heavy jolt; a loud detonation, and a pan fell from its shelf with a crazy clatter. No word, still. Without speaking they leaped for the doorway and emerged to see the crew spilling from the men's shanty to look and listen.

"It's dinnymite!" Bird-Eye Blaine croaked hoarsely as he ran out. "Dinnymite fer sure! Where, Benny b'y?"—looking earnestly into Elliott's face.

"That's for us to find out," Ben answered grimly and they followed him as he ran with long strides toward the direction from which the sound had come.

Minutes later they came up to him, the fastest of them, as he stood motionless on the bank of the Hoot Owl, looking at the mass of twisted railroad steel and of ties that dangled from the swinging rails in ragged fringe; at the scattered remnants of crib work, at the piling standing splintered and awry and useless in the stream bed.

Ben Elliott's bridge was gone. His way to the siding with his veneer logs, on the delivery of which hung the fate of the operation, was blocked. No time remained to team them out, there was no other way to get them out except by steel. And his steel was broken, twisted, useless.

He turned to face them as they crowded up, swearing and exclaiming in excited voices.

"You, Houston!" he snapped to the camp's boss. "Get those standards off the main line. Bird-Eye, start a fire here. You men—you three there—get a fire going on the other bank. You teamsters, back to camp and dress your donkeys. Bring axes, peaveys, skidding equipment. Lively, now, everybody! A job of work coming up!"

Blackmore, whose wind was short, elbowed through the crowd, panting heavily.

"Good G—d, Elliott: They've scotched you!"

Ben gave him a fleeting, scorching glance.

"Scotched, h—l! They've only got me good and mad!"

And now began a scene the like of which had never been recorded in the Tincup country.

Men were there in numbers where huge bonfires, constantly tended that the light should be steady, flared on the banks of the Hoot Owl. Sawyers, cant-hook men, teamsters, toiled to reduce the wreckage of the trestle, snaking it out of the way working hastily, noisily, excitement evident in their movements and shouts. Others cut brush until the sloping river banks showed bare and dark.

Back in the woods oil flares burned as the steam loader puffed and snorted and rattled, swung its boom, lifted logs from their banks, tossed them through the air and dropped them into place on a flat car. Once loaded, the car of logs and the jammer were trundled down the mile of track to the stream. Slow and slower the car moved until the boom of the loader overhung the gap where a trestle had been. Then blocks went into place to secure the wheels, Elliott gave the signal, the boom swung a half circle, hook men adjusted their tackle to a log on the single car; up it went, around and out over the river bank and then down.

Elliott was below there with his cant-hook men. They grabbed the first stick, wrestled it into place parallel with the current and others, with mauls and stakes, gave it a firm resting place on the bank. . . . Another log . . . another and still more, until a crude foundation for trestle abutment had been made.

Ben encouraged, he flattered, he cajoled and he drove those men as they never had been driven before. They moved on a run when going from place to place; they seemed to try to outdo one another when strength became essential. They were infected with Elliott's fire.

Standing on the bank within the circle of firelight Dawn McManus seemed to snuggle close to Able Armitage, face pallid even under the ruddy glow of flames. Her eyes followed just one figure; that of Ben Elliott. Commanding, resourceful, a human dynamo, he was.

Shortly after midnight the supply team drove up from camp, the cook drew back blankets which had covered its burden, commenced putting generous pieces of steaming steak between slices of bread and the cook poured coffee from huge pots for the men who swarmed around the sleigh.

Back to the decks in the woods went the locomotive; down it came again, bearing more logs. These were let down to a pile which rose almost to the track level. When it was three feet higher nearly half the work would be finished.

Workers staggered through the snow bearing a steel rail. It went into place; fish plates clattered; wrenches set nuts and spikes put the rail secure on ties.

So when the locomotive, leaking steam from its old joints, lumbered down with its next burden, the loader was set out on this length of new track and began the task of filling in the far side of the ravine, leaving a sluiceway through which the waters of the stream gurgled and surged.

Blackmore joined Able and Dawn on the bank where the firelight struck topaz lights from the snow. The old justice turned an inquiring gaze on him and the buyer shrugged.

Tim spit angrily. "The lad was gettin' too close to his mark to suit some folks it seems."

Seven o'clock, and men staggered up the embankment bearing a rail. Five minutes later it rang and sang as the spike went home, and another, the last, was brought up.

The gap was bridged, the last spikes were going in; the particular job was done, but tension screwed up and up, as a fiddle string is tightened. . . .

It was seven-thirty, and far off a locomotive screamed.

"The local!" Blackmore gasped. "She's at Dixon. . . . In a half hour, now. H—l, the boy's licked!"

A half hour! A half hour in which to move six standard cars laden with a heavy scale of saw logs over that grade! Two trips, Ben Elliott had estimated it would take. Two trips for the leaking old locomotive to drag them the three miles to the siding and puff its way back and trundle the other three over the hill and down the slope. Holding them there? When the trestle was ready? Men wondered why, audibly, excitedly, stirred from their weariness by this strange move. Instead of high-balling them on, Elliott was holding them back!

With the Law-Makers

By "Capitol Reporter"

L. P. Zimemrman, acting relief administrator, recommends to the Legislature a moratorium on personal debts of indigents. Such a law, according to Mr. Zimmerman, would take thousands of persons off the relief rolls. Many people who have exhausted their money in payment of bills before asking relief and who are still in debt turn down jobs because their salaries would be subject to garnishment by their creditors. . . .

Hereafter no boy or girl less than 18 years of age may participate in any walkathon, dance marathon, or similar endurance contests. The bill, which was introduced by the Industrial Commission and passed the Legislature, has been signed by Governor Olson. Legitimate sporting events like the six-day bicycle races are not included in the provisions of this bill . . . .

The House last week passed a bill requiring the state to compensate individuals wrongfully imprisoned at the rate of $5.00 for each day of imprisonment. A similar bill was killed in the last session of the Senate . . . The Senate finance committee has approved the appropriation of $10,000 for the purchase of the Ignatius Donnelly home at Nininger. . . .

Further evidence that the ineffective senatorial investigation is designed only for the purpose of creating political headlines was produced last week in a hearing involving David R. Arundel, liquor control commisisioner. It was brought out at the hearing tha Mr. Arundel, in 1933, prior to his becoming liquor commissioner was given a check for $3,000 by the department of administration and finance in what the daily press called a "coal deal." Headlines attempted to give the transaction a shady tinge.

Mr. Arundel, then in the bond business, had supplied bond for the out-of-town coal company after contract had been let. In bidding the coal company had placed a $3,000 certified check with the commission to show "good faith" in the bid, a required feature. On receiving the bid and placing bond, the coal company had asked Mr. Arundel to pick up the check, which was then no longer necessary to the transaction, and return it to them. As an act of courtesy, Mr. Arundel did this and has letters to prove the $3,000 was returned. His commission for furnishing bond was $104, not $3,000 as the headlines and the senators would have liked the public to believe . . . .

An appropriation for the creation of the position of state superintendent of parks under the commissioner of conservation is provided in the state department appropriation bill introduced in the Senate by the appropriations committee. The need for this position has been felt for some time and, according to Commisisoner E. V. Willard, will result in more planned development of the state park system. . . .

A drastic strengthening of present crime laws is provided by a series of 12 criminal procedure bills that were recommended by the crime commission. All of the 12 bills have been passed by the Senate, and some by the House. The bills extend the powers and personnel of the state crime bureau and provide for the establishment of a statewide police radio system. Doctors, nurses and druggists would be required to report to the police all cases of gunshot wounds; the probation system would be extended to include the entire state; jumping bail bonds would be made a gross misdemeanor; and a board for the classification of prisoners would be created. The present highway patrol would be given full police powers, and agreements with other states to compel the attendance of witnesses would be authorized. Other bills would require that advance notice be given of defense alibis and would revise the rules for the selection of juries. The program also includes provisions that would require written reports in investigation before prison sentences could be suspended.

Evidently reactionary legislators who are so anxious to cut down the pay of state employees do not exhibit the same "public spirit when it comes to cutting the size of their own pay checks. Liberals introduced a measure which would reduce the pay of all legislators fifteen per cent and cut mileage allowances from fifteen cents to five cents a mile. Last week liberals attempted to place this bill on general orders so that it could come up for a vote, but their efforts were defeated by reactionaries and the bill was referred back to committee for a new report. . .

LIQUOR BLAMED IN 8 PER CENT OF CRASHES

Improper speed, driving on the wrong side of the road, "cutting in' and making left turns without signaling were primary factors in automobile accidents studied by the state highway patrol in 1934, according to an analysis of patrol records just published.

The analysis shows that 86 per cent of the drivers involved in accidents were physically fit to drive, and that 85 per cent of the automobiles involved were mechanically fit to be driven. Intoxicating liquor figured as a contributing cause in about 8 per cent of all accidents studied.

Wheat Ruling Explained By Andrew Boss

may be 165 per cent of the base acreage. In cases where wheat was overplanted last year and the over-planting has been covered by Wheat Form No. 46, which calls for reduction of this amount in 1935, the acreage indicated must be subtracted.

"As an example, a producer having a wheat base of 100 acres for the base years would be permitted to plant 90 acres this year under the original provisions of the contract. To this, he may add 75 per cent of his base acreage, or 75 acres. Thus his total wheat acreage for 1935 could be as high as 165 acres. If he overplanted by 10 acres in 1934, which amount is covered by Form 46, a deduction of 10 acres must be made, leaving him 155 acres yet.

"The state AAA office has no instructions that the contracted acres may be released. Therefore the above producer would still have 10 acres of the original wheat base which must be reserved as contracted acres subject to the provisions of the wheat contract.

"To comply with his contract, the producer must plant, in 1935, at least 54 per cent of his base acreage.

"The producer should make sure, by measurement, if necessary, that he has sown the least number of acres required; that his contracted acreage is the full number of acres called for by the terms of his contract, and that he has not sown more than 165 per cent ofhis base acreage, less any increase he may have overplanted in 1934, and which is covered by Form W-46.

"Farmers who observe these requirements will receive the benefit payments specified in their contracts."

$6 Entry Fee for Soft Ball League

The entrance fee for the teams was set at six dollars to cover the cost of bats and balls. A new ball is to be bought for each game and the ball used in the previous game will be used for the second ball after which it will be given to boys' teams which are being organized, Mr. Messenger said.

Each team will play one game a week on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday with Friday reserved for postponed games, as it was last year, the group decided. The season will start Monday, May 13th on the diamond on the high school field and all games are to start at seven o'clock, p. m. After four innings of play the game will be recorded as an official game and if it is called for any reason after that time the leading team will be declared the winner of the game, according to the rules made Monday night. A team, in order to go on the field, must have at least eight of its players present and if there is not a sufficient number to play the manager shall be required to pick the needed men from the crowd if possible.

In order to prevent a team from making sudden changes in their line-up a ruling was made Monday night requiring a week's notice to the Protest Board of any addition to their playing list. The final date for registering players, as decided by the group, was set for May first, at which time the manager of the team must present a list of at least thirteen players to Mr. Messenger.

Mr. Messenger stated at the beginning of the meeting that he had put in an application for a project to take care of the baseball and kittenball diamonds with men from the relief rolls. If this project goes through, and Mr. Messenger stated that he was fairly certain that it would, a man would be selected who was qualified to referee the game and this would result in the elimination of the task of finding a referee for every game. A score book would be kept by an official scorer selected by the referee and standings of the teams would be announced each week.

Persons having teams that they wish to enter into the league were notified that they must make their intentions known to Mr .Messenger before, Thursday, April 23rd, in order to get in the league. Seven teams have thus far been entered in the league: they are Land O' Lakes, T. R. Grocery, Bill's Eat Shop, Hartz, Barzen, Fords, and Bridgeman Creameries.

"BETTER SHOOT THEN," DOCTOR TELLS GUNMAN

A Bemidji physician defied death threats rather than accompany a gunman and give medical aid to a wounded person under compulsion, Melvin C. Passolt, superintendent of the state bureau of criminal apprehension, disclosed today.

Declining to announce the physician's name Passolt related how a stranger, about 45 years old, rushed into the physician's office Saturday afternoon and ordered him at the point of a gun to "come with me and take care of a wounded man."

Blood, apparently from the wounded person he was caring for trickled off the gunman's hand.

The doctor refused.

"I'll blow your head off if you don't come with me," the poorly dressed gunman threatened.

"Well, I guess you better shoot, then," the physician replied. "I'm getting pretty old, anyway. I refuse to accompany you."

With the last remark, the physician grabbed a telephone nearby. "I'm calling the police," the physician said. The gunman fled.

STRINGLESS BEANS

No Strings On These

THE best kinds of gifts are those with no strings on them. It's a gift, too, to be able to serve savory dishes with no strings attached. That being the case, try some of these savory recipes for stringless beans

Southern Stringless Beans: Drain a No. 2 can stringless beans, cut each bean in thin strips lengthwise, return to bean liquor and cook slowly until liquor has cooked away. Dice two slices bacon small and fry, drain and add to beans. Add about one tablespoon of the bacon fat and season with salt and pepper. Serves six.

Creamed Stringless Beans: Melt two tablespoons butter, add two tablespoons flour, and stir smooth. Combine the liquor from a 10½-ounce can stringless beans with the contents of one 6-ounce can evaporated milk, and add slowly, cooking slowly until smooth and creamy. Season with salt and pepper, add the beans and heat thoroughly. Serves four or five.

Hollandaise and Au Gratin

Stringless Beans, Hollandaise: Heat the contents of a No. 2 can stringless beans, then drain, saving liquor for soups. To one cup medium white sauce add one-half cup mayonnaise and two tablespoons lemon juice, and stir till smooth. Pour over the hot beans and serve at once. This makes six or seven servings.

Stringless Beans au Gratin: Make a cheese sauce of one-fourth cup butter, one-fourth cup flour, two cups of liquor from canned stringless beans, two cups milk, two teaspoons salt, pepper and one cup grated cheese. Add beans from four No. 2 cans cut stringless beans, pour into a flat, shallow, buttered pan and top thickly with buttered crumbs. Brown in oven. Serves twenty-five.*

MRS. OTTO STUCY DIES TUESDAY, APRIL 16th

Mrs. Agnes Margaret Stucy died at her home in Deer Park township Tuesday, April 16. She was 54 years old at the time of her death. Mrs. Stucy was born January 1, 1881, in Kilkenny, Minn. She was married to Otto Stucy at Janesville, Minn., in 1905 and at that time moved to Deer Park township, where she has made her home ever since.

Surviving her are her husband Otto Stucy, three daughters and five sons: Mrs. Margaret Ekwall, Star Township; Marie, Ruth, Malcolm, Arthur, Kenneth, John and Harry, all at home; her father, John Costello, of Waseca, Minn.; one sister, Mrs. Alice Conway of Waseca; one brother, Charles Costello, of Green Bay, Wisc., and two grandchildren. Funeral services will be held Saturday, April 20, from the Oak Park Lutheran Church with Rev. Bjorgan of Goodridge officiating.

Interment will be made in Oak Park cemetery.

C. C. COMMITTEE SUGGESTS MORE POWER EQUIP'T

Bond Issue and Special Election Contemplated By City Council

C. FITERMAN TO VACATE

'Shirley's Barn' to be Vacated Within Thirty Days by Order of Council

A committee representing the Civic and Commerce Association met with the city council last Tuesday evening and recommended that a special election be called to decide on the purchase of additional power plant equipment.

The committee stated that it was thought advisable by the association that a revision of electric light rates and power rates be made after necessary equipment is added to the plant. A bond issue, for which a special election must be called, is being contemplated by the city. The city attorney, Theo. Quale, was instructed to draw up the necessary forms and papers to hold the election.

Building permits were granted to H. M. Olson, for a dwelling on Johnson Street at an approximate cost of $4500, and to M. T. McFarland for a dwelling on Duluth Av. at an approximate cost of $2500.

A hearing was held on the condemnation of the property occupied by the Northern Trading Company on 5th street between Horace and Atlantic Avenues. The building was claimed to be a nuisance and was ordered to be vacated within thirty days by the city council under power given them by the zoning ordinance.

Vivtor Kooyer appeared and asked permission to install a sewage drain into the Red Lake River from his place of business which is located on the north side of the road at the east end of the old bridge. The matter was referred to the health officer.

The police department was instructed to place "No Parking" signs on the north side of fourth street between LaBree and Main avenues to relieve congestion which occurs frequently by parking on both sides of the street at that point. The mayor, F. A. Rinkel, appointed Oliver Oftelie as pound master for the coming year which will be a continuation of his present duties.

The meeting adjourned with the next meeting set for April 30th at eight p. m.

Widseth Given Verdict By Judge Brattland

A verdict in the case of Roy Widseth vs. Leonard Tenold and the Goodridge Farmers' Elevator Co., was handed down last week by Judge M. A. Brattland in favor of the plaintiff, Mr. Widseth.

The controversy was over the ownership of 19,127 pounds of sweet clover seed. In event of possession the seed cannot be had by the defendants, if it has been sold, the court will, upon further hearing, establish the value of the product, Judge Brattland stated.

Local Kittenball League Reported Ready for Play

According to the regional leisure time director, Mesesnger, all city business places intending to enter a team in the Kittenball league have registered with him this week. Teams now entered are: Land O' Lakes, Bridgeman Creameries, Bill's Eat Shop, Al's Coffee Shop, Fords, Hartz Store, Barzen and the Thief River Grocery. The last team to come into the league was that of Al's Coffee Shop, and as the final date for registering a team was set for Tuesday of this week no more teams will be permitted to register, Mr. Messenger stated.

The protest board, which is considered to be a desirable group to have, was named this week with J. Ruane, H. Prugh, and E. Kelly to serve as members for the coming season. All other rules and regulations governing Kittenball this summer that were suggested at the last meeting will be put in effect this season.

Managers of teams report a surplus of fine material and that they are all holding practices at least two nights a week.

Applications For Car Licenses Swamp Local Registration Office

Alex Campbell, registrar of motor vehicles in this vicinity, stated that with the signing of the Auto Tax Bill by the Governor last Wednesday his office was swamped with applications for licenses. Business was so good, Mr. Campbell stated, that it was necessary to employ extra help for the remainder of the time until the dead-line for applications has passed. All rates have been fixed and Mr. Campbell asks that those who are going to purchase licenses do so at the earliest possible time to avoid congestion on the last day.

W. E. Day Speaks to Large Crowd Friday

One of the largest crowds that have gathered this year at a meeting of the local Farmer-Labor club, gathered last Friday evening to hear W. E. Day, former legislative representative from this district, tell of how his seat in the present body was stolen by M. Waldal of Plummer, and his reactionary friends. Mr. Day explained the extreme unfairness of the house elections committee but stated that because Judge Torrance, Bemidji, had ruled that he was elected, he was more than satisfied with the stand taken by the lower house of the legislature.

A fine musical program was given before the speakers were given charge of the meeting. A three piece orchestra, comprised of A. Furseth, T. Sorenson and L. Hayden with an accordion, violin, and banjo was appreciated to the utmost by the audience; little Dorothy Furseth, seven-year-old daughter of Mr and Mrs. Andrew Furseth, delighted the audience with a song.

RELIEF IS GIVEN TO 24,794 MINN CLIENTS IN FEB.

Federal Government's Outlay Is $41,025,000 in Year; 71 Per Cent

In a report showing the cost of relief in Minnesota during the past 82 months ending March first, said cost was $57,055,000, it was revealed early this week by the SERA.

Approximately 16 per cent of the state's population was represented in the 112,156 cases aided during the month of February. The total expenditure for this month was $3,151,6613, an average of 28.13 per case.

Of the $57,055,000 spent in the 28 months, $41,025,000, or 71.9 per cent, was furnished by the federal government and $4,838,000, or 8.5 per cent, by the state, and $11,192,000, of 19.6 per cent, was furnished by the local units of government, the report revealed.

If costs of CWA are counted in, the report said, the relief work for the period was nearly $78,000,000, an average of $2,75,000 per month, or a per capita for the state of about $30. With the three months ending Jan. 31st, 1935, the peak load ran the expenditures over $5,000,000 per month, the report indicated.

During the month of February 1935, the emergency education division gave instruction to 46,758 persons, using 771 instructors, largely in the field of general adult education. Nearly 1,100,0000 persons took part in the activities of the recreation and leisure time divisions, nearly all of them athletics and games, in the month of February alone.

WPA Discuss Taxes and Real Estate Tax Relief

Taxes were the main subject of discussion at the Monday night meeting of the Workmen's Protective Association with a letter from Senator E. L. Tungseth, explaining his vote on the "Omnibus Bill" and why he voted against the Bridgeman amendment to the Motor Tax bill, receiving most of the criticism.

A debate developed on the merits of the sales tax and the correct method of relieving real estate of taxes, between F. J. Dudley and R. M. Aalbu. The next meeting will be held Monday night at the same time and place, according to Wm. Douville, president of the organization.

BIDS CALLED FOR HIGHWAY WORK MAY 3

1.2 Miles of Work East From New Bridge Will Be Undertaken

NEW PARKWAY IN PLANS

Double Lane Road with Boulevard Planned by Highway Department

Bids on five highway projects totaling approximately $125,000 have been called for May 3rd by the Minnesota Highway Department. Work in Duluth, Redwood Falls, Motley and near Thief River Falls and Belle Plaine is included in the call, according to a highway bulletin issued this week.

The work to be done in this vicinity will be on Trunk Highway number 59 starting from the new bridge and extending 1.2 miles southeast. The specifications call for bids on 21,000 cubic yards of excavation, 5,681 cubic yards of gravel lift, and 11,400 linear (running) feet of concrete curbing.

This work, according to P. G. Pederson, city clerk, will include the construction of the double lane road and boulevard that was contemplated last winter by a highway engineer working with the local park board. As the plans now are there will be two 24 foot lanes, with a grass plot 28 feet wide between them which will have trees and shrubbery planted to complete the landscaping. The boulevard will start one block from the east end of the bridge and will continue for approximately three blocks eastward.

Construction will start soon after the contract has been let, according to the bulletin of the highway department; condemnation proceedings on property will be started at an early date.

Ag Department Warns Against Foul Seeds

The attention of the public is called to the dangers of buying seeds from peddlers who drive through the country selling oats, alfalfa, soy beans, and "what have you" farm seeds. The Department of Agriculture, Dairy and Food, is reliably informed that foul seeds are being scattered throughout the counties where scarcity of seed is apparent. For the most part those seeds are uncleaned; oats with sow thistle seeds and Canada Thistle heads with seeds attached; alfalfa seed from Kansas—just common seed which is not adopted to Minnesota conditions; soy beans from Central states which are too late to mature and containing the seeds of Ivy-Leaf Morning Glory and other weed seeds; Sudan grass with Johnson Grass seed (The Quack Grass of the South) and many others are being brought into the State. Therefore, farmers and local merchants should be very cautious and not buy seeds from an unknown transient truck peddler, and, or, just because the price is less than that for locally offered seeds.

Remember that all seeds sold or offered for sale in Minnesota must be labeled showing percentages of purity, weed seeds, germination, and if any of the primary noxious weed seeds are present, the number per pound must be indicated. If you buy from a local merchant or a known Minnesota dealer, there is some measure of reliability and of the further chance of getting damages if the seed is not as labeled, but if bought from an unknown trucker or advertised over the radio from outside the State, the chances for recovery are less likely and much longer in coming.

Lastly, always save the label attached to seeds when purchased. Always save a representative sample of the seed and keep a good record of the transaction. Then if the seed does not meet the desired results, there is reliable evidence to show the seed's value.

The Seed Testing Laboratory, University Farm, St. Paul, Minnesota, will test seeds free of charge as per the provisions of the Pure Seeds Act. In case of any doubt, or any difficulty with seeds, notify the State Department of Agriculture, Dairy and Food. Also notify the Department concerning any regularities, unlabeled seeds, etc.

Better Service From Changed Train Schedule

The new service being offered by the Great Northern R. R. by the change in the train schedule of the north-bound train was reported to be very satisfactory by the local agent. The change from noon arrival of the train to the ten o'clock has made it possible for freight leaving all centers in the state to arrive here the following day, the agent stated. This change went into effect Monday morning.

Stephen Check Artist Arrested in Roseau Co.

During the past week, according to word received here, bogus check artists have been operating in Stephen and vicinity cashing five checks. The method used in Stephen was somewhat different than that used while similar nefarious business was being conducted here a few weeks ago. Names of persons residing in Stephen were used on the checks and because they were known to be in good standing with the local bank the checks aroused no suspicion at first. Checks cashed were endorsed by Pete Thompson and E. R. Howard, neither of those men being known to Stephen merchants.

Word was received at the Pennington county sheriff's office on Wednesday from the Marshall county Sheriff that a man had been picked up in Roseau county and turned over to him, who is said to be the passer of the checks. This man, Sheriff Rambeck states, is not one of those who operated here.

GOV. VETOES OMNIBUS BILL WED. EVENING

Minnesota Drivers License Div. to be Discontinued, Says Star Report

By L. F. Harris

Running into the closing minutes of the session, the Minnesota legislature was confronted with the problem of pasing many bills of more or less importance which it did not have the necessary time to act on. With final adjournment set for mid-night last night, under the constitution of the state, the legislature covered the clocks and prepared to work all night Wednesday and part of Thursday morning trying to get through some legislation that had to be acted upon.

Frazier-Lemke Bill Reported Favorably Out of Agri. Com.

Although nothing much was mentioned about it in the metropolitan newspapers, the heavily supported Frazier-Lemke Farm Refinancing Bill has been reported out favorably by the House Committee on Agriculture. The vote was said to be 14 to 7 with four members absent who would have boted for the bill. However, it still is necessary that the Rules Committee take favorable action before it is reported out to the House. This Committee, controlled by conservatives and reactionaries, will "pigeon-hole" or "stall" the measure and even if it is reported out later it will be too late for any favorable action on it this session. And next session the whole job will have to be done over again.

E. M. Bennes to Attend Annual Co. Convention

E. M. Bennes, of this city, representative of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company, was informed by his home office today that he is one of the honor salesmen invited to the company's 30th annual convention. This convention trip will include a visit to the company's office in Fort Wayne, Indiana, followed by a five day cruise of the Great Lakes.

Mr. Bennes's distinction of honor man came as a result of his outstanding sales record during the past year. He is one of a group of 160 star salesmen who will take the convention trip this summer.

Elaborate Array of Attractive Awards Offered Candidates in Circulation Drive

Campaign Opens Today and Will Close on Saturday June 22, 1935

Sixteen hundred and fifty dollars in cash prizes, or the first and second prizes by your choice of any one of five new 1935 cars as advertised, plus several hundred dollars in cash commission is offered to people who within the next eight weeks will take subscriptions to The Thief River Falls Forum. Only those residing in Thief River Falls or in the Thief River Falls trade territory can take part in this contest. The campaign opens today and will close on Saturday, June 22nd.

It is the hope of the publisher to have every home in Thief River Falls and in Thief River Falls trade territory as a subscriber and Good Will Booster for the Forum, and with this purpose in mind we are offering this campaign with a very attractive cash offer to those who are willing to do a little work during the next few weeks.

The prizes selected for the awards are as follows:

FIRST GRAND PRIZE—$700.00 in cash, or, your choice of three cars, valued at $800.00 to $900.00.

SECOND GRAND PRIZE—$500.00 in cash, or, your choice of three cars, valued at more than $600.00.

THIRD GRAND PRIZE—$300.00 in cash.

FOURTH PRIZE—$100 in cash.

FIFTH PRIZE—$50.00 in cash.

Five prizes in all, and twenty per cent commission paid daily in cash to all workers. One or more of the grand prizes must be awarded in each of the two districts.

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The Good Will Campaign is a business proposition. The Forum wants the largest subscription list of any weekly newspaper in northwestern Minnesota, and is ready and willing to generously raward those who will become "Good Will Boosters" for the Forum.

Every one in this territory should appreciate the offer, this large amount of money to be paid out in cash prizes and commissions is all paid to local people. All those who take an active part in the contest will profit. They will be paid in cash, if they chose cash, for the part they take, and all have the same opportunity. The subscriber will profit, this campaign is an effort, on the part of the publisher, to make the Forum a bigger and better newspaper, that should interest all, so get back of this drive and put it over in a big way. The merchant, or advertiser, will profit; the more readers a newspaper has, the more value advertising has. A good local newspaper means a good town; a town can be judged by the newspaper it supports.

We invite each and every one of you to take part in this drive, and to share in the big cash awards and cash commissions. Non-subscribers are equally invited to take part. The only requirement is a part of your spare time. The opportunity is yours to earn a new car worth more than $800.00, or, $700.00 in cash. "A year's wages for many" all for eight weeks part time work. Get busy now, don't lose any time, don't wait and let someone else get out ahead of you; first out, first served.

June 22nd is not far off and on the afternoon of that day this campaign will come to a close. There will be several lucky people in this territory; one of them can be you. Just say, here goes to win" and carry out that decision. That is the spirit that DOES win. This campaign is no gamble on your part. All persons taking part will be paid in proportion to what they do. If you have the ambition to get out and do a little Good Will Boosting, you can make more money through this campaign than is possible in any other way for eight weeks work.

Come to the Forum office and talk the matter over with the campaign manager.

WHO CAN ENTER

Any man, woman, boy or girl can enter the Good Will campaign, and become a member of the Good Will Brigade and compete for the prizes. There is no entrance fee or charges. You need not even be a subscriber to The Forum to enter your name as an enrolled worker, and once enrolled you have the opportunity to secure one of these fine prizes.

An entry blank will be found on the inside double page ad in this issue. Clip it, fill it out, and bring it to the Forum office.

3,216 Rabbits Killed During Goodridge Hunt

A very successful rabbit hunt was conducted by the Goodridge Hunt Club last Sunday, April 21, according to word received here. Two teams, headed by V. McLeod, and R. McDonald, reported a total of 3, 216 rabbits destroyed during the day.

2,829 brush or snowshoe rabbits were reported dead and 387 jack rabbits were listed as casualties in the hunt to exterminate as many of the rodents as posisble. It was decided, following the hunt, to send a delegation to the next meeting of the county board to demand that a bounty be paid on gophers.

120,000 Kilowatts Generated by Water, 62,000 During '34

Unlike last year the water level is not affected very much by the use of the water-wheel for generating electric current, O. Legvold, superintendent of the power plant stated today.

During the year of 1934 the total amount of electricity generated by the water-wheel was 62,000 kilowatt hours as compared with 120,000 already generated this year, according to Mr. Legvold. Last Sunday the water-wheel was put in operation with the water level reading 15 feet at the power house and after shutting off the level read 14 feet. Last year after using the water-wheel for generating current at about the same time, chronologically, the water level dropped and stayed down most of the year.

The large 750 horse-power engine has been shut-off for the past few days while repair work was being done on it, but it is now ready for use, the seperintendent stated.

Tele. Co. Will Broadcast Famous 'Phone Messages

Local radio listeners will hear telephone conservations from the four corners of the United States in a program presented over the Columbia network Sunday, April 28 from 5 to 6 p. m., Central Standard Time. This program will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, parent company of the Bell System of which the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company is a part.

This anniversary broadcast will be of particular interest to the 250,000 employees and 75,000 stockholders of the Bell system, besides all other users of telephone service, A. J. Rau, local manager, says.

Ted Husing, ace radio reporter of news and special events, will announce and serve as master-of-ceremonies for the program, which will open with four successive long distance calls to telephone officials at San Diego, Cal Eastport, Maine; Bellingham, Washington; Key West, Florida.

Boy Scouts to Conduct Orange Sale Saturday

The Boy Scouts of this city will conduct an Orange Sale all day Saturday April 27, Clarence Sande, scoutmaster, said today. Each person buying an orange will receive a ribbon to designate those who have helped boost the sale. The purpose of this sale is to raise funds to send two Boy Scout representatives to the National Scout Jamboree in Washington, D. C., August 21-30. The winner will be chosen on competitive merit basis, and the two sent to represent the local group at the Jamboree must be First Class Scouts, Mr. Sande said.

CIRCULATION: ONE

There is a newspaper, published in the Kulsku plains of Asiatic Russia, whose net sales are one. The Gazetta Tundri—newspaper of the plains—is written entirely by hand. The single copy is sent to every subscriber in the different villages in turn, the last reader in any particular village being responsible for its safe delivery to the first subscriber in the next village.—London Tid-Bits.

C. G. Steen Co., of G. F. Gets Contract for P. O. For Bid of $36,236.00

Carl G. Steen Company of Grand Forks, N. D., have received the contract for the construction of the new postoffice to be built in this city during the coming summer and winter. The bid accepted by the government which was submitted by this company was $36,236.00, which will furnish all labor, material and all other work required on this job.

According to the letter received by Mr. Anderson, postmaster here, the contractor is allowed 300 days to complete the work after it has been started.

The letter further states that appropriations for the construction will come from the National Industrial Recovery Department and that construction is likely to start within a few weeks.

The new building will be built on the southwest corner of the intersection of LaBree Avenue and Second Street North.

DISTRICT MUSIC MEET TO BRING 700 MUSICIANS

Thirteen Schools Will Enter Participants in Annual Event

The annual 10th district Music contest of the Minnesota High School Music League will be held in this city next Saturday afternoon and evening.

Approximately 700 contestants from thirteen towns will take part in the contest. Groups of singers from Warren, Crookston, E. G. Forks, T. R. Falls, Newfolden, Fosston, Bagley, Alvarado, Mentor, Fisher, Hallock, Beltrami and Stephen will take part, according to Mr. Bye superintendent of schools.

S. P. Orwell will be in charge of the T. R. Falls entrants in the instrumental music and Miss Irma Springen will direct the vocal entrants of the local high school. Judges selected for the contest are William McPhail, of the McPhail School of Music, Minneapolis, judge of voice; and Gerald V. Prescott, director of the University of Minnesota band, will judge instrumental music.

The evening program will consist of a cantata, "The Erl-King's Daughter," by Niels W. Gade, with Wm. McPhail as guest conductor. The cantata will be presented by a group of people from various cities in the northwest with the principal parts being taken by Helen deLisle Evans, soprano, of Grand Forks, as the Erl-King's daughter; A. V. Grinley, baritone, of the U. of No. Dak. as Sir Olaf; Agnes Helen Jorgenson Kise, contralto, of Moorhead, as the Mother; and a group of girls selected from Crookston, E. G. Forks and T. R. Falls' glee clubs will be members of the group known as the Erl Maidens. The Erl Maidens from this city will be Phyllis Norbeck, Arnhild Fjelstad and Helen Rice.

Mrs. Thelma Holm Erickson and Mrs. Doris Halverson Pope of this city will be accompanists at two pianos and a concert band of twenty pieces will be selected from Northwest cities. 283 voices will take part in the chorus of the cantata.

Complete program will be found on page five.

RESULT OF REPEAL ALARMS LIQUOR MEN

Increase of Drunkenness Will "Kill the Goose that Lays the Golden Egg"

By W. C. Calderwood

The more intelligent and responsible liquor dealers and manufacturers are becoming alarmed over the shocking increase in drunkenness throughout the nation since repeal and the rapid rise of those evils that are the inescapable results of drinking The motive back of the recently organized Retail Wine and Liquor Guild is quite frankly admitted to be the fear that a continuation of the evils of drinking will "kill the goose that lays the golden egg," as Col. Ralph C. Tobin, the head of the Guild puts it. 'No one knows this," Col. Tobin continues, "better than the larger dealers, who fully realize that unless the reputable liquor dealers present a united front against the bootlegger and the irresponsible shoestring liquor salesman, the malpractices of the few are going to reflect disastrously upon the business of the many."

Another similar organization, the Council of Moderation, Inc., which claims among its sponsors such leaders as Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, the president of Columbia University; Col. Theodore Roosevelt, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and other prominent repeal leaders, both men and women, lays greater stress upon the personal and social havoc of the use of alcohol.

To the innocent onlooker, the task that these organizations are setting for themselves seems quixotic. There are two vital facts which cannot be overlooked in any sane attempt to appraise the problem of moderation.

The first is that alcohol taken into the human system creates a physical effect that is identically the same whether it is sold by a dirty, blear-eyed barman in a hell-hole of the gehenna of the slum districts or ladeled out amid the silk curtains, persian rugs, and mahogany furniture of a palace of fashion by the dainty fingers of a society belle.

The other appalling fact is that there are more than 40,000 licensed retail dealers in alcoholic beverages in the U. S., and probably even a larger number of bootleggers and blindpiggers, and out of that total number perhaps not 3 per cent belong to that class of dealers to which Col. Tobin refers.

Prohibition was hard to enforce. But the evidence is indisputable that it is far harder to enforce regulation.

Expect to Treble the Relief Garden Output

Sufficient quality seed from Minnesota growers to start over 50,000 subsistence gardens, or almost three times the number planted last year, is being shipped out to the various county relief workers for free distribution to clients, it is announced by O. A. Dahlberg, garden supervisor, social service division, Minnesota SERA.

Every case in towns of 5,000 or less, may have a garden. The value of the yield will not effect the budget deficiency. The gardeners are urged to store any surplus for use next winter. Canning centers will be established in every county in the fall.

Last year, according to the supervisor, the relief garden projects made possible the preservation of a million and a half cans of vegetables. The total output this season may approach $5,000,000 in value.

GERMANY'S CULTURAL SHAME

Berlin (TIS)—The University of Berlin has been blessed with a new rector, who is a true product of azism.

The new dictatorial ruler of Germany's leading university, a 37-year-old veterinarian, Dr. Wilhelm Kruger, is a protege of the Sazi Ministry of Education, and has no qualilcations whatever, except his brown shirt and his doubtful fame as a leader in the Nazi battle for the conquest of the German uiversities. Having been a complete failure in his profession, he immigrated in 1923 to the United States, where his success was even less pronounced. After working in a number of factories, he returned to Germany and was appointed assistant in a veterinary institute.

FARM EXPORTS AT LOW LEVEL

American Farm exports in January dwindled to the lowest point in twenty years, according to a report just issued by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The value of all farm exports in January totaled $661,009,000 compared to $71,780,000 in January, 1934. and $370,965,000 in January 1920 and $163,710,000 during January 1915. In fact, Uncle Sam, in four of the last five years, imported more foodstuffs than he exported —a historic shift in position. This would give at least one more reason for the surplus in this country and the low prices of agricultural products.

N. W. Horticulturist Urges Beautification Programs by Cities

Cities and towns throughotu the Red River Valley are being urged by T. M. McCall, Northwest School and Station horticulturist, to formulate definite long time civic beautification programs with a view, not only of obtaining the greatest returns from temporary relief labor, but to insure maximum beautification results. Such projects may include street tree planting and maintenance, improvements of parks and waterfronts.

Many of the fast growing trees, such as box elder, cottonwood, and willow, which were used as street trees in the original planting of town sites are now past maturity and should be replaced with more permanent species. These should include the American elm, green ash, hackberry, baswood, or tree type Chinese elm. Evergreens do not make desirable street trees. Since but few cities have ordinances regarding species to use, it is highly desirable for property owners to cooperate with city officials.

Permanent trees should have the right of way which means that it may be necessary to move pole lines, or if this is not possible, only medium height trees such as Mountain Ash should be planted. Street trees should be allowed to develop their full form and should not be dehorned or topped to accommodate telephone lines. The chief pruning necessary for street trees consists of starting a central leader and then cutting off low branches which interfere with traffic. According to Professor, McCall, permanent trees of the larger growing species should be spaced from thirty to forty feet apart in line of row, while smaller trees such as Mountain Ash and Chinese elm may be planted from 25 to 30 feet apart.

FASCIST HANDS ACROSS THE SEAS

Washington, D. C. (TIS)—A hint contained recently in the Hearst newspapers indicates clearly the extent of the already existing collaboration between anti-democratic pro-Fascist elements in America and Nazism in Germany.

According to press reports, negotiations are at present caried on in Washington, which, if successful, will lead to a regular exchange of broadcasts between the German and American radio networks. Behind these negotiations it is openly stated, stands the German desire to neutralize as far as posisble hostile sentiment in America against the Nazi dictatorship, and to spread German propaganda.

REGIONAL MEETINGS TO BE HEID IN MAY

Plans are under way for the holding of regional highway safety meetings in five points strategically located throughout the state. Dates and places have not as yet been definitely determined. Present indications are all five meetings will be held during the first three weeks of May. Programs will take the form of round table discussions. No set "talks" will be scheduled. Complete details will be announced soon by Chairman A. V. Rohweder.

Price Levels and Wage Levels

By A. F. Whitney, President
Brotherhood of R. R. Trainmen

Recently the President of the United States issued a statement asserting that prices must rise. His efforts for some time, particularly with reference to our monetary system, have been to raise price levels. The 1926 price level is generally ragarded as the goal.

One of the principal arguments against shorter work hours, without reduction in wages, is that such a program would raise prices and thereby curtail demand and result in reduced employment rather than increased employment. If the shorter work week without reduction in wages would raise prices, then it would seem that the President should favor such a program, in view of his determination to raise prices, for in addition to receiving his price objective, shorter work hours would also achieve the objective of distributing wealth and increasing employment. However, opponents of shorter work hours are opposed to this method of raising prices on the ground that such a program would "increase production costs," of which the wages of labor are an important part. Thus, those who oppose shorter work hours without reduction in pay, whether consciously or otherwise, really oppose wealth distribution, increased employment and a return of general prosperity. The conclusion is inevitable, therefore, that those who are favoring increased prices and at the same time opposing the shorter work hours' program are really asking the consumers to pay higher prices in order to bring about greater profits.

Without making idle statements to the effect that wealth must be distributed, let us examine the facts to determine whether greater profits or wages and humanity should be the dominating consideration. Has wealth been distributed thus far under the New Deal to the extent that the national leadership should oppose shorter work hours without reduction in pay and concentrate its efforts on raising the price levels in order to increase profits? In 1933, the number of those receiving million dollar, or greater, annual incomes more than doubled. According to recent figures, in our effort to get back to 1929 prosperity, we have traveled 54 per cent of the way in production, but we have traveled only 21 per cent of the way in payroll recovery, 18.2 per cent of the way in restoring wages, and, most revealing of all, we have traveled only 28. 2 per cent of the road toward reemploying workers. In other words, while production has increased to 54 per cent of the 1929 levels, reemployment has increased only 28.2 per cent. This shows, not in terms of ballyhoo or idle mouthings to the effect that "to have more we must produce more," but, by actual facts concerning our economic system, it proves the ever-increasing productivity of labor. It also proves that we shall never be able to reemploy our millions unless we adopt a program of shorter work hours and maintain and increase purchasing power by maintaining and increasing present wage levels.

On the basis of 1926 levels, if we assume that a worker was then getting $100 per month and that a stock and bondholder was getting $100 per month in dividends and interest, the need for distribution of wealth, rather than continuing to increase profits, becomes even more apparent and imperative. The worker who was getting $100 in 1926 received only $60 in wages in 1934, but the security holder, in 1934, received $150 as compared with the 1926 level. In other words, on the basis of 1926 standards, as compared with 1934, the worker had lost 40 per cent of his income, while the security holder had gained 50 per cent. It is really amazing that those who oppose shorter work hours are able to blind the public to these indisputable facts and favor an increase in price levels with the obvious result of increased profits to the few. Wages come out of production costs, and if prices are to be raised and shorter work hours denied on the grounds that they would increase production costs, increased profits and an even greater concentration of wealth must be the obvious results.

To be sure, the price levels of farm commodities should be increased, but again political and industrial leaders are fighting the farmers' just demands for, not profits, but merely for the cost of production. If these leaders really favored increases in price levels for the purposes of distributing the nation's income, then they would favor the shorter work hours' program and the farmers' cost of production program. How can such a position be sustained in view of the fact that, as compared with 1926, profits gained 50 per cent in 1934 while workers' incomes diminished 40 per cent?

Through the pages of this magazine, and in various public utterances, I have tried to overcome some of the propaganda which holds that we can never have economic recovery until the durable goods industries recover. For the most part, the savings from our national income are the source that feeds the durable goods industries. The worker who saves $100 and buys corporation securities with it is enabling that corporation to build a new locomotive, a new factory, or purchase new tools, machinery, or other items that fall within the durable goods category. Obviously, the durable goods industry has suffered more during the depression than the consumable goods industry, because when the people had scarcely enough with which to buy their food and clothing (consumable goods), it could not be expected that their sadly depleted incomes would be used to create savings to build additional locomotives, factories and machinery, when we already had such a quantity of these durable goods as could produce more than the people could buy with their sadly reduced incomes.

Press items of February 24, 1935, revealed that the Brookings Institution, an organization devoted to the interests of big business and which is opposing the shorter work day program, has made a report which sustains my views regarding the ridiculousness of talking about restoring durable goods industries when people have barely enough income to buy the consumable goods that are necessary to sustain human life. According to press reports, the Brookings Institution has now belatedly discovered that money which goes into savings is not immediately spent for consumption and that the rapid growth of savings in the 1920's resulted in too much money going into speculation and not enough into actual buying of goods.

The Brookings Institution found that the savings which went into expansion of plant and other physical facilities became so great that there was too much of the national income going into these sources and not enough into the purchase of radios, automobiles, furniture, etc., which, latter purchases keep the physical equipment of our productive plant busy. Their report disputed the theory now strongly supported by most industrialists, that business expansion begins with expansion of capital goods. It accepted the view, long held by many of us, that, contrary to this thought, such expansion of productive facilities begins after the people begin to buy. In other words, Henry Ford will not build additional factories or buy additional machines (durable goods) with which to make Ford cars until the people begin to demand more Ford cars than he is now capable of producing.

These facts all support the vital necessity for shorter work hours without reduction in present basic wages as the only means of distributing wealth, of restoring activity to the durable goods industries, and of giving employment to the millions of unemployed. So long as we refuse to recognize these simple facts, we shall continue to witness the increased productivity of labor, which results in the increase of production and profits out of all proportion to the increase in re-emplyment and payrolls.

It is important to consider that the full increase in production costs, that would arise from the shorter day without reduction in pay, would go directly into increased purchasing power. Consequently, such increase in production costs, instead of increasing profits and further concentrating wealth, would bring about the much needed purchasing power, distribute wealth, and restore profitable markets. By raising price levels through adoption of shorter work days, not only would wealth be distributed, but industry would be benefitted by the fact that the entire amount of increased production costs would serve to create profitable markets. Industry would also benefit from the indisputable increase in labor efficiency that is inherent in the shorter work day.

The consuming public should thoroughly understand that those who are endeavoring to increase prices, and at the same time are opposing the shorter hours' program on the grounds that it will "increase production costs," are simply arguing for nothing more than increased profits, notwithstanding the fact that in 1934 profits increased to the amazing extent of 150 per cent, while wages decreased to 60 per cent of the 1926 levels. Social reformers and industrial and political leaders had better ponder these facts before they continue on their reckless way of dealing with the effects and ignoring the causes of the great economic catastrophe that makes millions of people suffer under a condition of potential plenty.

CALLING A SPADE A SPADE

Hamburg (TIS)—The fight between the different brands of Fascism is in full swing, if one may judge from the compliments exchanged between the leading German and Italian newspapers.

Mussolini's newspaper, "Gazetta de Popolo" has been banned from the Reich for an article denouncing Germany's aspirations in the East and her war tendencies. The "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung," which is considered the mouthpiece of the German foreign office, has answered with an article appropriately entitled "With Whom Does Italy Think She Is AT War?" The obviously officially inspired article brands the Italian Fascist regime as an economic failure and describes the Italian people as restless. Accurately gauging conditions in Italy, the article states that Mussolini merely wants to distract the Italian people's attention from increasing internal difficulties.

The same observations so well applied to Italy also hold true, of course, for Germany.

IS IT A CONFESSION?

In an editorial discussing the proposal to reduce the size of the legislature our contemporary said last week: it "would have some merit if by reducing the size we could improve the quality. But there is no reason to believe that the quality would be improved by a mere reduction in number." From which we would infer that "Brother Bill" feels that the timber of our legislators is of inferior quality. In this view we of course heartily agree, and we wonder if his statement is a confession that he was wrong again last election. We had expected him to maintain that the present legislature is of the highest possible quality since it is just what he asked for. His bosom pals have a big majority in both houses.

This district had the opportunity to improve the average intelligence rating of both houses of the legislature considerable in the last election, but thanks to The Times and those who still believe all they read in it our district contributed in a high degree to the low average.

And so, while we agree with "Brother Bill," we also admit we had not expected his implied confession. It just goes to show that you can never tell which way one of these "Conservative" editors are going to jump.

FINDING AMMUNITION IN THE GARBAGE CAN

The Sherburn-Advance-Standard, edited by our former townsman Scott Laird, is one of those we some times refer to as a "rock-ribbed Republican" paper. To believe in the capiptalist system and espouse its continuance is of course his privilege as an American citizen, and while we do not agree with his political philosophy, we should be among the first to defend his right to disagree with the majority of the people who have quite apparently come to the conclusion that a new social order is necessary. However, Mr. Laird also leans over backwards to edit a very "Christian" newspaper, and carries above his editorial column each week a quotation from the scriptures, which of course, is very laudable.

It is therefore, may we say, somewhat disconcerting? to find that when he wishes to find something to smear the Farmer-Labor administration with he does not hesitate to reprint from the Mid-West American, the filthiest scandal sheet in the state. Apparently the most lily-white among the Republicans are not too fastidious in their choice of material if it serves their political purposes.

INSISTING ON THEIR RIGHTS

We just can't agree with the Minnesota Leader and other Farmer-Labor papers when they "pan" the State Senate for refusing to confirm Governor Olson's appointments of Mrs. Le Sueur and Miss Rood as members of the State Board of Education because they are considered radical. Neither can we get all "het up" because the irate Mr. Walgreen, chain drug store magnate, took his daughter out of Chicago University because she was learning to be "radical." After all, we must remember that as Villard, editor of the Nation says, "we are living in a Democracy and they have a perfect right to make themselves ridiculous."

TO SAVE CAPITALISM WE MUST HAVE BIGGER AND BETTER EARTHQUAKES

The authors of "The Economic Consequences of the New Deal," say in the closing chapter of the book: "Nothing has been accomplished by the New Deal that could not have been done much quicker and more effectively by an earthquake." Or words to that effect. And, inasmuch as the New Deal is frankly and outspokenly an attempt to perpetuate the present economic system by providing a scarcity, we must admit that the authors are right in their premise.

Citing as an instance what was probably the greatest catastrophe in the history of the United States, the San Francisco earthquake: it created an enormous amount of work at good wages in that region rebuilding the city. From the point of view of modern Democratic reasoning it was a fine thing for the country because it created a splendid scarcity and did it quickly. Of course the loss of life was deplorable, but so is the loss of life which results from a year of depression, because we have too much of everything.

Mother Earth seems to favor the Japanese particularly in this earthquake business. Just about the time she thinks she will have to get into a war to reduce the population and provide a scarcity, Earth shakes herself and besides leveling a lot of building with the ground, obligingly kills off a few thousand Japs and everybody is busy and happy for a while until the market of both is glutted again.

Of course we still maintain that there is a possibility of so planning our economic house that there can be a plenty of everything without destroying it to get enough, but until enough people agree with us to elect a government that will try it out, we would suggest that President and his co-defenders of the profit system arrange for a nice healthy earthquake, say about every four or five years. It should be a wonderful stabilizer for the Capitalistic System.

A SHORTAGE OF CANNON FODDER

A hundred and fifty thousand students in the nation's universities and colleges left classes and demonstrated against war with a nation-wide strike last week, "The Progressive," Progressive Party official organ published at Madison, Wisconsin, stated in its isue of Saturday. A solemn pledge "that we will not support the government of the United States in any war it may conduct" was carried to the White House by representatives of the strikers the Progressive says.

We heartily applaud the student, but our heart goes out in sympathy for the poor, abused war-mongers and profit-takers. It seems that it is going to be harder and harder to extract an honest dollar from the ungrateful population. What with the schools going Communist, the people going Bolshevik, the clergy going Socialist, congress going Maverick, business going haywire and the counrty going to the dogs, it seems likely that Special Privilege will have to recruit its cannon fodder for the next war from the United States Chamber of Commerce, the D. A. R., and the San Francisco Red Squad.

Or they could call in Buck Rogers with a couple of million robots. What a "rattling" good army that would make.

NOT IN THE PARADE
(Mineapolis Labor Review)

Army Day saw the government in many cities parading its complete war equipment. Cannon, tanks, machine guns, armed men with every button shined and in the exact spot the military code demands, mounted men with sabres held just as the war lords decree, and everywhere youth.

It is on youth the cannon best enjoys to appease its appetite with cannibalistic feasts.

Generals looked their sternest. Privates strutted their proudest.

Here was a warning to foreign capitalistic foes to beware, and to American unemployed to be satisfied with the crumbs they receive, to American workers to be submissive.

Capitalism's forces, ready to be used against the unemployed, against the organized workers, as they were against those who had been soldiers when there was fighting to do but who were shot down when they demanded a bonus. Armed might was on parade.

News dispatches inferred that at least at the national capitol there was not much enthusiasm by onlookers along the line of march. They were described as watching the procession with tight lips and clenched fists.

Anyway, militarism, in all its giddy, gaudy show, was on parade.

War, itself, was not in the parade. Only the show and pretense, the gold braid and spectacularness that leads men to the cannon mouth.

For instance, there were no train loads of wounded and dying, trains the deathly stench of which could be smelled for miles, and the dying, anguishing cries of the huddled passengers heard at great distances. This was not in the parade.

There was not present the millions of orphans, the millions of widows, the millions of mothers left in anguish when millions of sons and fathers met death on the battlefields.

Not in the parade the churches destroyed on both sides of the lines by armies, destruction mad.

Nor were there the shell-shocked men who, in padded-cell hospitals, go to the verge of insanity when there is a thunder storm, for it makes them live over again the hell from which they came more dead than alive.

Not there were what remains in hospitals of those so shot away that what remains, though still alive, is carried around in a basket.

Nothing to recall the drunken duke capitalism blamed for the last war was in the procession.

Nothing to recall those men who sit now, forever in darkness until death calls, but who see plainer now than in the days when they marched so proudly to military tunes, and before their eyes were shot out.

Those scenes where mothers and dear ones watched the newspaper bulletins for the casualty lists. Saw a name flashed. Pressed a handkerchief to their eyes, became hysterical, or collapsed when they knew that on some far away battlefield laid the ramains of the boy they had borne, coddled in their arms, watched grow to manhood.

Neither was there anything to signify that there is an arrangement between armies, pretty well adhered to, that prevents any attacks being made on the headquarters of generals.

There was nothing to arouse memories of the 38,000 per cent the Duponts made over here during the war while the boys died over there.

Why not parade the truth on Army Day?

Truth and all those realistic horrors of war to which we have alluded were not in the parade.

THE HOME OWNER AND THE SALES TAX
(The Tax Policy League)

The general sales tax has been widely heralded as a device for saving homes. Articles in the press and periodicals have abounded with "Let the Sales Tax Abolish Tax Sales," and other catch phrases which, like so many slogans, have been more striking than accurate.

The small home owner who votes for a sales tax as a relief to real estate is in for a rude awakening . . . Taxpayers with homes worth from $2,000 to $4,000 and with incomes ranging from $1,000 to $2,000 would find that they would have to pay on the sales tax about twice as much as they saved on the real estate tax. . . .

The home owner's sales tax is paid out of the same pocket from which his property tax is paid . . If it is the lump sum nature of payment that makes the latter so burdensome, then more genuine relief can be afforded the small home owner by making it possible to pay his real estate tax in installments.

SHARE THE INCOME
(Blooming Prairie Times)

When Senator Huey Long talks about sharing the wealth he seems to assume that wealth is entirely in the form of money. In this he is mistaken, of course. Wealth is represented by stocks, bonds, investments in real estate, factories, homes, and thousands of other material things.

To share the nation's wealth equally is practically impossible and impractical.

To share the nation's income is more sensible and practical. As Senator Norris so ably pointed out in a speech last month there is something radically wrong in a nation when a few people have so much and so many people have so little. Last year 500 people in the United States made a total net income of $5,000,000,000 which is more than the market value of all the crops two million farmers were able to produce in one year.

What is the answer?

The answer is heavy inheritance taxes which take a heavy part of this wealth upon the death of the owner, and heavy income taxes which distributes the income of the nation properly. When the government collects these taxes it is then able to reduce the heavy tax burden of the average man who is making little or no income.

"Sharing the wealth" programs are impossible to realize but sharing the national income is easily practical.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

THE PROFIT MOTIVE

Much is being said about the profit motive in intoxicating liquors. One very prominent citizen of the American republic has presented at length suggestions intended to develop the idea that profit in liquor is the vital factor in the liquor problem.

There can be no reasonable doubt of the basic fact that if the motive of profit were eliminated from every phase of the alcohol problem, that problem would be far more easily solved. The profit motive in fact presented one of the most difficult obstacles in the whole history of the American temperance reform. It furnishes the principal incentive for the forces which have actively aligned themselves on the side of the liquor.

It must be recognized, however, that the only hope of helping to solve the alcohol problem by destroying profit in beverage alcohol lies in elimination and not in the mere shifting of profit from one group to another or even the shifting of profit from individuals and corporations to the government. There is much evidence to indicate that where the profit goes to the government or is divided between the government and one particular class of private interests, the problem of alcoholism is made more difficult and becomes more complicated than if profit inured to individuals or corporations, unsatisfactory and serious as that situation may be.

Numerous efforts by cities and by local and state governments throughout the world have been directed at different times during the last fifty years toward the elimination of profit from liquor. The Gothenburg system, the Swedish system, later the Bratt system, the several Canadian provincial systems, the South Carolina state dispensary system, and similar dispensary systems in other sections of the United States during the latter part of the nineteenth century, have all been attempted with strong appeals to reason by virtue of the promise for each of these systems that it would do away with the profit motive. Theoretically this promise is alluring but the practical difficulty with every such system that has been put into operation anywhere and especially with such systems as have been attempted under a form of government such as that in which American people live, has been that instead of eliminating profit from liquor, the profit motive has been actually intensified by reason of the most unexpected and yet inevitable tendency toward the corruption of government, thus making it possible for profit, eliminated on the face of the system, to trickle down through political and governmental machinery until at last, in devious ways, it not only reaches the private and corporation pockets and complicates the alcohol problem, but also creates even more serious other problems.—Ernest H. Cherirngton, (American Issue'.

The Farmers' Union at Washington

Washington, D. C., April 18.—The Juniors began their March to Washington, by visiting the college local in Fargo, North Dakota. From there, to St. Paul, where they visited the Farmers Union offices. In St. Paul, the group were shown Minnesota's capitol and were received by Governor Olson. That same evening a banquet, sponsored by the business activities of St. Paul, was given in Eau Claire, Wisconsin, where the Wisconsin Junior and leader joined the party. In Madison, Wisconsin, they were received by Governor LaFollette and were shown around the capitol building.

Along the trip many historical spots were visited, including the Gettysburg battle field. There the young people could review their history. They viewed the field just seventy years from the date of Lincoln's assassination. The drive into the nation's capitol was very beautiful. Early the next morning a general meeting with the committee was held and then a tour of the principal beauty spots of the city was begun. Our national Junior leader and the South Dakota junior joined us at this time.

This group in Washington has been highly honored by being able to meet many prominent men and women. Especially interesting and educational was the visit to the office of Mr. Jacob H. Taylor, Secretary of the Rural National Council for Preevntion of War. Miss Rankin spoke to the group and Mr. Taylor very kindly showed the group the room where the recording of material takes place. He expressed the hope that in time we could have records of material made and then have these same records used in our broadcasting stations as electrical transcription which would facilitate the work of our organization to a great extent.

One outstanding event was the visit to the White House, where we were shown through the spacious halls and marvelous rooms. The juniors all have a wonderful background for future work, since their educational tour of our Nation's Capitol.

An Imprtoant Day for Juniors

April 18 will be long remembered by the Juniors who made the Washington trip, and it is a day that should be remembered by the membership at large, as well. For the first time in history, a group of young people representing organized Agriculture were received by the administration's high officials. These Juniors are endorsing the legislation demanded by their organization, and their reception by government officials, cognizant of that fact, was a marked honor.

The Juniors and Mrs. Edwards were received by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in his private office in the beautiful Agriculture building at ten o'clock. Here they met Chester A. Davis, head of the AAA. M. W. Thatcher had made arrangements for these young people to meet the Secretary, and it was his efforts also which made possible the meeting with the President of the United States on the same morning.

Leaving the Department of Agriculture, Mr Davis took the party to the Executive offices in the White House. Here we passed through the numerous outer offices where swarms of newspaper men besieged Mr. Davis for an interview, through a number of inner offices until we reached the office of Louis McIntyre, secretary to the president. Here we waited for a short time, until it was time for our appointment. And while waiting, we were much interested in meeting Senator Marvin Jones, chairman of the Agriculture Committee. We also saw the blind Senator Gore of Oklahoma and would have met him, but we were called into the President's office at that moment.

In this beautiful room we were met by the Chief Executive of the nation with a beaming smile and a hearty handclasp. He asked us a few questions about the contest, urged us to have a good time in the city and bade us God speed.

The Strachey Affair

The Strachey debacle perhaps received more publicity than any other case of its kind in the U. S. A., not even barring the famed Count Karolyi and Satlakvala affairs. Certain it is, that Mademoiselle Frances Perkins will go down in history as the U. S. Secretary of Labor who prevented John Strachey from returning to his home in England by starting deportation proceedings against him. Doubtless this whole affair will be known as the choicest comedy of the century.

And now comes a man who patiently explains the joke and tells us why the quip was funny. William R. Castle, Jr., former United States Under Secretary of State, writes a syndicated article beneath these headlines: "Excluding or Muzzling Alien Agitators: The Recent To-Do Over Strachey. This Writer Feels, Has Only increased His Book Sales; How Should We Handle Aliens Who Abuse American Traditions of Free Speech?"

Castle says: "I believe profoundly that freedom of speech, liberty to pass on our thoughts and beliefs to others without restraint, is one of the most precious possessions . . . The state has the undoubted right, in times of great national danger to place certain restrictions on the privilege of free speech. But except at such periods, it should never restrain its citizens from the frankest criticisms of policies and people; should not even, in my opinion, unless they incite to murder or resort to libel, try to muzzle the fanatics who shout their absurd ideas on Boston Common and in other public places. The fool becomes important only when he is made a martyr."

I concur in all these things: that freedom of speech is a great thing; that the state has a right to restrict that freedom under abnormal circumstances; and that a fool becomes important only when he is made a martyr. What Mr. Castle is driving at, of course, is that the ideas of the John Stracheys are harmless and absurd, and that the John Stracheys are fools. But Mr. Castle's dictum about fools ought to work both ways, if it is a good one. Miss Perkins and Mr. Castle have put themselves in an unfavorable light—we must refrain from the expression "made fools of themselves." And Mr. Castle in this article tries to explain their predicament rationally,—which almost amounts to harboring a martyr-complex.

Mr. Castle, who should know, says of Mr. Strachey's books: "(The books) were circulating as freely as books do when they are neither very well known nor very interesting. If the books are dangerous, which I doubt, the government, by attacking the author, took the best possible method to increase their circulation. If they are not dangerous the author should never have been attacked."

This sounds like whistling in the dark to keep up courage. Mr. Castle knows the books are dangerous for what he stands for,—the profit system. Mr. Strachey has become the leading exponent of the theory of collectivism, as thousands of radicals and liberals in this country know.

But on the other hand: "The dissemination of radical and un-American ideas unsettles the very young and the weak-minded and in this way causes trouble for the State; but even so, it is not primarily this danger which should acuse the exclusion of aliens. We Americans are not going to crucify our country on some foreign madness. The main reason for exclusion is that these foreign propagandists demand all the priviveges of American citizens and are quite unwilling to assume any of the responsibilities."

As to this, I might take the easy way out and retort, "Who has unsettled the mind of whom?" But this gets us nowhere. The fact is, Mr. Castle is busy defending the present system, while Mr. Strachey is attacking—and recommending a system to replace it. The sum of the "foreign madness" is simply that we are told this present system is rotten, and should be replaced with a better If this be foreign madness, make the best of it.

Mr. Castle would be glad to have Mr. Strachey assume the responsibility of American citizenship—which leads us to believe that in that event, Mr. Castle would be willing to treat Mr. Strahcey as an American, and put him away in a cool place when his opinions became too uncomfortable.

A small-caliber radical alien is no problem at all—Uncle Sam benevolently washes his hands of him by delivering him to his enemies; but in the case of the John Stracheys, the situation is different. These men too often have the "gift of gab" and a keen sense of humor, which wreaks incalculable confusion upon the unimaginative, humorless government officials who try to stop them. In a way, such a contest is one-sided, the advantage is all with the one attacked. Especially in a country where freedom of speech is a tradition.

Titles and Schedules

A snappy feminine voice telephoned the theater and asked, "What picture are you showing this week?"

Replied the courteous voice at the other end, "It's 'One Hour Late.'"

"Don't get fresh with me," snapped the prospective customer, "I didn't ask for the schedule, I only asked for the title!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dodge — When your neighbor, Scrappy, treats you to one of his savage bursts of temper, you should heap coals of fire on his head.

Podge—I've tried that, but he's still as hot headed as ever.

There Must Have Been Several

A Civil war veteran had spent a week at a New York hotel. When he went to pay his bill the clerk asked:

"What was your rank?"

"Oh, just a private," the old soldier replied.

"Well, I won't charge you anything. You are the first private I ever met."

Towels Disappear

"What'll we put in that show window now?" asked the dresser.

"What's become of that stock of towels we displayed there?" asked the boss, right back at him.

"Completely wiped out," replied the window dresser.

The Unvalued Menu

"Your wife made a fine speech at the club luncheon."

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "But I long for the days when I could regard Henrietta's discourse as an exclusive privilege along with home cooking."

SLAVE HOLDER
(From St. Paul Daily News)

Editor, Daily News: One of the most vicious bills ever introduced in the Minnesota senate is rural credit bill S. F. No. 1325, introduced by Sen. Tungseth. This bill proposes in a polite way, to make slaves of all rural credit borrowers, with the conservator as the big slave holder.

Our prediction some time ago that the obstructionists in the senate would try to put something over on the rural credit borrowers that would be worse than nothing has more than been fulfilled.

Sen. Tungseth is evidently proud of his "baby," for he has or- This bill provides for reappraisal by a representative of the state tax commission and two farmers appointed by local county board and an interest rate of 3 per cent, giving those farmers that have lost their farms to the state 30 days exclusive right to make application to repurchase.

Let your senators and representatives "hear from home" in regard to these two bills.

The Friberg-Dixon bill is intended to help the farmer and at the same time put all these farms back on the tax list, while the Tungseth bill is evidently intended to do the opposite. —E. S.

It is claimed that this bill is good for the taxpayers, while the opposite is true. The Todd County Taxpayers' association, one of the strongest of its kind in the state, has gone on record condemning this vicious bill, while they have endorsed the Friberg-Dixon bill, H. F. No. 1237. This bill has also been introduced in the senate, senate file No. 1206.

FREE SPEECH AND CHANGING VIEWS
(Reprinted from Minneapolis Journal)

To the Editor of the Journal:

In a letter from Mr. Winters in The Journal of March 24 in regard to Strachey and communism it is asserted that Communism and sociation are treasonable in the U. S." This is an overstatement, to say the least. Of course, they are treasonable in the eyes of some people. Advocating the abolition of slavery was treason in the eyes of many people about the year 1850.

It is said that communists advocate the overthrow by force of the government. A few months ago a labor book store in Minneapolis was broken into under cover of night by so-called "vigilantes." The store was wrecked and its contents destroyed. The proprietor was conducting his business openly and lawfully; neither the federal, state, or city governments interfered with him. But the vigilantes did not hesitate to "overthrow by force" where they could not gain their ends by lawful and constitutional means.

Almost a century ago Elijah Lovejoy was killed by a mob in Alton, Illinois, because he dared to publish articles unfavorable to slavery. Today he is regarded as a martyr. His case is only one among many which might be mentioned to show that contemporary judgments are not infalilble. In former times men were persecuted on acocunt of their religion. Today, after centuries of turmoil, we have decided that, in the field of religion, it is the best policy to allow the people to worship as they please and preach what they have a mind to. Some day we may arrive at this wisdom in other fields.
